"In my first message to your honable body in January, 1915, I called attention to a serious defect of organization, in that we have no department for the formulation of definite policies with regard to the future growth and development of the city. City officials have about all they can do with the business on hand. There is need of a commission closely related to the government whose concern it shall be to keep an eye out and plan for the future. Furthermore, problems arise from time to time affecting the order, well being and convenience of the city, requiring study and investigation which may extend over a period longer than the term or terms of the Mayor and members of the Common Council for the time being. Improvements as to parks and street widening, concerning which I made special reference in my message last January, and such other matters as laying out of new streets and public places, public hygiene in the disposal of waste, public comfort stations, bill-boards and the regulation of advertising signs, these and other improvements especially as measured by modern standards of public convenience and beauty, to be made wisely must have reference to a well defined policy, based not alone on the demands of today but thought out carefully with reference to the Plainfield of the future. It would be inexcusable longer to neglect comprehensive city planning, which is the modern way because it is especially business-like. It would have saved us much vexation today if it had been at the outset an integral part of municipal administration.

"While we might proceed under Chapter 170, Laws of 1913, I am advised by counsel to the corporation that the city charter contains an entirely sufficient grant of authority for the enactment of an ordinance to create precisely the sort of commission we require, and to define its powers and duties; and as this is a matter of local concern, affecting solely the management of our internal affairs, it is clearly to our advantage to proceed by an ordinance framed for the precise object in view and which we may hereafter alter or repeal as our needs shall require, rather than pursuant to a statute which the legislature at any time may change without our consent and possibly to our disadvantage. It is fortunately a case where we may ourselves apply the principle of home rule without asking permission.

"I therefore now recommend the alternative plan to which I have referred in an earlier message, namely, the creation by ordinance of a commission to be known as the Research and Advisory Commission, consisting of five members who will serve without pay, but with authority vested in the Common Council to appropriate not exceeding $2,000 annually for clerical and other necessary expenses, such body to investigate and report to the Mayor and Common Council their recommendations with respect to any matter of public concern referred to them for expert study.

"I attach a form of ordinance, the scope and detail of which have been carefully considered, which has the approval of counsel to the corporation, both as to form and public policy; and I recommend its enactment as a forward step in municipal organization.

"LEIGHTON CALKINS,
"Mayor."

The fabrics, the dainty trimmings, the styles themselves, all are facinating. And the workmanship is of a high order. We'll be glad to have you see these new frocks.

COUNCIL ACTS ON STREET QUESTIONS

East Second and Clinton Place Are Accepted by the City.

The dedication of East Second street to Terrill road, and of Clinton place and Clinton alley, was last night accepted by resolution of the Common Council, and as soon as legal requirements can be satisfied the two streets will become public thoroughfares. The night of Monday, August 7, was set as the date of a public hearing on these two subjects.

Although a special session, much business was transacted at last night's meeting. Part of it was done in the mayor's office downstairs, where the Councilmen conferred until 8:35 before meeting and later took a recess of ten minutes for another conference there.

Chairman Hylan, of the streets committee, called back for re-reading on second reading an ordinance passed at the last meeting providing for the permanent improvement of certain streets in the city. He moved to strike out Clinton Place. This street was inserted by mistake, and after the ordinance was corrected it was passed on a second reading. Monday, July 10, was fixed as the date for a hearing on this subject.

Last night had been set for a hearing on the report of commissioners appointed to assess benefits and damages on Central avenue, but the hearing was postponed until Monday, July 3.

Chairman Cose, of the fire committee, reported that his committee had decided not to accept the proposition of Ryder and Graves for the care of the fire alarm system. Although this proposition was lower than the one now in effect, Mr. Cose explained that the committee was considering the advisability of creating the office of city electrician within the near future.

A map of the Bronson tract was filed with the city clerk.

The report of trustees of the Public Library showing that expenditures for the year were $12,227.89, and receipts, $21,040.77, leaving a balance of $8,812.88, was received and filed.

F. E. Folks sent a communication to the Council asking for a sewer at West Seventh and Clinton avenue, which was referred to the sewer committee.

John M. Nicholson, a non-resident who owns property at 1143 and 1147 South Second street, asked that a sewer be put in there as soon as possible, saying that he would gladly pay assessments for this improvement.

Corporation Counsel Reed submitted a communication in which he reported approval of the deed from John E. Dunn and wife, conveying a strip of land near Clinton place and West Third street for street purposes. Mr. Reed also reported on a request from the Jersey City department of revenue and finance that Plainfield join in an attempt to secure a special rate for electricity for municipal consumption. He suggested that no action be taken at this time.

An ordinance appropriating $125,215 for school purposes was passed on the first and second readings.

If you're young or feel young, you will be interested in our young men's clothes—if you prefer something more conservative, you can have that, too—styles that are absolutely correct.

Rothberg's Blue Serges

Most blue serges are sold on their past reputation—Rothberg's blue serges are sold on their present repute.

Our blue serges are not bluer than other blue serges, but the blue is confined to the fabric and does not encroach upon the fit.

They are blue in warp and wool, but not in workmanship, blue in texture, but not in tailoring, blue but not depressed.

In fact, a Rothberg blue serge is just the same as any other, but a shade above it in tailoring and cut.

A Rare Sale

In past June Sales have been included a large quantity of suits bought by us made up. This year most of the suits were made for us. A year ago we anticipated the present shortage of good woolens and dependable colorings. We bought when prices were 80 to 90 cents a yard lower than today's prices—some of the materials were acquired under the then market price. The suits were made up in between the work on our regular orders—made the same way as are all our suits—and thus cost us less.

All Fresh and New

The suits will be grouped according to sizes. Extra salesmen will be on hand to expedite speedy selection. Extra fitters and tailors have been engaged to insure proper fitting and early delivery.

This June Sale is the clothing event of the New York season. Men look forward to it.

3,100 of the Suits Were Made to Our Order by three of our regular manufacturers, by the tailors who make the suits for our regular stocks. The rest were made by six manufacturers in four cities, who know the high standard of merchandise in our June Sales, and how eagerly it is taken by our customers, and who wish to be represented in the Sale.

There are—
92 Patterns at $23.50
44 Patterns at $18.50

Blue serges at each price
400 suits partially silk lined

There are blues and blacks with stripes, gray effects, tan effects, checks, a brown or two; patterns that young men like; and patterns that appeal to the man who prefers modest dark mixtures. These fabrics come from the best American mills. The suits are cut in to suit the varying requirements of the young and the conservative.

The Suits at $13.50 and $15.50

include virtually everything a man could wish for the matter of color—excepting black. Blue serges, grays, browns; blue flannels; stripes checks, mixtures.

Made up in 5 models for young men—2 and 3-button soft roll fitted coats, with peak and round lapels, some cuff sleeves, some patch pockets, some pinch-backs, one conservative model, and one semi-conservative, with lapels soft rolling to second button.

The conference will be under the auspices of the Federation of International Polity Clubs of Boston with the co-operation of the World Peace Foundation, the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the Church Peace Union and Western Reserve University. Among the speakers will be Secretary of War Newton D. Baker and Senator Henri La Fontaine, of Belgium.

Middlebury, Vt.—The principal feature of the 116th commencement of Middlebury College this week will be the centennial of the birth of John Godfrey Saxe, the noted humorous poet, who graduated from Middlebury in the class of 1839. An address on his life and literary work will be delivered by his grandson, Hon. John Godfrey Saxe, at the commencement dinner tomorrow.

Findlay, O.—Leading Sunday-school authorities from Yale University, Chicago, Louisville, Des Moines and other cities outside of Ohio will contribute to the program of the State Sunday-school Convention opening in this city today. Among the leading educators who will address the convention are Prof. Charles Foster Kent, of Yale; Prof. G. Walter Fiske, of Oberlin College, and Prof. Walter S. Athearn, of Drake University, Des Moines.

Minneapolis, Minn. — President George E. Vincent, of the University of Minnesota, will preach the baccalaureate sermon at the commencement at Wellesley College, Massachusetts, today, going later to Yale University for the graduation of his son, John H. Vincent, tomorrow.

Cambridge, Mass.—The Harvard commencement exercises, beginning today with class day, will be held for the first time in the history of the University at the Stadium, the innovation resulting from the great demand of tickets, which amount to about 8,500. Commencement day will be held Thursday, when a prodigy, Adolph A. Berle, Jr., will receive his law degree at the age of 21. Berle passed his entrance examination at 13, received a bachelor's degree at 17 and his M. A. at 18. After passing the bar examinations he will enter the law office with which Justice Louis D. Brandeis is associated. Berle is the second youngest man to receive the degree of Bachelor of Law at the University, the youngest of all having been Justice Brandeis himself, who was graduated at 20, the faculty in his case making an exception to the rule of conferring the law degree only when the age of 21 is attained.

GRADUATES FROM PRATT.

E. Walter Poling, of West Fifth street, this city, was graduated last night from Pratt Institute, Brooklyn. Mr. Poling has completed a course in architectural construction.

—Do the available household workers of this city, who read the classified columns of this newspaper, know that you need a good servant?

CO. K DISAPPOINTED

the fact that Company K had not been called upon. When the two departed the captain extended his hand to Lieut. Charles and declared: We are at your service, Lieutenant; if there is anything we can do to help the cavalry in preparing for departure do not hesitate to let me know." Lieut. Charles thanked the Company K leader and assured him that his troop would reciprocate in a like manner if opportunity offered itself.

Every one of the sixty-five men enlisted in Company K has expressed a willingness to answer a call to arms and they are now anxiously awaiting further orders from General Sadler. War talk was even more in evidence today than it was yesterday and the militiamen are anxious to get into the thick of the fray with the first detachment that travels from Jersey soil.

The Second Regiment, commanded by Colonel Horace M. Reading, got the highest rating in the State at the last Feedral inspection, and the Third also is rated higher than are the Fourth and the Fifth. All of the officers of the Second and Third contend that the regiments chosen should be selected according to efficiency records.

Information received here today indicates that all are to be ordered out. If this is true there is little doubt that the highest three regiments in Federal rating will be taken to compose the First Brigade, and that the remaining two will join with the Delaware outfit of an eight-company regiment, which could be recruited up to a fuller strength and form a second brigade.

The command of the First Brigade, according to a rumor which persisted here today, is not positive. Brig. Gen. Edward W. Hine, one of the most popular men in the service, is said to be considering dropping his command in favor of a younger man.

News of the gift to the Fourth Regiment of Jersey City of an armored truck by George Brensinger has been received.

The commands ordered to Sea Girt muster 3,574 men. Work will be started at once to muster them up to the full 6,544 men, which is their war strength.

More than a year ago New Jersey prepared for the call which has come. The camp grounds at Sea Girt were seen to be too small, so adjoining flat lands were obtained and plans made for their utilization. Engineers laid out the streets and locations for the regimental centres. Pipes are ready for fitting which will extend the present water system into all parts of the new extension. These pipes can be laid down in a few hours as they not be buried. The hydrants and other fixtures are ready. Every tent was made ready for use.

TROOP D READY

visitors the guardsmen were first compelled to secure the necessary permission from superior officers. Automobiles lined both sides of the streets adjoining the camp all day and much interest was evidenced in the preparations being made for departure.

The men will remain at the site all day and tonight and will depart early tomorrow morning aboard a special train for the State encampment at Sea Girt. A friend of the troopers has offered the services of Conrad's military band to escort the men from the camp to the North avenue depot and the offer has been accepted. The departure of the troop tomorrow morning will be an impressive sight and, although no definite time has been announced as yet, it is believed that the special train will be due here between 9 and 10 tonight.

All of the Jersey National Guard, with the exception of the Second Infantry, comprising Company K among other companies, and the Third Infantry, with headquarters at Camden, will be in camp at Sea Girt tomorrow morning. Immediately upon arrival at Sea Girt, the troopers will be mustered from State to Federal service and supplies have been procured for ten days from Wednesday night. Every detail has been attended to and it is believed that no State is better equipped than New Jersey.

While the usual tears that accompany a parting of this kind were in evidence at the Putnam avenue camp this morning, the belief was general among the men and others interested that the local troopers and those from New Jersey in general, would get no further than Sea Girt. The ground for this is mere theory, but, nevertheless, it has been seized as a remedy for smoothing over the sadness akin to departure for the battlefield.

A complete list of the members of Watchung Troop, known as Troop D, follows:

Commissioned officers: Captain, Albert G. Borden; first lieutenant, Daniel Runkle; and second lieutenant, James M. Charles.

Non-Commissioned officers: First sergeant, Brown Rolston; quartermaster sergeant, Sherman B. Joost.

Sergeants: Arthur W. Ransome, mess sergeant; Austin W. Andrews, Louis L. Alberts, stable sergeant; Donald A. McGee and Walter L. Righter.

Corporals: Jacob L. Van Deventer, James H. Brewster, Jr., Robert H. Cox, Marsom I. Buttfield, William B. Tyler and Charles D. Wardlaw.

Lance Corporals: James M. Fleming and Maxwell E. Perkins.

Trumpeters: Warren Ackerman and Lewis A. Williams, Jr. Farrier: Josef Grandl. Wagoner: Percy A. Ransome. Cooks: Eugene D. Johnson and Charles C. Irby. Horseshoer: Edward Gottlick. Saddler: Frank B. Updyke.

Since yesterday afternoon the following recruits have signified their intention of joining the troop, and will probably be taken in before departure tomorrow: Lyman C. Hibbard, John E. Rinehart, Walter A. Glaentzer, Kenneth J. Browne, Gordon Stuart, Ferdinand I. Collins, John Kirby, Reginald Rowland, Clinton C. Ivins and Thos. M. Day, 3rd.

CORBUSIER'S PLANS

10:30, taking Troop D.

All morning and early this afternoon the Plainfielders were assisting the remainder of the corps in packing up supplies, this division being compelled to carry one of the biggest equipments of any ordered out. The major portion of the medical materials were purchased from Plainfield drug stores yesterday afternoon and last night and these were taken immediately to Elizabeth.

Eight wagons loaded with supplies were placed on the cars at the Elizabeth yards this morning ready for transport to Sea Girt. Major Corbusier has personal supervision over every movement.

SEVENTEEN DOG OWNERS ARE UP IN POLICE COURT

Seven dog owners were in police court this morning as a result of the activity of policemen in rounding up those who have not yet secured a license. Chief Kiely has issued orders to get every owner in town that has not complied with the law. Judge De Meza released those that came before him on their promise to secure a license during the day.

PLAINFIELDERS GRADUATED FROM PENN STATE COLLEGE

Among the graduates of the 1916 class at Penn State College this year are Gordon Voorhees Moy, son of former Mayor and Mrs. G. W. Moy, and Theodore Denton Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hamilton, of East Second street. The former received an A. B. degree and the latter that of bachelor of science.

Mr. Moy will associate himself with his father, it being his intention to become a lawyer. Mr. Hamilton's plans are not known. This year's class at Penn State was one of the largest in many years.

ANDERSON OFFERS HIS SERVICES TO THE STATE

William D. la Roche Anderson, of Watchung, who has offered his services to the State in the present Mexican crisis, received a telegram this morning from Adjutant-General Sadler, which read: "Thanks for your wire. If any vacancy occurs that you can fill will be glad to at once notify you."

Mr. Anderson was formerly a member of the Seventh Regiment, New York, having served nearly five years in the Second Regiment. In view of this fact Mr. Anderson is not compelled to re-enlist in the service, but he is only too glad to do anything possible under the present circumstances.

FUNERAL OF MRS. CONNORS IS LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Connors, whose death occurred at her late home on West Fifth street, Saturday night, was held in St. Mary's church this morning at 8:30, a solemn requiem mass being offered for the repose of her soul. Rev. Father B. M. Bogan acted as celebrant, while Rev. Father P. J. Hart was the deacon and Rev. Father Hennessey the sub-deacon. The floral numbers were unusually many, handsome set pieces being sent by the Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus, and the police department of New York City, of which Joseph Connors, a son, is a member of the detective corps. Burial took place in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Martin Reagan, Martin McCarthy, Samuel Flatley and John Kane. Members of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, attended a prayer service at the West Fifth street residence last night, Father Bogan being in charge.

MANY ENJOY ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment given in the Washington School last night under the auspices of the West End Community Center proved to be highly enjoyable to the large number of members and friends who gathered in the building. C. E. Hadden, chairman of the entertainment committee, had charge of the program for the evening and much of the success is due to his efforts. Two sketches, "Other People's Money" and "The Silent System," scored big hits, while the spelling match led by Mrs. James Cook caused much merriment.

SERVICE FOR MRS. WINTER.

A funeral service for Mrs. Mary E. Winter, widow of Harrison R. Winter, who died last Saturday, was held last night at the home of her son-in-law, Ernest Zeek, 1125 West Front street, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, conducted the service. The body was sent this morning to Kingston, N. Y., where interment will take place.

DR. EATON TO SPEAK.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, has been secured as the speaker for the annual meeting of the Dutch Arms, men's association of Trinity Reformed church, Monday night, June 26. He will speak on "Preparedness." Officers will be elected.

WILSON OFFERS PEACE OR WAR

mas or Mazatlan.

The destroyers Hull, Hopkins and Truxton sailed from San Pedro last night, to accompany the flagship. The cruiser Milwaukee will follow in a few days.

The warships are under orders to proceed to the west coast of Mexico at top speed.

The cruisers Colorado and Pittsburgh, the latter the flagship of Rear Admiral Fullam, will sail today to join the ships under Admiral Winslow.

According to advices here the cruiser Maryland will steam from Bremerton, Wash., today to the lower coast. The cruiser South Dakota, in dry dock at Bremerton, also will be released today for duty in southern waters.

The protected cruiser Milwaukee and the destroyer Stewart are expected to receive orders today to proceed south.

Including ships now in Mexican waters, there will be a fleet of seventeen cruisers, gunboats and destroyers.

That Admiral Winslow contemplates landing a force of bluejackets and marines on Mexican soil, in an emergency, was indicated today by the fact that officers and sailors owning motorcycles were requested to bring them aboard.

Report March On Sibley.

San Antonio, June 20.—Mexican government troops were reported today to be marching toward Del Rio, a border town about 100 miles up the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass with the announced intention of attacking the American troops under Col. Sibley there.

This information was the most notable that reached Gen. Funston today. It was brought to the border by a Mexican, who said the force was 1,500 strong.

War In Balance.

War with Mexico and consequent American armed occupation of the country hang almost in the balance today on the eve of the delivery of the note. These contingencies depend on the attitude of the Carranza government after receiving the American refusal to withdraw its troops and the frank statement that this government intends to defend its border and send punitive expeditions across whenever necessary pending the restoration of order and a demonstration of control over the situation in northern Mexico. Carranzista protests and threats of resistance to the contrary notwithstanding.

As it shapes itself now the situation is one in which only a complete backdown of Carranza and his advisers will prevent an armed clash between military forces of the two governments, armed intervention and war. Even a retreat by the Carranza government from its position of insisting upon the withdrawal of the American forces and opposing the further crossing of the line by the border patrol in pursuit of bandits may not save the situation.

Mexico For War.

Official reports reaching Washington show that all of northern Mexico is seething with hatred for everything American, excitement and irritation. The trend of this government's information is that the feeling of resentment has spread beyond the ability of the Carranza government to check it even should he now adopt a conciliatory policy in an effort to prevent the clash which his attitude has threatened. There is apprehension here that when the contents of the president's note to Mexico becomes known in northern Mexico the American forces will be attacked and the border subjected to a series of raids.

Unofficial reports that the governors of the Mexican states of Sinaloa and Yucatan had declared war on the United States and ordered out Americans were interpreted here as meaning that the hatred of everything American was spreading at an alarming rate in Mexico.

Yucatan is the sisal hemp state in the extreme southeastern part of Mexico, and Sinaloa is a west coast state, of which Mazatlan and Topolobampo are the leading ports.

One dangerous element in the situation is the appeal which is being made by Carranza military and civil officials to Mexicans to unite in "driving out the gringoes." Proclamations are being issued calling upon all ablebodied Mexicans for military service against the "invaders from the north," and Carranzista leaders are boasting that within sixty days they will have an army of 500,000 for use against the United States forces.

Chaotic conditions prevail everywhere, it is said. Clashes such as that between Mexican troops and American bluejackets at Mazatlan show that relations are strained to the breaking point. The act of a subordinate commander anywhere may bring on fighting that will result in war.

The first step in this direction, following the president's call for the militia, was taken when preparations were made to obtain the enactment by congress of an emergency joint resolution authorizing the president to draft the state militia, as national guardsmen into federal service, so as to make them available for use across the Mexican border whenever and wherever necessary.

Ready to Blockade.

The government is contemplating a blockade of both coasts within a week at least and possibly within three days. The warships are already at the principal ports or within striking distance and will be used for this purpose the moment a clash comes that forces this government to take military measures on a scale commensurate with armed intervention. Only a sudden and complete reversal of the present trend of affairs will halt the plans for a blockade, which will shut off supplies to the Carranza government and bar the exit of Mexican products wherever their exportation would aid the de facto government.

MISS MARTHA JOHNSON DIES IN NEW YORK CITY

Miss Martha Ann Johnson, daughter of the late Henry and Lucretia Johnson (colored), and a former resident of Plainfield, died last Wednesday in New York city, following a brief illness. The cause of death was ascribed to apoplexy. Miss Johnson was born at City Point, Virginia, October 4, 1867, and in September, 1876, she came to Plainfield with her parents. She left Plainfield in 1902 and since then has been residing in New York city. Her death comes as a shock to her many friends in this city who remember her as a quiet and efficient worker. Miss Johnson is survived by three sisters, two of whom reside in New York city. The remaining one is Miss Josephine Johnson, of East Fourth street, Plainfield.

TEUTONS BEGIN TO HOLD RUSSIANS

German Re-enforcements Aiding Austrians.

London, June 20.—Further progress and additional large captures of Austro-Hungarian and German prisoners by the armies of General Brusiloff in Volhynia, Galicia and the Bukowina are reported by the Russian war office.

Both the amount of ground gained and the number of prisoners taken are slight in comparison with the successes of the first ten days of the Russian offensive, but the claims are sufficient to indicate that the advance keeps up steadily, notwithstanding the strong re-enforcements the Teutons have been able by this time to bring up to aid their hard pressed southern lines.

After the fall of Czernowitz, capital of the Bukowina, General Brusiloff's forces swept across the Pruth and are now "energetically advancing toward the Sereth river." This river comes nearest to Czernowitz at the fortified city of Storzynetz, defended by a strong bridgehead, although less powerful to that of Cernowitz. At this bridgehead, about thirteen miles to the southwest of Czernowitz, the Austro-Hungarians are expected to make their last stand to escape the only alternative to flight into the Carpathian mountains.

The army which defended the southern Bukowina is in sore straits. Some unofficial dispatches declare it to be already cut off from the northern forces and retreating toward Kolomea and Kuty to the west and part of it southward to Dornavatra. The army is commanded by General Pflanzer.

In the center of the new battle line, halfway between Rovno and Kovel, where Teutons and Russians have been battling for several days now, the former for the retention, the latter for the capture of the great railway converging point, Kovel, German reenforcements rushed south by the Bavarian general, Count von Bothmer, are making their weight felt sufficiently to hold the Russians in check.

Learned, rector of the church, is to officiate.

The guests will arrive from New York Thursday and will include Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Dick, the parents of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Havemeyer and Mr. and Mrs. William Kingsland Macy, the two latter being his sisters; also Adolph M. Providence, R. I., June 20.—Charles E. Hughes is here to forget politics for a few days, if his admirers will let him, and have a good time at the Brown university commencement. PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 20, 1916.

THE MAILED FIST IS OFFERED.

While the mobilization of militia does not mean war, it is proof that President Wilson had tired of border outrages and that he has learned to put no confidence in the proffered hand of Carranza until he looks behind the back of that bewhiskered bandit for the knife that seems to be always in readiness. It means an end of silly diplomatic negotiations with a band of unscrupulous robbers, and the assertion of American rights in the American way. This change in the policy toward Mexico will be welcomed by all classes of citizens.

With 100,000 trained and equipped soldiers on the border President Wilson will be in shape to conduct his punitive expedition after Villa without fear of American invasion, and should the men of Pershing be attacked on Mexican soil troops can be rushed to their aid at once.

Intervention is not a necessary result of this mobilization of the trained fighting men of the United States. Carranza has repeatedly concentrated large forces within shooting distance of American soil without being called on for an explanation. He cannot consistently demand apology for any act of this country except an actual invasion of Mexico by troops other than those necessary to the chase and capture of Villa, or other bandits that commit depredations on this side of the Rio Grande. President Wilson may be depended upon to use every possible means to bring about a peaceful settlement of the trouble. With the mailed fist raised, he will again offer Carranza the hand of friendship. It lies within the power of the First Chief of the de facto government to choose peace or war. Every act of the Wilson administration substantiates this belief. The soldiers on the border can also be depended upon to await a hostile move. Gen. Funston, Gen. Pershing, Gen. Parker and others in command of troops have acted admirably in a delicate situation and their men in uniform have actually undergone insults rather than precipitate a bloody struggle.

The country trusts Wilson and calmly awaits his orders. A spark of the spirit of '76 and '61 lighted American hearts yesterday when the call to arms was made public, and militiamen from practically every State responded nobly. Plainfield's young men were ready within a few hours after the order was received and a call for volunteers would meet a ready response in this community. More soldiers will not be needed, let us hope, but every American is praying that the present crisis will settle the Mexican question for all time—that whatever means are necessary to guarantee respect for the Stars and Stripes and safety for its citizens in Mexico be taken—and they are willing to make whatever sacrifices are demanded.

CHIEF DOANE'S RETIREMENT.

Chief T. O. Doane's retirement as head of the Plainfield fire department will be received with regret by his hundreds of friends, not only in this city but all over the country, for wherever firemen have gathered he has been a conspicuous figure. The Council, in providing for him by retaining him as building inspector and giving him an increase in salary so that his fireman's pension will be of substantial size, has only done what was fair and right. In spite of criticisms which have been heaped on his head from some sources recently, it is the belief of the Daily Press that Chief Doane has been a faithful, painstaking and efficient officer. That he may be with us after his retirement for many years, to enjoy a little more ease than has been possible with his duties as fire chief and building inspector, is the sincere hope of all his friends in this city.

A REAL EDITORIAL.

The office boy is learning to use the typewriter. Some day he will bring credit to the profession of Horace Greeley, Dana, Waterson and Brisbane. When the editorial writer sat down to grind out a series of semi-connected thoughts on the Mexican muddle he found a sheet of copy paper in his machine covered with the following sentence:

"NOW IS THE TIME FOR ALL GOOD MEN TO COME TO THE AID OF THEIR COUNTRY."

Most of the militiamen who answer the call of the country will find their jobs waiting for them when their "bit" is done, and if not they are to be congratulated on breaking away from a firm ruled so miserly and selfishly.

• • • • • •

Michigan governor refuses to order militia into service until its members vote whether or not they want to fight for their country. We thought we were through with his kind when Cole Blease was kicked into the scrap heap.

It required heroic measures but Carranza finally crowded the Kaiser and the Russian Bear off the front page.

MISS RITTENHOUSE GRADUATE FROM BOSTON CONSERVATORY

Miss Frances Rittenhouse, of Plainfield, was graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, at largely attended commencement exercises held in Jordan Hall of the Conservatory building this afternoon. Miss Rittenhouse has successfully completed the course at the oldest and largest American conservatory. She has had as her principal teacher Richard Stevens, of the faculty. She took part in the class day exercises on Monday afternoon, at which several original songs by her were given their first presentation.

SERVICE FOR MISS FITZSIMONS.

A private funeral service for local relatives and close friends was held this afternoon over the body of Miss Edith H. Fitzsimons, at the home of Mrs. G. Harry Squires, of 955 Union street. Rev. Dr. E. Vicars Stevenson was the officiating clergyman. Numerous beautiful floral tributes were extended by friends who had known Miss Fitzsimons during the several years she had practiced in Plainfield as a graduate nurse. The body will be sent tonight to St. Thomas, Ont., the native home of the deceased, where a further service and interment will take place tomorrow.

CHIEF DOANE READY TO ROUND UP A REGIMENT

During the course of a discussion yesterday with friends regarding the Mexican situation, Fire Chief T. O. Doane declared: "If worse comes to worse I'll organize a troop of veterans and offer my services to Uncle Sam."

Chief Doane, although having weathered seventy-three summers, fifty-two of which were spent in the regalia of a Plainfield fireman, is remarkably active and no one present would doubt for a minute the fact that he meant what he said. The veteran "smokeeater" was affiliated with Company B, Eleventh N. J.

Easy.

It isn't hard to be happy
And have everything that you need;
A yacht and a fine automobile,
Which grinds out a wonderful speed;
Fine porterhouse steak every evening,
And eggs for your breakfast each morn;
A fine house and lot in the suburbs,
And clothes that are not patched and worn.
A lot of hard coal in the cellar,
A library full of fine books;
A house full of excellent servants,
Including the finest of cooks;
A trip to the seashore each summer,
And travel where'er you would go;
No, it isn't so hard to be happy—
If you've got a million or so.

Sandy's Ticket.

Three Scotchmen were traveling together in their native land and were seated in one of the car compartments. The conductor came into the compartment and called out "Tickets!" whereupon Dougal and Donald each handed out a ticket. While Sandy fumbled through all his pockets in a vain search for his, which he was holding between his teeth, with one half of it in his mouth. After looking at him for a minute in disgust, the conductor snatched the ticket from Sandy's mouth, slammed the door and disappeared.

Sandy's companions had a hearty laugh over it, and one of them twitted him as growing old and foolish. Sandy replied:

"I'm nae' say auld nor foolish as ye think I am; yon ticket is two weeks auld an' I was jest lickin' th' date aff o' it."

Effete Kansas.

A young man who bore the earmarks of one who has spent a great deal of time in the rural districts walked into a Cherryvale grocery the other day and asked for a 10-cent bottle of vanilla. He told the shopkeeper that he needn't wrap it up, as he would take it just as it was. As soon as the purchase was made the youth took out of his pocket a folded white handkerchief, removed the cork from the bottle and poured a small amount of the liquid on the cloth. The clerk must have shown surprise, for the boy smiled pleasantly and explained, "There's going to be a social out our way tonight."

The Morning Mail.

When I sit down in my old office chair,
I eagerly peruse my morning mail;
It comes from here and there and everywhere;
A stack of it awaits me without fail.

The letters open-faced I cast aside,
I care not for the mail that's peek-a-boo;
The fronts of isinglass I can't abide,
I know that they contain bills long past due.

The sealed mail is the sort that gets my eye.
I open it, my expectations keen.
I look it through till half-past 10 and sigh,
In all the bunch there's no check to be seen.

A speech made by our congressman I get;
An oil well pamphlet tells of work begun,
My mail has never furnished one thrill yet;
There's nothing new, by heck, beneath the sun.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Hobart Bosworth, the well known stage and screen star, appears at the head of a splendid cast in a five-part photoplay entitled "Doctor Neighbor" at Proctor's today. This picture puts forth a plea that it is not right to prolong a human life if that life is so distorted and mangled as to prevent its normal restoration. It might be taken as an attack on the time-honored law of the medical profession—to sustain life whenever there is the slightest chance, no matter what the consequence will be. Be that as it may, anything that attacks anything else with any degree of purpose is bound to be strong and "Doctor Neighbor" is very strong indeed. To drive home her point Arthur Agnes Hay has seen occasion to call for the picturization of a number of scenes taken around the bed of one Hazel Rogers, who with her spine twisted and fractured by an automobile accident, lies praying her attendants to deprive her of her life. There are long scenes and they are pathetic to the extreme, and after the nurse, her dearest friend, has granted her request, there is considerable emotion portrayed upon the screen. Hobart Bosworth makes a very strong figure of the doctor and Dorothy Davenport is the center of great sympathy as the ruined girl. Gretchen Lederer is the nurse, Emory Johnson, the husband, while Adele Farrington and Margaret Whistler have other prominent parts which they handle exceedingly well. Lloyd B. Carleton directed. His work is praiseworthy, for he has handled an extremely delicate subject in the least offensive manner possible. In addition today the second episode of "The Secret of the Submarine" is shown, and several comedy subjects complete the bill. On Wednesday William Farnum appears in the title role of a Fox feature that smacks realistically of the briny deep entitled "The Battle of Hearts," which tells a romantic story in typical Farnum fashion. "The Iron Claw," one of the greatest Pathe serials will also appear tomorrow, the seventeenth episode being shown.

--Astor Theatre--

The attraction advertised for today at the Astor Theatre is J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Son of the Immortals," a Bluebird photoplay of sensational bent, replete with thrills and excitement. The plot conveys the action of a Yankee suddenly elevated to rule over a kingdom, and the manner in which it breaks down conventions and casts traditions to the wind stirs up the politicians and leads to many sensational episodes. The final outcome is a triumph for the American spirit, and the king gets away with his problems in a manner to stir the enthusiasm of American audiences. Tomorrow we offer the big Bluebird production, "The Flirt," featuring Marie Walcamp and Juan de la Cruz. It may be mentioned here that Mr. Cruz is now making a big success with "Where Are My Children?" and there is no doubt that he will be seen to good effect in this production. Very interesting and truly American in all its characterizations is the story of "The Flirt," adapted to the screen by Lois Weber from the serial story by Booth Tarkington, which appeared several months ago in the Saturday Evening Post. The limitations of the picture's scope made the production all the more difficult, for the entire action of the piece takes place in a small village with the natural details of daily life under such conditions rather barren of sensations. Nevertheless, the "sensations" are there just the same and those who witness the photoplay will be amazed at the great amount of lively interest the Bluebird photoplayers have injected into the incidents portrayed. Booth Tarkington's serial story was adapted to the screen by Lois Weber (Mrs. Smalley) and Phillips Smalley directed Marie Walcamp and her associate players, headed by Juan de la Cruz, in the photo version of "The Flirt." In support of Miss Walcamp will be Juan de la Cruz, who will be recalled as a fellow-player with the star of "The Flirt" in another successful Bluebird picture, "Hop, the Devil's Brew," and others prominent will be Antrim Short, who plays the mischievous boy and really keeps the plot going, and a number of others well known to the movie fans. The plot deals with the caprice of a girl whose one desire in life seems to be the ensnaring of men's hearts, only to lightly cast them off when her unhappy work is accomplished. Vanity and selfishness are her ruling attributes, and so she goes on her ruthless way until at last one man comes into her life who proves more than her match. The story is thrilling from start to finish and no doubt will be enjoyed. We will also show the third chapter of "Who's Guilty?" featuring the ever-popular Tom Moore and Anna Nilsson. Each chapter is compelte in itself. Read it in The Courier-News every Tuesday.

THE CALL

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

Tyrone Power, who has become a local screen favorite through his appearances in numerous feature photoplays, strengthened his hold with the Plainfield public when he was shown at the Plainfield Theatre yesterday for the first time in the sensational Universal five-reel film, "Where Are My Children?" The play is one constructed on unusual lines and is as much educational as it is entertaining. Mr. Power, in the leading male role of a physician, is a forceful, picturesque figure, and he observes the first law of acting on the screen, which is simplicity. His portrayal is a remarkable bit of acting and, with the assistance of Mabel Riuane, Cora Drew and Marie Walcamp, Mr. Power makes "Where Are My Children?" one of the greatest photoplays yet presented in Plainfield. It will be shown again today and also tomorrow.

The withdrawal of vaudeville from the policy of the Plainfield Theatre paves the way for the best moving pictures to be secured, and Manager Shannon has a list of bookings that will create great comment. Every program includes scenic panoramas and comedies, in addition to a five-reel feature. The next big attraction to follow "Where Are My Children?" is "The Dumb Girl of Portici," with Anna Pavlowa as the leading actress. It will be presented for the last half of the week beginning Thursday.

TO RETIRE AFTER 51 YEARS

schedule goes into effect July 1. The ordinace was passed on its second reading.

Chairman Cose also introduced a supplement to the Building Inspector ordinance, increasing the salary from $500 to $1,100 a year. The term of office is indefinite during the incumbency of Chief Doane, but after that the inspector will be appointed for one year.

Chief Doane's letter to the Council follows:

"To the Mayor and Honorable Council.

"Gentlemen:—In view of the intended changes in the salaries of the members of the Plainfild Fire Department, this seems an opportune time to bring to your attention the subject which I have been considering for several years, namely, my own retirement from active service in the department, with which I have been connected for fifty-one years, and of which I have been chief since 1888 continuously.

"While I am still in the enjoyment of good health and vigor and just as capable physically and mentally of performing the duties of my office as chief as I have been at any time in my life, yet I realize that as time goes on it will become increasingly difficult for me to perform the constantly growing work involved in the proper supervision of the two offices of fire chief and building inspector.

"My friends, of whom I am proud to say I have many and whose good will I highly appreciate, advise me that I should now relinquish some of my activities and lead a somewhat less strenuous life, to which they are good enough to say my past service entitles me, and while I do not feel that I could be satisfied with nothing to do, I am disposed to listen to their counsels. Being an honorably discharged soldier of the United States army, my positions both as chief of the fire department and of building inspector fall within the provisions of Chapter 14, Laws of 1907, and Chapter 84, Laws of 1912, and pursuant to the laws of the last mentioned act, I hereby assent to and request that I be retired from office and active membership in the fire department of the city of Plainfield as of November 1, 1916, this assent and request, however, being on condition that I retain the office of building inspector, and that an arrangement satisfactory to your honorable body and myself as to pension and salary is arrived at.

"In making the foregoing statement I have not the slightest intention of seeming to dictate or intrude in any way upon the perrogatives of the Common Council. In my long service I have enjoyed the association with all of the gentlemen who have so ably served the city in official capacities and my relations with them have almost without exception been of the most pleasant and cordial character. It is my most earnest wish now that such relation shall continue and I have the honor to subscribe myself,

Very respectfully,
"T. O. DOANE,
"Chief of Fire Department."

NEWS AND VIEWS Conducted by THE W. C. T. U.

At a stirring meeting held at the Sorbonne, Paris, France, the National League against Alcoholism was organized recently. Deputy E. Lafont, secretary-general of the anti-liquorites of the chamber of deputies, declared war against spirits. M. Paul Painleve, minister of public instruction, attacked alcohol in an eloquent address. Mme. Maria Verona, lawyer before the Court of Appeals, excited a wave of enthusiasm by her dramatic words.

"Women," she said, "are asked to give children to the motherland! They are ready! But they must be assured of not losing their children from birth because of inherited tares. Think of the ravages of alcohol among workmen's families! What of the women in mourning, weeping for husband or son dead at the hospital from light injuries which alcoholic intoxication had rendered incurable?

"And you, gentlemen of parliament, know that we do not wish any more of that hesitation, of that lack of initiative or of courage which stop you on the way to the most urgent reforms. Wives, mothers, all of us will come to you soon to demand the suppression of alcohol. And if you do not listen to our requests you will find us before you at the next elections. Look where you have brought us: to regret that there isn't in France a czar powerful enough to forbid, with one stroke of his pen, the numerous excesses which are killing our race."

Very grave concern was expressed by speakers at the recent convention of the liquor dealers at Louisville, Ky., over the disturbed business conditions in the license States caused by the constantly recurring elections on the liquor question. "The situation is serious," wailed one of the leaders. "For the sake of prosperity an answer must be had. The crusade of the drys and the lamentations of the wets must soon become to the business man more and more obnoxious and intolerable. Whence will the solution come?"

There are thousands of people who are eager to point these worried members of the drink trade to the only adequate solution. Among them are United States senators and representatives from prohibition States and governors and legislators of these same fortunate commonwealths. Let the liquor people stop for a little while juggling statistics and fix their eyes on the State of Kansas, comparing it with territory that is trying to hold on to John Barleycorn under the mistaken notion that this course is necessary "for the sake of prosperity." The Topeka Capital stated the case well in an editorial when it said:

"Kansas people have tried prohibition for thirty-six years and are so satisfied with the results that every political party in the State champions prohibition as the only State policy. Whereas there is not a State in the Union with the saloon that is not all torn up over the question of prohibition, either local or State-wide."

"A question is never settled until it is settled right." Kansas has settled it according to the law and the gospel of Christian civilization, and therefore has the very best of reasons to be satisfied.

As has been so carefully pointed out to us by the United States Brewers' Association, practically all of the great men of our past history drank liquor, not only because they like it, but because there were no prohibition cranks in the land in those days to raise a fuss about it. No railroad president had then robbed his engineers and trainmen of their personal liberty by forbidding them to take a little for their stomach's sake while on duty.

These are the somber reflections that come to one when he contemplates the effort to make all the country like Kansas—a State where they are allowing the county poorhouses to crumble in decay, where the jails are running practically empty, and where the business of taking care of the poor has been largely ruined because the poor will not live here any more. Last Christmas an effort to give usefulness to a "good fellow club" in Wichita, the commercial center of the State, failed because after the club was organized it found so little to do that it became discouraged and went out of business with a balance in the treasury.

Can any sense of philanthropy be created in our citizenship without any poor to take care of? In God's great name, are we to be robbed of the opportunity to develop those tender sensibilities which grow only in the presence of need?

We are human; we would enjoy the larger, more thrilling life that comes in on the tide of drink; we would like our tenement districts, our social-welfare fights, our all-night courts, our white-slave problems, our commissions to study the relief of disease and poverty just as well as anyone—but can we have them? We cannot.

There hasn't even been a case of delirium tremens in the State since 1896, and at the time that was thought by inexperienced surgeons to be due to the free-silver campaign.

How can we ever hope to become familiar with the evils of drunkenness when we have wiped out the taste for it in our State?

How can we ever expect people to come here for real enjoyment when we have provided none of those ministrations of happiness that bubble along Broadway and have made French Lick Springs in Indiana such a heaven on earth?

SAINTHOOD FOR MAID OF ORLEANS OBSERVED

Rome, June 20.—Today the Blessed Joan of Arc was advanced another step nearer sainthood, when the Congregation of Rites held a preparatory session to investigate the miracles said to have been performed by the Maid of Orleans, who is mystically supposed to have won the great battle of the Marne in 1914, though that is certainly not one of the miracles proposed.

The various stages leading up to canonizing sometimes extend over centuries. In the case of Joan of Arc the preliminary steps already have occupied many years. A condition precedent to canonization is beatification. This consists of fourteen distinct steps. The candidate must be one who is alleged to have practiced in life in a heroic degree faith, hope and charity. The first step is the bishop's inquiry, which is made as exhaustive as possible to ascertain whether the person was eminent in the exercise of these virtues. The investigation in the case of Joan of Arc was begun more than fifty years ago by Bishop Dupanloup, of Orleans, and carried to a conclusion by his successor, the late Cardinal Couillé, of Lyons.

The solemn ceremonies in the beatification of Joan of Arc were carried out in St. Peter's on April 18, 1909, in the presence of 30,000 French pilgrims, practically all the bishops of France and many cardinals. According to the rubric, the Pope does not attend beatifications in person, but as a mark of special devotion Leo XIII. assisted on this occasion at a solemn benediction which replaced the ceremony of the veneration of relics, none existing in the case of Joan of Arc.

Before the beatified can be canonized at least two miracles must have been performed. The name of the beatified one is then presented to three congregations at the last of which the final ceremonies of canonization take place. The importance of the ceremony may be understood when it is stated that it is deemed to be "the public judgment among the saints." It is declared that the person thus honored led a perfect life and that God worked miracles at her intercession, either during her life or after her death, and that consequently she is worthy to be honored as a saint.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Kate Got Dinner For Her Frederick.

"My stars," she cried, "what shall I do?"

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

THE children settled down on daddy's lap, and he told them this bedtime story: "There was once a bride and groom, Kate and Frederick, who began housekeeping in a little green cottage. One day Frederick said: 'I am going out in the field to work. When I come in I shall be very hungry, so have something nice cooked and plenty of good ale for me.'

"When dinner time came Kate took a nice steak, which was all the meat she had, and put it on the fire to cook. The steak soon began to crackle and brown, and Kate turned it with a fork. 'The steak is almost ready, so I will go down cellar for the ale,' she said to herself.

"So she left the steak in the pan, took a jug and went down cellar to tap the ale cask. The ale was running into her jug when suddenly Kate cried, 'The dog will run away with the steak!'

"She ran upstairs, and, sure enough, the dog had the steak in his mouth and was running off with it. Away ran Kate after him, but the dog beat her running. So she turned around, and as she had run so fast after the dog she now walked home slowly to get cooled off.

"Now, all the time she had been running after the steak the tap had also been running. She had forgotten to turn it off when she ran upstairs, you see. When her jug was full the ale ran all over the floor till the cask was empty. 'My stars,' she cried, 'what shall I do to keep Frederick from seeing that slop?'

"At last she remembered a sack of meal that her husband had bought at the fair. She decided to sprinkle this on the cellar floor to sop up the spilled ale. 'What a lucky idea!' she said to herself. 'We now have a good use for that meal.' But as she was sprinkling the meal on the floor she was so clumsy that she managed to tip over her jug. All the ale for her husband's dinner went swimming over the cellar.

"So she sprinkled the last grain of meal over the slop. 'How neat and clean it looks!' said she to herself.

"At noon Frederick came home for his dinner. 'What to eat?' he asked.

"'Oh, Frederick,' she cried, 'I was cooking you a steak, and while I was downstairs drawing a jug of ale the dog stole the steak. I ran after him, but he got away, and while I ran the ale also ran, and when I tried to sop up the ale on the floor with the meal we got at the fair I upset the jug.'

"'Kate, why did you do all this?' asked her husband.

"'I did not know I was doing wrong. You should have told me,' Kate blamed Frederick, just the way Evelyn is apt to blame Jack for things."

The Sensible Words of a Friend Go Unheeded By Ethel Gordon

"Oh, Ethel Gordon, it certainly is good to see you," exclaimed Maisie Folsom as she sprang off the Pullman and ran toward her friend. "I believe you are prettier than ever."

"I am an old married woman. It is the joy of seeing you again that has rejuvenated me." Ethel settled her mouth in demure curves as she eyed her friend's suit and compared it with her own.

"You have a lovely new suit," Maisie continued, feeling the scrutiny, "and it is immensely becoming. I hardly thought you would go to such lengths as to get another suit, living in a small town as you do. This is one way a woman can save in a small place if she wants to." Maisie smiled radiantly at her friend.

"Saving never was my long suit, if you remember," laughted Ethel, wondering if Maisie could possibly have heard of their financial embarrassment.

"Oh, before marriage, yes, but most women reform after marriage." Maisie was privately wondering if Ethel was as much of a doll as ever. "They have so much of importance to think about that mere clothes are crowded out," she continued aloud.

"What, for instance?" asked Ethel.

"What is important? Why, homemaking and housekeeping; making home the dearest place on earth," replied Maisie.

"Really, I think you must be engaged, or at least in love. You are so sentimental." Ethel looked wonderingly at the girl beside her.

"Neither one; guess again," laughed Maisie. "But really, dear, I do think it is the most important thing in any woman's life."

"Well, I think a woman should be the chief ornament of the home, and I never intend to settle down into an old frump, and take no interest in my appearance." Ethel spoke as if actuated by strong moral convictions. "Tell me all about the girls. I am starved for news. They are not very good correspondents."

"You mean you are not," corrected Maisie. "You owe every one of us letters."

"I was always poor in English; you remember my themes were invariably late." Ethel dimpled in memory of her school days.

"I am afraid Miss Nelison was worn to a frazzle trying to get you to work. I suppose you are making up for those idle days by your industry now." Maisie was trying to lead her friend out, trying to see if she had changed in any particular.

"Why should you suppose any such thing. I do not believe in wearing myself out," replied Ethel.

"What a set of convenient beliefs you have," was Maisie's laughing rejoinder, and the subject was dropped.

They wandered about in the parks, beautiful in their autumn coloring, till time for lunch. Maisie demurred when Ethel took her to the high-priced restaurant, but her objections were overruled.

"This is a poor enough excuse of an entertainment, and you are the only one of the crowd to come even this near to my home. When you come back you must make us a real visit."

"I do not know when I shall be coming back," the tone was almost sad, "my uncle is very sick; it will depend on his health."

"Oh, I did not know he was seriously ill. I thought he wanted you for company." Ethel looked grave.

"He does not say he is very sick. I only fear from what I have heard in an indirect way."

"Come on, let's go to the picture show and forget all our worries. It is the best way," urged Ethel.

"If you can; some cannot forget," replied Maisie.

THE OLD MASTER

Christy Mathewson, whose return to form has gladdened the hearts of Giant rooters, and given them visions of a pennant.

KAUFF NOT A COBB; BUT A GOOD HITTER

Player With "Loose Tongue" Has Disproved Early Rumors.

When the Giants signed Benny Kauff there was quite a few who openly expressed the opinion that modest Benjamin would not shine so brightly in the National League as he had in the Federal. They asserted that Benny had been hitting weak pitching and that the superior twirling he would encounter as a member of the Giants would show him to be a player of but little better than mediocre batting ability.

Kauff has done even at this early date more than enough to disprove these statements. He has shown the fans that he is an exceptional batter. He has made good. But even if the fans have seen enough for themselves to be convinced, it is interesting to read what such an excellent judge of ball players as Hughey Jennings thinks of the Giant outfielder.

"Kauff will be a better ball player under McGraw than he was in the Federal League because he will be more subject to discipline. No ball player can do justice to himself unless he is accountable to a manager he respects.

"Discipline was almost a forgotten word in the Federal circuit. The players having nothing in the way of a pennant and a world's series to play for, di not care particularly what happened. Many of them played simply because they were under contract to do so. Such a thing as getting into condition and remaining that way was practically unknown to many of them.

"A ball player like Kauff showed excellent judgment in going after things in a fashion of his own and remaining in the game despite what fellow players were doing. But the surroundings were bound to have their effect, and Kauff, now that he is with a team that has a pennant in view, can be depended on to do his best through the stretch of a season's schedule.

"I believe him to be a natural .300 hitter. He is a good ball player—make no mistake about that; and he will throw off a lot of critics who are riding him now because of his remarks, alleged or otherwise, regarding his ability as compared to Cobb.

"There is no question that Kauff is much inferior as a player to the Georgian. Cobb is a wonderful base runner, a fine fielder, the best hitter in the game and a great man for a team. These talents are not combined in Kauff and the latter will finish several points below Cobb in all departments of the game were he in the American League."

FEAR WOLGAST WILL SPRING OLD "GAG"

His Bout With Welsh for July 4 May Never Materialize.

It would be a peculiar state of affairs if old Ad Wolgast happened to land a lucky punch on Freddie Welsh when they come together for 15 rounds at Denver on July 4. Wolgast long since has outlived his days of usefulness in the ring and if promoters were good sportsmen they would cease to swindle their patrons by staging him.

However, for a round or two the one-time champion can swing a heavy fist, and Welsh is going back so rapidly he soon will be in Wolgast's class if he is not there at present. Wolgast caused Welsh considerable trouble during the first two rounds of their bout at the Garden last year. After that Wolgast faded away and quit, saying his arm was broken, his usual alibi when his condition gives out.

The way Wolgast has fooled the public with this excuse is one of the wonders of the ring. Abe Attell, who discovered so many shady tricks, was the first to practice this one. More than once toward the end of his career, when he found he was up against some sturdy youngster who was too strong for him, he saved his face by claiming an injury that never existed.

Wolgast has used this alibi for years. At other times when it was not convenient to plead an injury for fear of preventing another profitable match he chose to lose on a foul rather than be knocked out. He lost his last bout in that way, yet the Denver promoters have the nerve to announce that they are going to guarantee Welsh $8,000 to meet him and they are billing the affair as a championship match!

AND BAKER DID IT.

Cleveland, June 20.—The Yankees slammed out another win yesterday over the Indians, hammering their way to the front, 7 to 6. Baker's smashing home-run hit over the right-field wall with two men on bases, and the bunching of two more hits gave the Yanks a five-run lead in the first. The Indians came within one run of tying the score after the Yanks had added another tally in the second, but in the seventh the Yankees put over the winning run and the Indians were unable to advance.

THREE-HOUR CONTEST.

Delmonte, Cal., June 20.—The spectacular feature of the Pacific States tennis championship tournament yesterday was furnished in the women's singles by Miss Laura Herron, of Palo Alto, and Miss Marjorie Wale, of San Francisco. After a court battle lasting three hours, Miss Herron captured the honors, 10—8, 11—9. Both girls were exhausted at the end of their match.

SOCIETY IDOLIZING BLONDE SCRAPPER

Frank Moran Establishes His Training Quarters at Saratoga Mecca.

Saratoga, N. Y., June 20.—Frank Moran, who is to box Jack Dillon in Brooklyn on June 29, has opened a training camp de luxe on the smooth, green lawn near Tom Luther's White Sulphur Springs Hotel and has started in earnest to get into shape for his bout with the aggressive Indianapolis boxer. Moran is striving to get down to about 197 pounds, which will be five pounds under his weight when he boxed Jess Willard.

Moran is working and playing under ideal conditions and has already become a daily attraction for the fashionable gathering of summer visitors at the Spa. Moran's camp has set a new standard in the boxing world and is far different from the usual fighting camps. Not since years ago, when Kid McCoy came to Saratoga in his prime, has a professional boxer received the flattering attention that the big Pittsburgh blonde scrapper is receiving in his daily workouts.

Moran has erected a new pavilion on the velvet-like lawn. About the ring are settees on which may be seen each day women in their summer finery of many colors and men in Panama hats and flannels. None of the rough atmosphere which usually pervades fighters' camps is evident here.

Moran has given the boxing game quite a shock by beginning his day with a game of croquet on the hotel courts. With Willie Lewis, his trainer, the heavyweight has become a proficient player. Lewis, at first, tried to swing his mallet like a golf stick, but he is learning the fine carrom shots of croquet rapidly.

In the afternoon Moran boxed with Zulu Kid and Frank Kendall. Zulu Kid is fashioned much after the type of Dillon and has all the vicious looks and rapid footwork of the Indianapolis boxer. Moran used big gloves, and while Lewis forced Zulu to go at Moran with all the aggressiveness that was in him, Moran kept the smaller man at bay with a stiff left jab. Kendall went after the Pittsburg boxer at top speed and slugged Moran for all he was worth. Some of the women at the ringside were shocked for a moment, but when they saw both fighters smiling they realized that no one could be badly hurt with the blows from the large pillows on the boxers' hands.

Moran is developing faster and shorter blows for Dillon than he did for Willard. He has already cultivated a sharp right uppercut which is expected to attract Dillon's undivided attention when he comes tearing in with wild abandon. Moran will have an advantage of about six inches in height and about twenty-eight pounds in weight, and also considerable advantage in reach. Francis is training with a view of developing a good way to stop Dillon's whirlwind attack.

With the fair visitors, Moran's bag punching, skipping the rope and his reducing exercises on the floor win much applause. The few days at the sulphur springs has given Moran a more aggressiveness and speed than when training for the Willard bout. He walks and runs about the beautiful wooded countryside like a boy on his summer vacation.

When his arduous boxing and training labors are over, Moran swims in Saratoga Lake, and his luck at fishing has become the talk of the town. The other day he came in with a string of thirty fish. Moran predicts that he will beat Dillon at his own game—that is, with speed and aggressiveness, and Trainer Lewis has mapped out his work with this sort of a campaign in view.

Moran's appetite has assumed remarkable size. His trainer says that if he goes after Dillon as he does the fried chicken, vegetables, and the chops, it will not be a long fight on June 29.

MATHEY-CHURCH CHAMPS.

Harold H. Hackett and W. Merrill Hall, metropolitan doubles champions of a year ago, were dethroned yesterday at Bronxville in the final round of this year's events by Dean Mathey and George M. Church. The new titleholders won the postponed eevnt with remarkable ease by a score of 6—1, 6—3, the brilliant play that had been expected being buried under the one-sided victory. It was the semi-final round which produced the thrills of the event, and in this Church and Mathey gained the decision over Theodore Roosevelt Pell and James S. O'Neale, Jr., at 7—5, 6—4. After finishing this contest Church and Mathey took on the one-time champions and ran away with the match, even though they had been forced to a hard contest in the semi-final.

CHANGE WOMEN'S TOURNEYS.

The tournament arranged for Hackensack links tomorrow by the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association has been postponed on account of alterations to the clubhouse. On Friday the women were to have played at Sleepy Hollow. This event has also been put over, and on that day the members of the association will play at Montclair instead.

DORIZAS A REGULAR LIBBY PAGE DISCIPLE

Has a Mail Department of His Own With the Younger Generation.

Mike Dorizas, the famous all-around athlete of the University of Pennsylvania, is the Elizabeth Page of athletics.

This statement may not sound just right, inasmuch as Mike is the intercollegiate champion strong man of the country and also intercollegiate wrestling premier. He is five feet nine inches tall and weighs 215 pounds. Yet it is a fact that he is the adviser of perplexed youth of the nations.

Mike was in Pittsburgh recently and following his series of talks to the scholastic and Y. M. C. A. athletes gave out some interesting information concerning himself.

"I get all sorts of letters from the young fellows and I answer every one of them. All are written in earnest and I treat them so, although not a few cause a smile or two as I read them. Some of the writers want to know how to diet and how to live and breathe and they write to me for this information. They even ask me what kind of a girl they should marry.

"Athletic coaches are paid high sums of money for their services," said Dorizas," and to hold their jobs they must adopt methods that will win at any cost. The real ideals of sportsmanship are tossed aside and an entirely wrong spirit of competition takes their place. The only correction of this evil, as I see it, is to have a member of the faculty as the coach and thus do away with the necessity of turning out winning teams to hold his job. This system is being used at the University of Chicago and several other places, and is working for the betterment of the sport."

Dorizas stands out far ahead of all the collegiate wrestlers. He never competed on the mat before coming to this country, yet he has never lost a match here. At Pennsylvania he has won the intercollegiate heavyweight title each of his three years throwing his six opponents in a total of eighty-one minutes and twenty seconds, a hitherto unprecedented record.

Dorizas' record for the strength test probably will stand for a long time. Previous to his arrival in this country the mark was 1,476 kilograms. In his first year Mike raised it to 1,776 kilograms and later to 1,890, the present record.

Mike has taken part in football, wrestling, the strength test, shotput and the javelin and discus throws in his college career in this country. He has won his letter three times in wrestling and once in football and the javelin throw. He was second in the javelin, free style, at London, and first in the stone throw at Athens.

BREAKS GOLF RECORD.

News has made its way up from Southampton that last week Jimmie Hepburn, last year's famous acquisition from abroad, to the ranks of American golf professionals, made the record-breaking score of 69 on his home course, the National Golf Links of America, at Southampton. The lowest score ever recorded previous to this was 72, turned in by Nelson Whitney, former Southern champion. Par for the course is 73, and the links is recognized universally as the stiffest golf proposition in this country.

HOWARD FREEMAN FOR CITY LEAGUE

Former Yale College Pitcher Added to First Baptist Roster Last Night

"Sam" Dorman was dropped by the First Baptist City League ball club at the weekly meeting in the Daily Press office last night and Howard Freeman was substituted. The addition of Freeman is a strengthening one to the Baptist clan and his entry caused no little amount of surprise.

It is likely that the newcomer will be used on the twirling mound for the church team. He is a graduate of Yale, where he gained note as a hurler and all-around athlete. Prior to entering college, Freeman played with Plainfield High School. He is the youngest of three brothers, all of whom have won fame on the baseball diamond.

Plans are underway to arrange a series of double-headers in the league in order to get rid of some of the postponements necessitated by bad weather conditions recently. It is proposed to raise the admission price for these bargain day bills to a quarter.

CARNIVAL WILL BE SPECTACULAR EVENT

Annual Affair at Cranford July 4 to Be Bigger and Better Than Ever.

The date for Cranford's beautiful Venetian Carnival this year has been fixed for July 4, and the committees of the Carnival Association in charge of the arrangements are busily at work to make the Carnival this year the biggest and best ever—a big contract, to be sure, in view of the many past performances, but all indications and reports point to the most successful one ever held.

Cranford welcomes visitors carnival night, and in past years many thousands have enjoyed the beautiful spectacle, a "Midsummer Night's Dream" in reality. The bridges and the acres of parking along the river will be brilliant with myriad lights, while the river parade of gorgeously decorated and lighted canoes and floats completes a wonderfully fascinating spectacle. There will be plenty of music also by bands stationed along the river. The river parade will start at 8 o'clock.

This year entries for the river parade are divided into seven classes, in all of which a number of valuable prizes are offered and the entry list is rapidly growing. Competition promises to be very keen in the several classes.

The Cranford carnival is not a money-making affair. Cranford and the committee in charge simply extends to all a cordial invitation to enjoy with her own citizens the beautiful Venetian carnival, which is not equaled anywhere in this section of the country.

$100,000 INFIELDERS IN A BATTING SLUMP

It is rather odd that every member of the famous $100,000 infield, which was looked upon as the greatest slugging infield in the history of the game, should be in a batting slump. Stuffy McInnis is down to .188, Jack Barry is having a hard time staying above .200, Collins is just below .250, while Baker cannot climb above the .270 mark. It also is said that Baker, Collins and Barry would be glad to go back to the Mackmen tomorrow at the terms of their old contracts.

ARE YOU THE LUCKY ONE?

Somewhere on this page the name of a Plainfielder appears. If it is yours clip out the column in which you find it and bring it to the Plainfield Daily Press office, where you will receive in return a book containing twelve admission tickets to the Plainfield Airdome, valued at $1.20. A name will appear each night on this page; if you don't happen to be the lucky one tonight continue to watch. The tickets are good at any performance and will entitle you to the same privileges enjoyed at this popular amusement center by those who pay.

BELIEVE PERSHING ATTACKED BY 25,000 MEXICANS — FUNSTON CALLS FOR 50,000 MILITIAMEN

NEW YORK GUARD WILL BE FIRST TO GO—ALL CAVALRY ORGANIZATIONS NEEDED AS SOON AS THEY ARE READY FOR SERVICE.

WILSON'S NOTE IS IN HANDS OF CARRANZA

Gen. Bell Gets Word of Battle on at Expeditionary Base at Namiquipa—Report Given Credence Because of Known Movements of Carranza Troops—Clash at Brownsville, Texas, is Expected at Any Moment Now—U. S. Soldier Captured But Released on Demand of Commander

Washington, June 21.—Carranza has received the American note; Gen. Pershing is believed to be fighting a force of 25,000 Mexicans under Gen. Trevino; Funston has called for 50,000 militia troops at once, cavalry first, and members of the punitive expedition in Mexico have been instructed to use their own discretion as to the time to attack opposing forces. This is the Mexican news of the day in a nutshell.

President Wilson, as Commander in Chief of the United States Army and Navy, is expected to issue a formal order today, despatching 65,000 National Guardsmen to the Mexican border. Troop movements will begin immediately.

New York's division will probably go first, to be followed in turn by the Guard of Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois and Massachusetts. All cavalry organizations are to be sent as soon as they can be made ready for service.

Should troops be required before the Northern organized militia can reach the border, the Guard of several of the Southern States, rushing to mobilization camps, may be despatched to Major Gen. Funston without delay.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood, Senior Major General in the service, is expected to be despatched immediately to the border to assume command of the entire army, and Major Gen. Funston, because of his long and intimate knowledge of Mexican affairs, will be detailed to command the Army of Intervention, should intervention be made necessary.

BELIEVE PERSHING IS FIGHTING.

El Paso, Tex., June 21.—Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing has been attacked by Carranza troops and a hot fight is on south of the American punitive expeditionary force's base at Namiquipa, Mexico, according to information received by Brig. Gen. George Bell, Jr., commanding the American force here.

There were no official despatches from Pershing himself, but word came to Gen. Bell from United States Immigration officials at Columbus, N. M., the army base. The report is given credence, in view of Carranza's repeated threats to attack if Pershing moved southward, westward or eastward.

The attack was first made, it is reported, upon an advance cavalry detachment sent south by Gen. Pershing. As soon as it was attacked, its supports and reserve are said to have come up, and Pershing sent further reinforcements to its aid.

Twenty-five thousand Carranzistas, in two columns, are reported closing in on Pershing, and official reports from army headquarters in Mexico declared a battle was imminent.

Reports of a battle somewhere near Brownsville, Tex., are momentarily expected. A large force of infantry from Brig. Gen. James Parker's command there was rushed down the Rio Grande late last night in civilian automobiles. No information was furnished save that the troops were "for patrol duty tonight."

Reports from Matamoras, Mexico, explained the despatch by the statement that Luis de la Rosa, notorious Mexican bandit upon whose head Texas has set a price, and who, President Wilson in his message yesterday to Carranza openly charged, is the confidant and ward of Carranza generals, is approaching the border with 700 armed bandits, with the announced intention of making another raid.

The arrest of an American soldier near Casas Grandes by Mexican soldiers is believed to have been an effort to provoke Gen. Pershing to attack. The soldier was released when Pershing demanded his release, threatening to attack in force if he was not freed.

Yucatan Not at War.

Washington, June 21.—Official denial was today received of the report that Yucatan had independently of Mexican Government declared war on the United States. Consul Guyant at Progresso forwarded to the State Department a message from Gov. Alvaroda, of Yucatan, denying that such action had been taken.

LINE HELD BY AMERICAN TROOPS IN MEXICO

On the map the positions occupied by American forces both in Mexico and on the border are indicated by circles; the positions held by the principal bodies of Carranza troops by black dots. The American line from El Paso to Colonia Dublan, the main base, and Casas Grandes headquarters, and thence to Namiquipa, Pershing's advance base, is practically enveloped by the Mexican forces. The American position is indicated by a black line, that of the Mexicans by a dotted line. The United States Pacific fleet has been ordered into Mexican waters, and the arrows indicate the ports on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts from which the army, in conjunction with the fleets, might operate.

TROOP D REACHED CAMP AT NOON; MEN ARE EAGERLY GOING ABOUT PREPARATIONS FOR REAL FIGHTING; IN A STERN MOOD

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, June 21.—Troop D reached Camp Fielder at 12:10 today and is busily engaged this afternoon in pitching tents and otherwise preparing for its first night under arms. The ride from Plainfield was made without mishap of any kind and the men are eagerly going about their initial preparations for the days of drillings that will be necessary before newly-recruited members are fit to fight for Uncle Sam.

As an evidence of the ability of the Troop to adapt itself to conditions of actual warfare, a luncheon was prepared and served on the train. Captain Borden realized that his men would not arrive at Camp Fielder until late noon, and knowing that they faced a hard afternoon in putting up tents, getting equipment into condition for use and other numerous details of occupancy, he instructed the cooks to get busy in the baggage car, so that the Troop would be fed and ready for work when the train reached its destination. As a result of this order, the men piled out of the cars at 12:10, well fed and in shape for the work before them.

With the stirring words of Mayor Calkins, the cheers of thousands of friends and the tearful goodbyes of loved ones still ringing in their ears, Plainfield's cavalrymen were in a serious mood as they rode across the State this morning. At every station they were greeted with waving flags and rousing cheers, showing that the patriotism of New Jersey people is stirred up. These receptions served to brighten many of the troopers, but none were made to forget the stern mission on which they have left home. The Troop realizes that it is on serious business, and it is in a serious mood. There was no skylarking on the train, little joking or jesting in the cars. For the most part the troopers conversed in small groups, talking always of the threatening movements of Carranza troops, and of work necessary to make Watchung Troop better qualified to acquit itself with honor on the field of battle. Reports in morning papers convinced them that they were needed on the border, and they are anxious to get into action as soon as possible, yet realizing that some hard work must be done to make the organization as a whole fit to represent New Jersey, because of the many "rookies" taken in yesterday and last night to recruit to war strength.

Watchung Troop found the First Regiment, the Fourth Regiment and the Hospital Corps already in camp. They were the first to arrive and were busily engaged in putting up tents when the Plainfielders reached the camping grounds assigned to them.

Darkening skies threaten here at noon and it is feared that rain will fall before the camp is pitched. If it will hold off until 3 p. m. all equipment of the Troop will be under cover and nothing will get wet but the troopers.

GOOD LUCK AND GOD'S BLESSINGS MAYOR'S LAST WISHES IN HIS IMPRESSIVE ADDRESS TO TROOP

FIVE THOUSAND REPRESENTATIVE CIVILIANS AT FREIGHT YARD TO BID FAREWELL TO CAVALRYMEN OFF TO SEA GIRT.

CHEERS, MUSIC AND TEARS FOR GUARDSMEN

Six Cars Compose Special Train Transporting Men, Horses and Supplies to Mobilization Camp—Will Be Mustered Into Government Service Immediately—Prominent Persons Attend Parting Demonstration—Parade Behind Band From Headquarters to Station.

Five thousand pairs of eyes beaming with admiration on through a mist of moisture bade an enthusiastic and impressive farewell to seventy-three brilliant examples of American manhood garbed in the regalia of Troop D, First Squadron New Jersey Cavalry, when they left the Central Railroad freight yards here at 9:57 this morning for Sea Girt, to be mustered into government service pending action on the Mexican question. Trumpeter Warren Ackerman sounded assembly at 5 o'clock this morning, and from that time until the special train steamed out of the freight yards the troopers were the center of attraction.

Seldom has Plainfield witnessed a demonstration of the calibre exhibited this morning. Representative Plainfielders, merchants, professional leaders, politicians and individuals in every walk of life, laid aside their morning duties and paid personal respects to the hurculean detachment possessed of the cream of the city's male element. Wives, mothers, sisters, sweethearts, clung to dear ones attired in natty olive drab uniforms until the last toot of the Central engine signalled all aboard.

Fitting it was that Mayor Leighton Calkins should be called upon by Captain Borden to voice the sentiments of the municipality at the freight yards. Hundreds of fond personal goodbyes were being passed among the cavalry, but that no individual might be forgotten and that each might be inspired with a feeling that he was representing Plainfield as well as Uncle Sam, Mayor Calkins delivered a short, straight-to-the-point and impressive address that sent the tingling meaning of the true sense of duty shooting through the veins of every listener.

The city executive sent the soldiers on their way with "Goodbye, Good Luck, God Bless You." He then called for three cheers, which were given with a vim by the assemblage. In his remarks, Mayor Calkins impressed the seriousness of the occasion on the minds of the departing men, declaring that no one now knows to what test these men will be put before the present Mexican muddle is cleared up.

Officers and men were dismissed at 10 o'clock last night and ordered to report at 5 o'clock this morning. All during yesterday afternoon and up to a late hour last night recruits were examined, and more than twenty-five had to be turned away because of the lack of equipment. The names of these applicants were listed by the officers, and when the material arrives at Sea Girt they will be summoned to camp immediately. Indications at present point to a delegation of the maximum war strength, 100, being at Sea Girt with Troop D in less than a fortnight. Recruiting officers will remain at the Putnam avenue headquarters during the next three days ready to receive new men and provide them with instructions regarding the service.

The finishing touches were put on the preparations for departure this morning, one hour and a half of the time being consumed by Captain Borden in drilling sixteen "rookies."

Headed by the Dutch Arms Band, the troop marched four abreast through Richmond street to the freight house and was called to attention to listen to the city's farewell. The equipment had previously been loaded in two mail coaches and the horses were stalled in two box cars. Two passenger coaches were provided for the men.

Every inch of available space in the big freight yards was taken up by the throng of well-wishers and admiring friends and relatives. The seriousness of the occasion for the first time struck home to many of these dear to the troopers. Every one of the seventy-three guardsmen was fighting a battle in his own heart and mind to force a light and cheerful countenance, and in departing they resembled a group of vacationists rather than a detail of thoroughbred fighters who may become mixed up in a real battlefield slaughter before many more moons roll by.

MORE RECRUITS NEEDED--- WHAT ENLISTMENT MEANS

First Lieut. Daniel Runkle, Corporal Charles D. Wardlaw and Trooper Donald Fullerton will remain in Plainfield for the next two or three days to recruit new men, and will be stationed at the headquarters, 1120 Putnam avenue, morning, afternoon and evening. At present 73 men have been enlisted, but the maximum war strength is 100 and it is expected that this number will be reached within twenty-four hours. The troop is now awaiting the arrival of additional supplies, and as soon as this arrives the new men will be sent to the Sea Girt camp.

Those who registered now will be enlisted for three years' regular service, as the old blank forms are being used by the recruiting officers. If the new blanks were available the men would be sworn in for three years' regular service and four years' reserve service. Applicants must be of good character, best health and have at least two references from reliable parties. For further information either 'phone 2650 or call at the headquarters.

Plainfield troopers may be reached via mail by addressing "Troop D, First Squadron New Jersey Cavalry, State Mobilization Camp, Sea Girt, N. J."

Immediately upon arrival at the encampment the troopers will be mustered into government service and will be subject to a call to the border at any time. The Daily Press will keep in touch with every movement through a representative at the camp, and relatives may obtain information at this office any time during the day or evening.

Announcement of the time relatives and friends will be allowed to visit the troopers at Sea Girt will be announced later.

The troop headquarters in Plainfield at 1120 Putnam avenue, will be in charge of Lieut. Runkle. Those persons desiring to send clothing or other material ordered by troopers to the State camp should first consult the officers.

HOSPITAL CORPS OFF WITH BIG OVATION

Plainfielders in Special Train That Left Elizabeth Shortly After Noon.

(Special to the Press.)

Elizabeth, June 21.—Sixty members of the First New Jersey Field Hospital Corps, including five from Plainfield, left the Central Railroad depot here at 12:20 this afternoon, bound for the State mobilization camp at Sea Girt. The corps was in command of Captain Kraker, and was transported with its equipment in three cars.

Major Harold D. Corbusier, of Plainfield, active head of the corps, left Elizabeth early this morning in his automobile so as to arrive at the camp in advance of the men. Five hundred persons greeted the enlisted men at the Elizabeth depot and a rousing demonstration was given in their behalf.

The Plainfield members are Raymond Manley, Acting Orderly Alfred Seals, Clinton Berrien, Taylor Brokaw and James Stranahan. The remainder of the corps includes men from all parts of the State and there are a number of vacancies to be filled within the next twenty-four hours.

GREEK CABINET RESIGNS AGAIN

London, June 21.—A despatch to a news agency from Athens says that the Greek Cabinet, headed by Premier Skouloudis, has resigned. King Constantine called former Premier Zaimis to the palace and conferred with him. It is believed that the portfolio of premier was offered to M. Zaimis, who is classed as a neutral.

Bulgaria Will Not Aid.

Amsterdam, June 21.—It is reported from German sources that Austria has appealed to Bulgaria for aid in resisting the advance of the Russians in Bukovina, and that the government of Czar Ferdinand has turned a deaf ear to the request.

Lull at Verdun.

Paris, June 21.—There was a lull in the infantry fighting on the Verdun front last night. The War Office in a communique today stated that neither side delivered any infantry assault. There were vigorous artillery duels, however, on both sides.

GOES INSANE ON TRAIN IS TAKEN OFF BY POLICE

An unknown Polock suffered an attack of insanity while en route from Baltimore to New York last night and was taken from the train at Plainfield. He is being held at the police station and will be sent to Morris Plains. The man refuses to talk and there is no way his name can be learned.

Miss Anna O. Hartt, a school teacher of Charlotte, N. C., is visiting her cousin, John J. Gifford, locally well-known as a writer of humorous verses.

SECOND REGIMENT OUT BY SATURDAY

Company K Members Optimistic and Anxious to Get Into Action.

Although still optimistic Captain Charles Peterson, of Company K, Second Regiment, up to a late hour this afternoon had received no further orders relative to the part Plainfield troop would play in the State mobilization plans. That the Second Regiment would be called for military service on the Mexican border was the statement made last night by Major Conrad Hall, commander of the First Battalion at Elizabeth. It is the general belief of Company K members and those of the Elizabeth companies that the Second Regiment will be out by Saturday and the entire battalion is ready to move at a moment's notice.

It is thought that the call for the First Battalion will be made after the First Brigade is settled at Sea Girt, and all preparations are now being made at the mobilization camp to receive the additional troops.

Company K members are "on edge." They are all anxiously awaiting the call to arms and the armory has been a congregating place for almost everyone of the sixty odd men since Sunday night. Captain Peterson, in an interview with a Daily Press reporter this morning, declared that both he and his men felt slighted and hurt at not being included in the initial call, but expected a summons at any minute now.

The Second Regiment ranks as the most efficient in the State and little trouble will be experienced in recruiting up to the full war strength. The original orders called for brigade organization and this is probably the best reason for the fact that Company K and its regiment was not called at the first sounding.

TAFT TO BE STAR OF CHAUTAUQUA

Will Speak on World Relations of U. S. Saturday Night.

FRIDAY OPENING DAY

Four Days of High Class Amusement Offered Plainfield People—Tickets on Sale Now—Save Money by Buying in Advance.

With William Howard Taft, former President of the United States, and a deep student of international affairs, as a headliner, the 1916 Community Chautauqua will open in Plainfield Friday of this week. The Chautauqua will run four days and the highest possible class of entertainment is offered local people

Just at this time America is more concerned over her relations with foreign countries than any other one subject. The Mexican situation has reached a crisis; each day brings a new menace to the neutrality of the United States in the great war that engulfs all Europe, and to those who are aware of the warlike preparations going on in the east there is the yellow face of Japan always leering venomously from out of the Pacific.

The subject assigned to ex-President Taft is "Our World Relations," and no man in the country, excepting the few now in charge of the diplomatic affairs of the nation, is better fitted to discuss this subject. Mr Taft was twice governor of the Philippines, and he is yet the greatest authority on Philippine subjects, which means that he is prepared to discuss the possibility of war with Japan for over the possession of these islands will the break come, say the jingoists. Mr. Taft was later secretary of war, and served so well in that office that he was elevated to the Presidency. Always a loyal American, his patriotism will prove refreshing at this time when the nation is calling her men to repel a foreign invasion, and his vast knowledge of international affairs will give his hearers a familiarity

P. S. C. DIRECTORS IN NEW QUARTERS

Event is Marked by Delightful Luncheon at Robert Treat Hotel, Newark.

MANY GUESTS PRESENT

Directors Vote to Recommend to Stockholders That Capital Stock Be Increased From $25,000,000 to $50,000,000.

The directors of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey occupied the board room on the eighth floor of the Public Service Terminal, 80 Park place, Newark, for the first time at their monthly session yesterday afternoon. Prior to the business meeting the event was marked by a luncheon at the Robert Treat Hotel, at which Arthur Newbold, of J. P. Morgan & Company and Drexel & Company; Donald G. Geddes, of Clarke, Dodge & Company, and Frederick W. Egner, vice president of the Fidelity Trust Company, which financial concerns had a part in the financing of the terminal project, were guests. After the lunch the directors and guests made an inspection of the terminal from the subway floor to the roof.

At the business session the directors decided that all employes who are at present members of the National Guard called to service in connection with the trouble with Mexico will have their positions held for them and their wages continued while they are absent in the performance of such military service. The men will file with the treasurer power of attorney for payment of wages to persons they may specify.

This action of the directors was an amplification of a previous committee report approving the payment of wages to employes who desired to attend the Plattsburg Camp or other Federal or State training camps and was supplemented on the suggestion of President Thomas N. McCarter in view of the Mexican developments, which had not reached the stage where the guardsmen were called upon when the subject was first considered.

The directors voted to recommend to the stockholders that the capital stock of the corporation be increased from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000. No plan was discussed as to the issuance of stock in case the action is approved but it will probably be issued from time to time.

Because of the calling out of the First Brigade of the New Jersey National Guard and the indefiniteness of the length of time the brigade will be kept in active military service, Brigadier-General Edwin W. Hine, its commander, resigned his position as secretary of the corporation. In recognition of the fact that it would be necessary to have an officer available for secretarial duties General Hine's resignation as secretary was accepted by the board which immediately appointed him to his former position with the title of assistant to the president, at the same salary, and gave him an indefinite leave of absence.

Percy Ingalls, who has been general agent of Public Service; was made secretary and an additional assistant secretaryship was created and Charles M. Breder, who has been engineer of the franchise bureau, was chosen to fill this position.

The directors voted a quarterly dividend of two per cent. on Public Service stock, instead of the previous quarterly rate of one and three-quarters per cent. This places the stock on an eight per cent. basis.

BIG AUTO PARADE TO FEATURE ANNIVERSARY

Newark, June 21.—Newark's big automobile pageant, which will be one of the chief features of the city's 250th anniversary celebration, will be held next Saturday night, and it is expected that close to two thousand decorated and illuminated motor vehicles will be in line in the different divisions.

The pageant will be made up of nine divisions, including clubs, in the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey, the State body, dealers' section for passenger cars, and miscellaneous groups; a grotesque division; motor truck club division, dealers' truck section and miscellaneous trucks, jitney busses, and floral, illuminated and historical floats.

More than a thousand dollars' worth of prizes will be awarded in the different divisions.

Governor James F. Fielder, State Motor Vehicle Commissioner William L. Dill, Mayor Thomas L. Raymond and a host of local, State and National dignitaries have been invited to head the guests' division, and to review the pageant at the city hall.

EASILY DECIDED.

This Question Should Be Answered Easily by Plainfield People.

Which is wiser—to have confidence in the opinions of your fellow-citizens, of people you know, or depend on statements made by utter strangers residing in faraway places? Read the following:

C. L. Treat, painter and paperhanger, 411 East Third street, Plainfield, says: "I suffered for a long time from kidney trouble and for years couldn't get relief. My back ached constantly and I had pain across my kidneys. My kidneys were in bad shape and I was all run down—in fact, was almost a physical wreck. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Randolph's drug store and my experience was so satisfactory that I cannot make my endorsement too strong. I simply wouldn't be without Doan's Kidney Pills on hand."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Treat had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

TAFT STAR OF CHATAUQUA

with the big questions of the day that could not be gained through years of individual study.

Mr. Taft speaks on the second day, Saturday evening. On the same program will be O'Mara and Wetmore, in song recital and impersonations.

The Chautauqua tent is being erected on Watchung avenue, near the corner of North, next to the Friends church, and in the rear of the tennis courts. All afternoon programs will start at 2:30 and evening programs at 7:30. The Chautauqua is in charge of a committee of well known local people. If a profit is made by the entertainment every cent will be turned over to local charities. Season tickets, good for each afternoon and evening entertainments on the program are offered for sale at $2. Children's tickets for the entire program can be had for $1. Season tickets bought at the gate will be $2.25. Admissions for performances will vary, if single tickets are bought at the gate for each entertainment, and the total will be more than $3.50, so that $1.50 can be saved by buying tickets in advance from the local committee. They are now on sale at the following places: Hall's drug store, Randolph's pharmacy, Hodge's pharmacy, Miller's drug store, The Daily Press, The Courier-News, State Trust Company, Plainfield Trust Company, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and Marshall's laundry.

Although Mr. Taft's coming is most timely, he is not the only star on the Chautauqua program. On Friday afternoon there will be an opening concert by the American quartette, four male voices that blend in perfect harmony. They are also an instrumental quartette, violin, 'cello, flute and piano, and they give readings and whistling solos that always bring down the house. The Junior Chautauqua will also be organized on Friday afternoon.

Friday evening there will be a musical entertainment by the quartette, preceding the program, also Clayton Conrad in his famous "chalk talks," and an address on "The Community Conscience," by Lee Francis Lybarger, of the Philadelphia bar.

On Saturday afternoon Ole Theobaldi, known in America and Europe as the successor of Ole Bull and Paganini, will give a violin recital, assisted by Florence Alice Stitzel, operatic soprano, and Mlle. Helen Kelere, piano virtuoso.

In the evening there will be William Howard Taft and O'Hara and Wetmore.

The program for Monday and Tuesday will be announced later.

TROOPER TAPS

Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart, now chairman of the recruiting committee of New Jersey for the Plattsburg camp, was one of the first to arrive at the Putnam avenue headquarters this morning. He mingled with the troopers and congratulated the officers and men on their worthy appearance and stand.

City Judge William G. DeMeza, Police Chief P. S. Kiely, Borough Councilman Frank Mobus, and scores of other well known Plainfielders also greeted the troops at the headquarters.

Noticed at the freight yards were former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, Mayor Leighton Calkins, Marion Ackerman, Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, as well as many other prominent men.

A feature that attracted no little amount of attention and comment at the yards was the unfurling of an American flag bearing this insignia: "New York Association, Veterans of the Mexican War, 1859." The emblem was torn and ragged and the veteran who carried it was grizzled and gray.

Morning newspapers arrived at the camp shortly before 7 o'clock. They were eagerly grabbed up and the Mexican question was the center of attraction for the next half hour.

This sentence caught the eye of the guardsmen: "Whole Army of Cavalry Needed to Fight Guerillas."

An hour's concert, including a program of patriotic numbers, was rendered by the Dutch Arms Band at the camp prior to the parade.

Strange as it may seem the sixteen "rookies" were the first to be "shot at." Photographer Paul R. Collier snapped the recruits during the drill early this morning.

One trooper was heard to declare: "As long as Uncle Sam gives me enough to eat I'll be satisfied." Others were worrying about neglected beards, the ban on high power autos and other features of a civilian's daily life.

Captain Borden informed the rookies that their guns weighed but nine pounds during practice this morning. He added later that the weapons would weigh about twenty-nine pounds after the recruits had lugged them around for an hour or so.

Trooper Lewis Alberts, of Hoboken, has been voted the hardest worker in the detachment. All day yesterday, last night and this morning Alberts supervised the packing and shipping.

Someone at the freight yards wanted to know why they didn't take the Dutch Arms Band. Whether or not his question bore any significance we do not know but the musicians failed to take the tip and are still with us.

The Daily Press has been selected the "Camp Paper." While at Sea Girt the troopers will be provided with copies each day.

GREGORY TO BE NAMED TO SUCCEED HUGHES

Washington, June 21.—It was announced at the White House today that U. S. Attorney General Thomas Watt Gregory, of Austin, Texas, would be appointed to the Supreme Court to succeed Charles E. Hughes. John W. Davis, of West Virginia, will succeed Gen. Gregory.

BELIEVE PERSHING ATTACKED

on the west coast of Mexico the Navy Department this morning ordered the first division of destroyers of the Pacific fleet comprising Paul Jones, Pebble, Steawart and Whipple to steam from San Diego Bay to take stations in Mexican waters to be assigned by Admiral Winslow, commanding the Pacific fleet.

Funston Calls for Troops.

San Antonio, Tex., June 21.—Major General Funston, fearing attack on Brigadier General Pershings' forces, has made a second request to the War Department that all available militia, especially cavalry, be rushed to the border at once. This request was sent to Washington today. Word has been received at Major General Funston's headquarters that the New York and Illinois cavalry are already fully equipped and ready to take the field. It has now been established that the Mexicans who attacked the Americans recently at San Igaa Ignacio and Matamoras were really Carranza soldiers and not bandits.

Pershing May Start War.

Washington, June 21.—If Gen. Trevino makes any menacing move against the American expeditionary force, General Pershing has entire direction to take the offensive against him at once. No new orders have been issued to Pershing and no restrictions have been imposed upon him. The press reports that two distinct Carranza forces are now moving upon his line of communication have not been confirmed in War Department despatches. Denials were made today that the Administration has any plan calling for a volunteer army at present. The militia mobilization is proceeding in excellent shape according to General A. L. Miles, chief of the militia division.

One Final Chance.

It has been decided for the present, perhaps for the next ten days, congress will not be asked to pass the proposed resolutions authorizing President Wilson to send the militia into Mexico. There is no need for this authorization at once. Congress is ready to act the moment it is requested to do so by President Wilson.

The administration is giving General Carranza one last chance by refraining from doing anything that looks like actual war.

But it is not halting its preparations for actual war one moment and will not do so, so long as the present situation lasts.

For it is the belief in official circles here that the first chief in his desperate plight cannot choose at this late day the only course which will avoid an armed clash—submission. So the worst is anticipated in high quarters in Washington.

Ingratitude Charged.

Moreover, there is contained in the note handed to Senor Arredondo something which well may prove an even more potent influence in deciding General Carranza upon the desperate course of war than the refusal of the United States to take American troops out of Mexico. It is the lash of criticism which the administratioin applies to General Carranza personally, both for his conduct and for the impotency of his government.

The first chief is told that he is an ingrate. And he is told that a government which can protect foreign lives and property no better than his is unworthy of the name of government.

"What," it is being asked here, "will be the effect of this upon a Latin-American government at a time when the streets of the capital city are thronged with mobs demonstrating against the 'gringo invaders' and when 'gringo' refugees are being hurried from the city by hundreds?"

What Navy Will Do.

The program of the navy in the event of a break with Mexico was made known today. The navy will make effective a blockade of all Mexican ports on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. This work, it was said, will be comparatively simple and will not even take the larger ships out of their present work of battle drills and maneuvers. The blockade will be effected chiefly with destroyers, gunboats and ships of that class.

At Tampico there may be occasion however, for landing operations for the marines since the large and vitally important foreign oil holdings there probably will have to be protected by the United States and the foreign employees of the oil companies protected while they remain to operate the oil wells.

If the 1,000 Americans in Mexico City can be induced to leave and the 2,300 Americans about Tampico are placed in safety the problem of caring for Americans in Mexico will be solved fairly well. The few scattered Americans in other places have been steadily coming out for the last two weeks, state department reports have shown.

MAY SUMMON 500,000 MEN

Invasion of Mexico Would Take Large Force.

FEAR GUERRILLA WARFARE

President Said to Be Considering Plan to Insure a Short and Successful Campaign if Hostilities Begin—Climate and Long Guerrilla Warfare Are Feared.

Washington, June 21.—The calling of 500,000 volunteers to the colors in the event of war with Mexico is said to be under consideration by President Wilsor and his cabinet.

Secretary Baker declined to make any statement on the subject, but high officers said announcement of the plan awaits upon news from General Pershing's headquarters.

Officials declared there are only two alternatives for Carranza. Either he will submit tamely to threats of physical force contained in Secretary Lansing's note or he will call on all Mexicans to make war on the United States.

In the first event the federal army now in Mexico or along the border, supplemented by the 100,000 or more national guard troops to go there, will be sufficient to carry out any further waiting and watching policy.

In the second event, officials have decided, it will require probably 500,000 more men to face the situation in Mexico. Reports from Pershing stated that Mexican people within the sphere of influence of the American army are opposed to Carranza. This condition does not obtain, it was admitted, in territory really controlled by Carranza.

Various boards have estimated the number of men necessary for a Mexican campaign. The head of one board declared he would not go into Mexico unless he had an initial army of 250,000 and 500,000 volunteers to draw from.

Practically a whole army of cavalry is needed now, this officer said, to fight guerrilla bands into which the Mexican army will break up when it is defeated in a pitched battle.

COTTON CROP IS SMALL.

Census Bureau Figures Show Least Since 1909.

Washington, June 21.—Final statistics of the 1915 cotton crop of the United States, issued by the census bureau, place the production at 11,191,820, equivalent 500 pound bales, the smallest crop since 1909. Production in every state showed a decrease, the greatest proportionately being in Oklahoma, where the crop was only a trifle more than half as large as 1914.

Production of linter cotton reached a record, notwithstanding the smaller crop. In all, 880,780 bales were ginned, exceeding the 1914 output by nearly 24,000 bales. The increase was due in part to the highest prices obtained for the fiber, which is used in the manufacture of guncotton and smokeless powder.

SEE END OF STEAM LINES.

Railway Master Mechanics Predict Electrification.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 21.—The electrification of the railroad systems of the entire country was predicted at the annual convention of the American Railway Master Mechancis' association and affiliated bodies.

Although the steam locomotives had their strong advocates who advised caution in the revolution, all speakers admitted the growing favor of the electric power. They declared that the universal change, not alone for passenger service, but for freight as well, would prove ultimately an economic measure.

"PRESS GAG" BILL UP.

Many Senators Open Fight on Burleson Bill.

Washington, June 21.—War on the "press gag" clause of the postoffice appropriation bill, dictated by Postmaster General Burleson, has begun in the senate.

If this clause is enacted into law over the protest of every publisher in the United States it will restore to the postoffice department power to gag the press by arbitrarily routing magazines and newspapers by either freight or mail.

Opposition to such action spread among Democrats in the upper house.

Weather Forecast.

MISS M'CUTCHEON BECOMES WAR BRIDE

Former Plainfield Girl Wedded to Walter Logan, Who is Called to the Colors.

The lengthy list of war brides resulting from the sudden orders for mobilization of the New York State militia will this afternoon include the name of Miss Verna McCutcheon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Cutcheon, former well known residents of Plainfield, whose home is now in Washington, Conn. Plans for an elaborate wedding to take place Saturday have been cast into the discard and at four o'clock today she will be made the wife of Walter S. Logan, a member of Troop B of Squadron A, of the New York National Guard. The ceremony will of necessity be simplified, owing to the short notice given before the bridegroom would have to report at Camp Whitman.

The ceremony will be performed at the home of the bride's parents and as many of the bridal party as can reach the scene will take part as originally planned. A large number of invitations had been issued and many of those invited wil be present although the word is too short for numerous others to reach Washington in time. Among those going from this city are two sisters of the bride, Mrs. L. A. Williams, Jr., of West Eighth street, and Mrs. G. C. R. Grandy, of Evergreen avenue, who with their husbands left this morning. A number of other well known Plainfielders started for Washington this afternoon as invited guests. The McCutchen home in Plainfield was at what is now known as "Oakwood" on Plainfield avenue. When the family removed to Washington several years ago Miss McCutcheon was regarded as one of Plainfield's most charming young women and the announcement of her approaching wedding was looked upon as a distinct social event. Mr. Logan is a member of the law firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, with offices at No. 40 Wall street, New York. He is a member of many of New York's leading clubs.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF DUNELLEN SCHOOLS

Interesting Program Presented and Prize Awards Made to Honor Pupils.

The graduation exercises of the eighth grade of the Whittier School, Dunellen, was held in the Dunellen Presbyterian church last evening, and the edifice was well filled. The church had been appropriately decorated for the ocasion by the teachers and older scholars. The invocation was offered by the Rev. E. R. Brown, the pastor of the church. Following the song, "The Red Scarf," by the chorus, Elmer Swackhamer, the first honor pupil, recited "The Schoolmaster's Guest" in able fashion. Following another selection by the chorus, Edward Murphy, the second honor pupil, recited, "What Jane Jones Said." This was well rendered and created general laughter.

The address of the evening was delivered by Roy M. D. Richardson, of Bound Brook, a graduate of Rutgers, who has won a Rhodes scholarship and will attend Oxford next year. The subject of his address was "Preparedness." He spoke of this as the great issue of the day from a national standpoint and of what a large following had been won to the cause. Then, turning to the pupils, he told them that it is as essential for the individual to be prepared for the battle of life as it is for the nation to be prepared to resist invasion. To be fully prepared, Mr. Richardson said, one must be mentally, morally and physically fit. He spoke of the ancient Greeks as the most completely developed people since the world began. The Romans, the speaker said, were developed mentally and physically, but neglected the moral, while the ancient Christians were developed mentally and morally, but no physically. We of the present day, Mr. Richardson said, are deficient in moral development.

Lincoln, the speaker said, was a fully developed man and his life is the bright and shining light for the youth of today.

The chorus sang "Swing Song," after Mr. Richardson's address and then the medals and prizes were awarded by Vice President Mahlon R. Dayton, of the Board of Education, the following awards being made: For proficiency in scholarship and deportment: Highest rating, boy, Elmer Swackhamer, bronze medal; highest rating, girl, Jessie Sutphen, medal; for greatest improvement in penmanship during the year, Kathryn Maier, prize book; for English composition, James Greenhalgh, prize book; for clear records in attendance and punctuality, Jessie Sutphen, book; Ernestine Pernell, Lillian Johnson, Kenter Post, Paul Nelson.

NEWARK DISTRICT CONFERENCE OPENS

Organization, Roll Call and Financial Reports Feature the First Ssession.

The district conference of the Newark District of the New Jersey Annual Conference of the A. M. E. church opened this morning at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, at 10 o'clock, with devotional services, organization, roll call and financial reports. Recess was held at noon and at two o'clock the afternoon session was held. Reports on local conditions and the ensuing year's plans were read by each pastor. Rev. Solomon Porter Hood is the presiding elder of the conference.

Papers were limited to thirty minutes for each pastor. At the session this afternoon papers on the following topics were read as given below: "Is the Negro gaining or losing in material resources; if gaining, how? If losing, why?" paper by Rev. John P. Sampson, D. D.; discussion led by Rev. J. N. Still. "The difference between morality and religion, and showing whether our moral advancement is equal to our intellectual and financial, and in what virtues we are on the advance or decline," paper by Rev. I. S. Yemmans, discussion, led by Rev. J. H. Vanderhorst. "What are the missionary needs of this district, to what extent are they being met, and a plan by which the work can be more effectually done?" paper by Rev. R. B. Smith, and discussion led by Rev. J. O. Vick.

Rev. I. W. Morrishow conducted the ritualistic service, after which the Conference sang, "Bless be the tie that binds." The Conference organization resulted as follows: Rev. I. Francis Vanderhorst, secretary, and Rev. Delainey, assistant; Rev. I. W. Morrishow, reporter to the Christian Recorder; Rev. W. H. Hicks, reporter to the Southern Christian Recorder; Rev. Collier, reporter to the city papers, and Rev. W. D. Brittingham, marshal.

Dr. Hood, in his remarks to the Conference said in part:

"This is a very peculiar district, in that, it has five ministers who have served as presiding elder, all of whom did well and helped to make the district what it is. The ministers of the district and their congregations have received me very cordially. Every minister has my highest regard. My care and love for you may not be so very expressive as may seem necessary, as I am not emotional, but God helping me, you will find in me a heart of love; if you do not, pray for me, that the Holy Spirit may enter my heart."

Many ministers were introduced to the Conference, among whom were Drs. Cooper, Roundtree and Addams, presiding elders, who made timely addresses.

The services this evening will commence at eight o'clock, with devotional services and a sermon by the Rev. J. Derricks. The address of welcome for Ministerial Union will be delivered by the Rev. W. L. Imes, pastor of the Bethel chapel.

Our blue serges are no bluer than other blue serges, but the blue is confined to the fabric and does not encroach upon the fit.

They are blue in warp and wool, but not in workmanship, blue in texture, but not in tailoring, blue but not depressed.

In fact, a Rothberg blue serge is just the same as any other, but a shade above it in tailoring and cut.

PRESBYTERY RATIFIES CALL TO LOCAL PASTOR

Rev. J. O. McKelvey to Be Installed at Watchung Avenue Church Tuesday.

The Presbytery of Elizabeth at its meeting at Branch Mills yesterday ratified the call of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, of North Plainfield, to Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, and fixed Tuesday night, June 27, as the time Mr. McKelvey will be installed as pastor of the church.

This action is the most unique in the history of the Presbytery. Mr. McKelvey was still in the seminary twenty-three years ago when he became the pastor of what was then Warren chapel, and continued as such until recently the organization became an independent body known as the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church. This change was approved by the Presbytery of Elizabeth and then followed the promulgation of the call through J. W. Gavett and Theodore Martin representing the church. The proceedings yesterday were marked by considerable interest, and many of the ministers commented favorably on the action and took occasion to congratulate Mr. McKelvey upon the work he has accomplished and the fact that he is to continue as pastor of his church. The program for the installation will be announced within a few days.

38 GRADUATES WILL RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

LEAP YEAR DANCES TO FEATURE ALUMNI REUNION

The Alumni Association of the Plainfield High School, with the co-operation of the Board of Education, has secured one of the finest New York orchestras to furnish music for the dance to be held in honor of the graduating class at the High School auditorium tomorrow evening. It is the intention of the Alumni Association to make this occasion the most elaborate and complete entertainment of its kind ever given to any senior class and it is hoped that the people of Plainfield will assist the association by being present at this time.

The committee in charge of this dance has announced that during the program there will be several leap-year dances, which, heretofore, have proven very successful and added a great deal to the enjoyment of the occasion. Arrangements have been made for refreshments to be served during the intermission. Practically all of the expenses in connection with this dance are borne by the Alumni Association and in order to cover same, a portion of the tickets have been set aside for sale to the public and they may be purchased at Miller's drug store. The Alumni Association hopes that all members of the association, as well as those wishing to attend the dance, will secure tickets immediately so that proper arrangements may be made covering refreshments, etc.

OPEN-AIR SCHOOL TO BE OPENED JULY 10

Anti-Tuberculosis League Decide to Conduct Six Weeks' Special Session.

The executive committee of the Anti-Tuberculosis League, at its meeting last night, decided that the open-air school should be re-opened on Monday, July 10, and continued for a period of six weeks as a special summer session. This action was deemed desirable largely by reason of the great number of children who need to be properly taken care of at this time.

During the past season this school has been remarkably successful in its work, and all of the children attending have shown marked improvement, not only in their physical condition, but in their studies as well. The fact that the school is to be kept open this summer is appreciated by the children as well as their parents, who see such an excellent opportunity for physical improvement.

Persons who are interested in this most excellent charity are invited to visit the school and learn more about the institution. Those in charge will appreciate any interest and help to carry on the work.

SUFFRAGISTS ENJOY A THIMBLE PARTY

Members of Equal Suffrage League Meet at Home of Mrs. Henry C. White.

A delightful thimble party was given yesterday afternoon in the cause of suffrage at the home of Mrs. H. C. White on Rockview avenue, the borough. All attendants sewed on prizes for future suffrage card parties. Mrs. E. F. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Suffrage League, discussed in a delightfully informal way of her experiences in Chicago at the National Republican Convention. Her report was most encouraging and took a form of jubilation over the winning of the suffrage plank in both the Republican and Democratic platforms, a big gain in the last five years.

She told that suffrage was entering in on a new era and that if all suffragists worked with the same enthusiasm in the next few years as they have in the past two, there can be no doubt of a nation-wide suffrage in six years. There were a great number of enthusiastic suffragists at the Chicago convention and all were well received and most courteously treated. The suffrage parade in which 5,500 women walked in the pouring rain was the subject of much complimentary criticism and won many men to the cause.

After her talk all adjourned to the dining room where suffrage punch was served by Mrs. A. B. Jones. A social time was enjoyed in conclusion.

UNIQUE CLASS DAY EXERCISES AT P. H. S.

School Impressions and Other Features Are Enjoyed by Seniors and Friends.

The annual class day exercises of the Plainfield High School were held in the auditorium last night, when the seventy-five members of the class of 1916 gave their last entertainment as members of the High School student body. The auditorium was filled with friends and relatives of the graduates.

As the curtain rose, the stage was set to represent a Japanese garden, with the members of the class ranged in three tiers in the form of a crescent. Swings and wicker furniture against a background of palms lent a realistic touch to the scene and Japanese lanterns threw a soft light over the whole.

Following the singing of the class song, the class history was read in four sections representing each school year. Miss Ruth Thomas gave the first impressions gained as freshmen, she being seated in a baby carriage that was pushed by Albert Hall as the nurse girl. Dressed as a little girl with curls and knee socks, Miss Olive Lawrence continued with the joys and sorrows of her classmates during the sophomore year, and Richmond Ritterbush briefly recounted the deeds recorded in the junior year. The history of the fourth and senior year was given by William Backer, impersonating an old man. In giving the statistics of the class, Herbert Peacock called forth applause and laughter from the audience, and not a member of the class was slighted from the one conceded to be the prettiest to the one termed as the wittiest. Harold Neely, who composed the class poem, recited it.

For looking into the future and predicting strange happenings to the various ones, Miss Helen Coddington was excellent as the class prophet, while Harold Seal gave a ridiculous reading of the last will and testament.

After the exercises the graduating class and friends to the number of several hundred enjoyed dancing.

GIVEN A SURPRISE PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Trembath, of Chatham street, celebrated their fifteenth wedding anniversary on Monday and in the evening a large company of relatives and friends gave them a surprise party. During the evening the couple was presented with an oak writing desk by Sydney Frazee on behalf of the guests. There was an informal program of music, after which refreshments were served.

SHERIFF GETS AFTER JOS. FRELINGHUYSEN

It Was Only a Friendly Chase for a Pair of Shoes Lost by Official.

Somerville, June 21.—That the sheriff was after Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, candidate for United States Senator at the Republican primaries next September, when he was over in Burlington county the other day, is not generally known. However, it was only a friendly search due to the fact that in some manner the shoes of the sheriff had been placed in the suit case of the Senator, and when the sheriff wanted his shoes they were missing. Senator Frelinghuysen was soon found, however, the shoes restored to the sheriff, and everybody had a good laugh over the incident.

Down in Burlington county some of the men were particular with whom they shook hands. Senator Frelinghuysen visited several of the big factory towns, and in several of these big industrial plants the men were not inclined to shake hands with him until they were assured positively that he was a Republican. Then they shook hands and talked with him, and expressed pleasure at meeting him. The reception accorded Senator Frelinghuysen throughout Burlington county was extremely gratifying and indicated that he was popular with the Republicans of that part of the state.

Reports from other parts of South Jersey indicate that Frelinghuysen is making rapid strides in every county, and there is a strog sentiment in favor of his selection for United States Senator. His friends find that the voters are waking up to the fact that he is an ideal man for the place by birth and training and the Republicans are rallying to his cause in large numbers.

Last week one of the big Republican clubs in Jersey City started the ball rolling in Hudson county by endorsing Senator Frelinghuysen's candidacy. Since then three other big clubs have fallen in line. The Polish League, which covers all of the naturalized Polish voters, adopted resolutions endorsing Joseph S. Frelinghuysen for United States Senator. It was an enthusiastic meeting, and those present pledged themselves to go out and work for the Somerset county man.

It will be remembered that Senator Frelinghuysen was strong for preparedness of this country for defense, and he made it clear to the voters that he believed in the nation having an adequate army and navy, and that the schools for the training of officers should be kept up to a high standard. His utterances in favor of the protection of American industries and American labor were in line with the principles enunciated by the Chicago platform.

The slogan Senator Frelinghuysen has adopted for use in his campaign, "Let the People Decide," has created much favorable comment everywhere. The people believes that it displays his courage in being willing to place his candidacy in the hands of the voters, and letters complimenting him upon his confidence in the people have been received from all parts of the State. The Senator made a hit with this phrase when he made a speech in Union county more than a month ago, and after making his appeal to the voters for their support, he ended his remarks by saying, "Let the People Decide."

MEXICO'S DAY TO CELEBRATE.

City of Mexico, June 21.—The customary holiday was observed today in honor of the forty-ninth anniversary of the taking of the City of Mexico by forces of Gen. Porfirio Diaz, June 21, 1867. The city had been held by Count von Khevenhuller, in command of Hungarian veterans. Gen. Diaz had maintained a siege for about two months. The fall of the City of Mexico to the Liberal troops marked the last blow to the Imperialists and practically ended the long war of the Napoleonic invasion. Today the anniversary of the event was marked by the firing of salutes at the artillery barracks and the display of the national flag over all the public buildings.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 21, 1916.

ENTITLED TO FIRST CONSIDERATION.

Members of Company K, Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., of this city, are disappointed because they were not called upon to go to Sea Girt with the other National Guardsmen who are being mobilized for possible duty along the Mexican border. The headquarters of the Second Regiment is at Trenton, and the same disappointment is expressed in that city that is being heard here. Under the heading "Someone Is Blundering" the Trenton Times makes the following comment on the failure to call out the Second Regiment:

"In the detail from the National Guard that New Jersey is putting into the field for service on the Mexican border, someone is either playing petty politics, or seriously blundering.

"Why the Second Regiment, which ranks highest in point of numbers and efficiency, according to the rating of the War Department, should be left at home, and the Fouth Regiment, which is rated as the most inefficient in the State, should be preferred, can only be explained on the theory that Governor Fielder's judgment has been clouded by his eagerness to favor a regiment from his home district. The Fourth Regiment is located in Hudson county, and at the last Federal inspection eleven of the twelve companies making up the regiment were below the passing mark. This is not the time to make bonehead plays.

"The Second Regiment, by reason of its standing in the service, is entitled to first consideration. To pursue any other course at this time will cause the public to feel that all the charges of peanut politics that have been made against the Guard are fully warranted. It will likewise kill the spirit of the State's military organization. Uncle Sam is entitled to the best that we have to give and the best regiment in the State stands ready and eager to go. Under the circumstances, to fail to send the Second Regiment would be an unpatriotic act."

SERIOUS BUSINESS.

There are some people who are thoughtless enough to intimate that the members of the National Guard who have been called out for service, including Troop D of this city, are going for a pleasant vacation. It is no easy time that confronts them, and too much credit cannot be given for the splendid way in which they have dropped their business cares and tackled the job. It was a mighty businesslike body that started from this city this morning, and they all realized that serious work is ahead. The Mexican people are enraged against all Americans, and even should Carranza back down following the receipt of President Wilson's note, there will continue to be border raids by bandits. To put these down more troops are needed, so the prospects of the Plainfield citizen soldiers going to the border are very good. That they will make a record for themselves if given an opportunity, everyone knows. But it is the sincere hope of the people of this city that the service which they will be called upon to perform will be of such a character that every man will return to his home sound in body and mind.

• • • • • •

A short time ago the big guns of practically every rabid Republican newspaper in the country were turned on Wilson's policy of watchful waiting toward Mexico. He was accused of aiding German propaganda, of being a "peace-at-any-price," milk-blooded pacifist, a coward and many other things unmanly and un-American because he would not turn an army of soldiers loose in Mexico bent on vengeance. Mr. Wilson calmly went about his commendable work of trying to reconcile the warring factions, thus guaranteeing safety to American citizens. He failed not through any fault of his own but through the stubborn raseality of Carranza. Now that the limit of patience, even Wilson patience, has been reached and the militia of the States has been called that threatened attacks on American soil may be repulsed, the Republican organs turn about face. Many of them, including the New York Sun and New York Press, are bitterly assailing Wilson for creating a war with our Southern neighbor. Such childish partizanship, such insidious nagging at the head of the American army at a time when all loyal citizens should be lending their support would be tolerated in no country but "The Land of the Free."

Plainfield is to have its first Chautauqua, beginning on Friday afternoon. The program which has been arranged, and given wide publicity through the newspapers, is an excellent one, and our people have seldom, if ever, had such a splendid opportunity to get so much entertainment for such a small price. The headliner is former President William Howard Taft, who comes here on Saturday night. Those who hold season tickets will be able to hear Mr. Taft without additional charge, as well as to enjoy the other nine programs. Tickets are now on sale at a number of places around town, including the Daily Press office, and it is hoped that there will be a liberal response. A number of local busines and professional men have underwritten the expense for the entertainment, but it is expected that there will be a profit, and this will go to some worthy local cause, to be decided by the underwriters after it is procured.

With all its stirring events, the European War cannot now occupy the whole first page. The war has been brought so much nearer home that the troubles abroad become comparatively less important than do those along the Mexican border. And for some little time Sea Girt will have more than a passing interest for Plainfielders.

LAWMAKERS TO CONFER.

Ottawa, Ont., June 21.—A large and distinguished party of parliamentary members of Australia, New Zealand and Canada sails today for England to attend an important conference of the Empire Parliamentary Association to be held in London at an early date. The exact purpose of the conference has not been made public, but it is the general supposition that the representatives of the three great units of the British overseas dominions are to confer with official representatives of other portions of the empire on plans for the great commercial campaign that it is proposed to wage against the Teutonic nations after the close of the present war. The Canadian delegation to the conference is to be headed by Sir George Foster, and will include a dozen or more representatives of the two houses of parliament.

TODAY IS LONGEST OF YEAR.

Today is the longest day of the year. The course of the sun is directly over the Tropic of Cancer. The time between the rising and setting of the sun on this date gives more than fifteen hours of daylight. On December 21 the sun is above the Tropic of Capricorn, thus making it the shortest day of the year. The March and September equinoxes occur when the sun passes over the equator.

- Proctor's Theatre -

William Farnum appears today at Proctor's in the role of a burly fisherman in his latest William Fox feature "The Battle of Hearts." This story gives Mr. Farnum plenty of opportunities to exploit his progress as a leader among powerful men and the opening scenes introduce him as a fisherman who knows when and how to use his fists. He loves the daughter of an old salt, but she favors the worthless son of the lighthouse keeper. The favored suitor goes away from home to make good and falls in with smugglers. The girl, while mastering one of her father's boats, is wrecked and subsequently rescued by the hard fisted fisherman. On the same trip he manages to round up the smugglers, and after a terrific fight, captures his rival. The girl has all along been realizing the worth of the fisherman and the worthlessness of the man she thought she loved, and so there is nothing left to prevent a happy ending. Considerably embellished with incidents that are of more or less benefit in the advancement of the story, this is the substance of the pictures. Mr. Farnum's rendition of the featured part is typical of his past performances, while Edna Fury, as the girl, and Wheeler Oakman, as the heavy, have the other important parts, and carry them through in a splendid manner. Among other attractions today is the presentation of the seventeenth episode of "The Iron Claw," the serial which has everybody guessing and this chapter adds more to the confusion as to the identity of that mysterious character, "The Laughing Mask." On Thursday, Margaret Gibson gives one of the most convincing performances of her eventful career as a successful actress in "The Leopard's Bride," a romantic drama of India by Theodosia Harriss, in which the famous Bostock animals play an important part. Many other attractions will be on view tomorrow, while Friday will bring forward Violet Mersereau in "Autumn," Matt Moore and Jane Gail in "Why Mrs. Wentworth Lied" and one of those rollocking L-Ko comedies.

--Astor Theatre--

Booth Tarkington's clever serial story, "The Flirt," which ran with such popularity for several issues in The Saturday Evening Post, has been made into Bluebird photoplays and will be the attraction at the Astor Theatre today, with Marie Walcamp playing the title role. Her leading man will be Juan de la Cruz. Both these clever artists will be well remembered for their recent fine work as members of the company presenting the Bluebird opium play, "Hop, the Devil's Brew." The Smalleys, who produced "Hop," also produced "The Flirt," Lois Weber (Mrs. Smalley) having converted the Tarkington story to screen uses and Phillips Smalley directed the cast creating the latest Bluebird. In addition to this wonderful photoplay we will present the fourth chapter of "Who's Guilty?" featuring Tom Moore and Anna Nilsson, and as an added attraction the first episode of the Jungle Film No. 1, showing two real baboons, Napoleon the Great and Sally, his mate. This is something new in the film line, and it is very seldom that we can see such wonderful animals act almost human. "The Danger Signal," a George Kleine photodrama released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, is, without question, one of the most fascinating and powerful film productions before the public today. The chief character, Danny Canavan, may by a slight stretch of imagination be likened to a famous political boss of a few years ago—dominant in all things he undertook; only in the film drama, Canavan in his early years of manhood is shown as a cowardly, cringing, shiftless type. "The Danger Signal" will be offered at the Astor Theatre tomorrow. It is a fascinating and powerful story of a man's remarkable rise from obscurity to vast political power, social position and wealth, and there is no doubt will be well appreciated by the patrons of this theatre. We will offer the fourth episode of Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance," and other interesting photoplays. Always a big bill at the Astor, the little family theatre for your comfort and amusement, where you sit and enjoy the show with the cool breezes blowing from all parts of the house. As a man remarked the other day: that every time he came into the theatre the seats were so comfortable that he went to sleep. During the summer months matinee at 3 p. m., excepting Saturdays and holidays, when show starts at 2 p. m.

MAGIE PORTRAIT IS PRESENTED TO STATE

Likeness of Elizabeth Man, Formerly Chancellor, to Be Placed in State House.

Honoring former Chancellor William J. Magie, of Elizabeth, members of the State Bar Association yesterday presented his portrait to the Court of Errors and Appeals at the State House at Trenton. The ceremony took place in the Supreme Court room and was attended by members of the bar from all parts of the State, friends of Chancellor Magie, and State officers. Among those in the assemblage was Justice Mahlon Pitney, of the United States Supreme Court, who succeeded Chancellor Magie on the Chancery bench.

The proceedings of the June term of the Court of Errors were interrupted for the presentation ceremonies.

Justice Francis J. Swayze first felicitated Chancellor Magie, on the honor shown him and the Chancellor responded, telling of his appreciation. Justice Swayze then addressed Governor Fielder and presented the portrait to the State, at the same time making the request that it be returned to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

Governor Fielder then formally turned over the portrait to Chancellor Edwin Robert Walker, as president of the Court of Errors and Appeals. In accepting the portrait for the court, Chancellor Walker made an address in which he eulogized the former chancellor and told of his long and honorable career on the bench.

After the exercises in the court room an informal luncheon was served in the Senate committee rooms and corridors. Two hundred and twenty-five persons were present. One of the rooms was reserved for the Governor and the members of the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The committee in charge of the presentation consisted of former Justice Gilbert Collins, John R. Hardin and former Attorney General Robert H. McCarter. Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, was the treasurer of the committee. The painting of the former Chancellor shows him in judicial robes and is a good likeness.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

The verdict following a long period of observation is that no other form of pump approaches the piston pump in affording that particular brand of satisfaction and all-around efficiency which is absolutely necessary in a fire engine. Judged, therefore, according to the survival of the fittest, piston pumps unquestionably are the best adapted for this service. It is to be supposed that correct proportions prevail and, granting this much, the piston pump may invariably be depended upon to draft water from any supply available within the normal limits of lift. Moreover, the piston pump is equally effective at maximum as well as at low or moderate discharge pressures and may be operated with minimum loss of useful power effect over a widely variable range of speed and other working conditions. Less affected by deterioration than most other forms the piston pumps have also proved to be the most lasting; their initial efficiency may be readily maintained. All of which are established facts, amply verified by the many piston pump fire engines in active commission today in the United States.

SEEKS NEW LIFTING RECORD.

Boston, Mass., June 21.—John Y. Smith, the strong man who once was ranked with the strongest in the world, will attempt a new world's record in weight-lifting at the Boston Y. M. C. A. gymnasium tomorrow He intends trying to lift a 200-pound dumbbell from the floor to his shoulder with two hands and then put it up slowly with his right arm alone to a full arm's length over his head.

Smith, who is over fifty years of age, broke all amateur records more than fifteen years ago and also smashed Eugene Sandow's records at weight-lifting.

SMITH IS NAMED RUNKLE EXECUTOR

Randolph Rodman, of Orange, is Ousted by Court of Errors.

ESSEX JURIST UPHELD

Holds Testator's Intentions Were Clear—Dissenting Opinion On One Point Written by Justice Black.

Trenton, June 21.—William F. R. Smith, of East Orange, won his contention that he is entitled to letters testamentary as execuor of the late William Runkle, of Orange, by a decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals handed down late yesterday afternoon. The effect of the decision is to oust Randolph Rodman, of South Orange, to whom letters testamentary were issued by the Orphans' Court of Essex county, and to substitute Mr. Smith.

The court also disposed of three other appeals involving the construction of Mr. Runkle's will, affirming in each case the judgment of the Essex Orphans' Court, which, in turn, had been sustained by the Perrogative Court. In each of the appeals upon which affirmance was directed the court accepted the views expressed by Judge William P. Martin in the Orphans' Court, which, in turn, had been indorsed by Chancellor Walker in the Prerogative Court.

The opinion in the fourth appeal, reversing the lower courts in sustaining the claims of Mr. Rodman, was written by Justice Black and was based broadly upon the ground that where the intention of the testator is clear the courts will lay hold of slight circumstances to give legal effect to such intention. It was practically conceded that Mr. Runkle in altering his will and executing a codicil had intended to make Mr. Smith instead of Mr. Rodman his executor.

Judge Martin had based his decision in favor of Mr. Rodman upon the ground that there was nothing in the evidence or even a suggestion to show when the name of Mr. Rodman had been erased in the will and that of Mr. Smith substituted. Hence, he held, Mr. Smith had failed to sustain the burden of proof in showing that his name had been written in the will prior to the execution of the codicil.

"With this conclusion of the learned trial judge we cannot agree," said Justice Black. "It is demonstrated, if not conceded, that it was the intention of Mr. Runkle to have Mr. Smith as his executor. There is no mistaking the actual intent of the testator.

"This thought runs through the entire legal literature, applicable to the construction of wills. Stress is placed by Judge Martin, in the Orphans' Court, upon the testimony of Mr. Kinsley, the expert witness in handwriting, as to the pen and ink used in writing the name of 'William E. R. Smith,' compared with those used on pages one and two of the will and those used in the body of the will, from pages three to twelve. The court found that the pen and ink used were different from the remainder of the will and codicil, which apparently were influential factors in the conclusion reached by the Orphans' Court. Mr. Kinsley, however, when the testimony is analyzed, said that the name 'William E. R. Smith' and the word 'East' are in a dark ink that resembles somewhat ink No 1, although he would not say it is ink No. 1. He could not say definitely whether it is ink No. 1 or a different ink.

"From this testimony, proponents draw the conclusion that, when the inks are so similar that a professional expert cannot point out any difference, it is a fair inference that they are the same. So, in reference to the testimony as to the pens used. The fact that Mr. Runkle made a codicil nearly a year after the date of the will shows that he knew that to make a change in his will he had to re-execute the will, or make a codicil, and that a codicil would re-execute the will and validate any changes in it.

"It would, therefore, seem to be inferable, that he would not attempt to change his will by any less formal method than a codicil. The evidence regarding Mr. Smith's appointment, as executor, couples it to the first two pages of the will. Inferentially, the same pen and ink were used, and the latter being upheld, as executed before the codicil, the former should be also.

"It seems hardly necessary to pursue this line of argument further, in detail. The conclusion, which, we have reached from all the circumstances, is that the reasonable probabilities are to the effect that Mr. Smith's name was inserted before the execution of the codicil by the testator. Letters testamentary should be issued to William E. R. Smith, reversing that part of the decree which directs the letters to be issued to Randolph Rodman.

"The view which we have taken, renders it unnecessary to consider the mooted point, argued at length in the briefs of counsel, as to the presumptions of unexplained alterations in a will, whether made before or after execution, on which point we express no opinion."

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Kate Traded Yellow Buttons For Dishes.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

TIME for a bedtime story came, so daddy told Jack and Evelyn about Kate: "There was once a woman, Kate, who let her dog run off with the steak her husband wanted for dinner. While she chased the dog she left the tap running, so that all the ale flowed from the cask. Then she wasted a bag of meal sopping up the ale and finally blamed her husband for not telling her she was doing wrong.

"Well, her husband, Frederick, thought that if his wife could not manage better than this he would have to look sharp. He had a good deal of gold in his house, so he said to Kate: 'I am going to put these pretty yellow buttons in a box and bury them in the garden. But don't you ever dig them up or meddle with them, Kate.'

"As soon as he had gone to work some peddlers with earthenware dishes and plates came to sell Kate some. 'I want them very much,' she told the peddlers, 'but I have no money. If you will take some nice yellow buttons I can trade with you.'

"'Let us see the yellow buttons,' said the peddlers.

"'You can dig them up in the garden if you go where I tell you,' said she.

"So the rogues dug up Frederick's gold and took it all, leaving Kate plenty of dishes and pans. She had great fun putting them up on her kitchen walls, and when Frederick came home he found her fussing with her dishes. 'Kate, what are you doing?' he cried.

"'See. I bought all these nice pans with your yellow buttons!' she answered. 'You asked me not to touch them myself, so I sent the peddlers to dig them up.'

"'Kate, Kate,' cried her husband, 'those yellow buttons were gold and all the money I had! Why did you do that?'

"'I did not know there was any harm in it. You should have told me.' Kate blamed Frederick. Then she said: 'We will soon get the gold back. Let's run after the thieves.'

"'We'll be hungry chasing rogues,' said Frederick. 'Take along some bread and butter and cheese.' So they set out, but as Frederick walked much faster than Kate she was soon far behind him. 'When we turn back I shall be that much nearer home,' said Kate to herself.

"Soon she came to the top of a hill where there was a road so narrow that passing carts struck the trees on each side. 'These poor trees!' said Kate. 'I must grease them so the carts won't rub their bark.' And she took the butter Frederick had asked her to bring and greased the tree trunks," daddy finished.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Gets a Little More Motherly Advice From Mrs. Mertage.

After Ethel Gordon had seen Maisie onto the west-bound train she had over an hour to wait before her own train pulled out. The stores full of wonderful bargains drew her like a magnet.

"I will just look in for a few minutes while I wait," she thought. "Of course I do not intend to buy anything." But when she saw the fascinating trifles that were displayed for women's undoing she was carried away, and before she realized what she was doing she had purchased goods to the amount of ten dollars. "That is what comes of having a charge account," she thought, as on the train she had time to go over her purchases. "What ever shall I do?" "My bill is bigger than it was last month and I have no idea how I can ever get the money to pay it." She thought feverishly for some minutes. "One thing, Ralph will never know I have bought these things. He will never know that they are new, but I can not possibly send more than ten dollars to the firm this month." Then she fell to secretly railing at her fate, "that she had to count pennies like a pauper."

Ralph met her at the train. She was all enthusiasm about the lovely time she had had, and repeated the bits of news about her friends, some of whom he had met.

Ralph listened only half-heartedly, for he had been much worried that day over business affairs.

Ethel lay awake far into the night trying to think of a way out of her difficulties and she finally decided to write to her mother and ask to borrow money for all or part of her bill. "She urged me into it," was the excuse she made to herself for trying to saddle her troubles on some one else. When she finally fell asleep she dreamed that Ralph had discovered about the debt in Kansas City and stood over her like an avenging god. The dream made such an impression that she did not delay her letter to her mother and her plea for money was very urgent. All her life every wish had been gratified and it never occurred to her that life could deny her anything she really wanted. So her mother's letter came in the nature of a surprise. It read:

"I am surprised that you are worrying about a little bill of $65. I never know what it is to be out of debt. Don't make the mistake of assuming the worry for your debts yourself. Let Ralph do it. It is his place. Make him see early in your married life that you do not intend to be restricted. You are not used to it. Begin as you intend to hold out. If you are willing to go without at first your husband will soon acquire the habit of thinking you can go without. If I had not stood up for my rights, I might easily have been hampered all these years. As it is I have had about all I really needed. So be advised, my dear Ethel, by one who has succeeded in managing her finances successfully."

Ethel dropped the letter in her lap and fell to thinking of what Ralph had said about her father being a slave to her mother's extravagance.

"I wonder if it has been hard for daddy," she mused. "But it is so nice not to have to worry about bills. Mother just turns all of them over to him and he settles them. I guess most men do not mind such things. I wish Ralph was like that. As he is not, I must take ten dollars from the grocer's bill to reduce the Kansas City bill this month. I wish I had not bought those things. It spoils all pleasure in wearing the things to have to hide them from Ralph. Life is not worth living if you have not money," she concluded petulantly, as she rose and dropped the letter in her desk.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Lebanon, Pa.—How an aged Frenchwoman, hungering for affection to assuage the deaths of her husband and two sons, adopted a man, only to disinherit the foster son when he joined the German army—is the remarkable "war story" beneath the contest against the will of Rosalie Parent Coleman, instituted by Dr. Guido Tauern Hinkel, involving an estate of $1,000,000 and scheduled to come into court in this country next month. The foster son charges undue influence on the part of the new heirs, who so played on the patriotism of the aged woman, who was intensely devoted to her native France, as to cause her to forget her natural love for her adopted son and leave him penniless. The Coleman family has been for generations the leader in the iron industry here, having amassed vast wealth in the Cornwall ore mines, a few miles south of Mount Lebanon. Robert Coleman, a member of the family, expatriated himself, going to Paris, where he married Mlle. Rosalie Parent, and remained till his death. Two sons were born, and it was after the death of these and of her husband that Mme. Coleman adopted Hinkel and made him her sole heir in her original will. The young man, who is now 31 years old, was born in New York of German parents and became a physician in Paris. He attended Mme. Coleman during an illness and so won her regard and affection that she turned to him as a successor to her dead sons. He is said to have attained a skill in surgery which has already brought him to the attention of great men of the profession in France and Germany. When the war broke out, he felt that his services belonged to the country of his forbears, and in spite of his foster mother's pleadings and indignation, he enlisted with the enemy of her country.

New York.—Mary Garden, the operatic star, is the latest great celebrity of the "regular" stage to succumb to the lure of the movies. Miss Garden, now on her way to France, where she will continue her activities for wounded soldiers with the Red Cross, has signed with a movie magnate to spend several months each year for the next five years at his company's studio in California acting her famous operatic roles before the camera, as does that other scintillating light of the operatic firmament, Geraldine Farrar. She will return to America next December and, after her season at the Chicago Grand Opera House, of which she is a member, will go to California to create the motion picture role of "Thais," one of her most successful operatic parts.

Paris.—Madame Rejane, the celebrated actress, is soon to become mamma-in-law to a young American physician, Dr. P. D. Wilson, of New York, who is shortly to wed Mlle. E. Porel, her daughter. The romance between the young Frenchwoman and her American fiance began a year ago in a field hospital at the front, where she served as a nurse and he as a surgeon. Consent to the match was given by Madame Rejane after a visit of her daughter to the young man's family in New York, from which she returned, accompanied by Dr. Wilson's mother, who will attend the wedding in this city. After the wedding the young couple will return to their duties with the French Red Cross.

Boston.—Having no more fields to conquer, Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the famous Norwegian tennis player, has turned to literature. A local publishing house announces a book from her pen, "Tennis for Women," in which she generously tells the legions of tennis players she has beaten, the secret of how she did it.

New York.—Miss Katharine Minahan, the actress, is the originator of a new association to be known as the National Bird Sanctuary Associates, with the idea of establishing sanctuaries for birds along the Lincoln Highway, and planning later to give a series of productions of Percy Mackaye's "Sanctuary," a bird masque which is a plea for the protection of our national bird life along the transcontinental road. Miss Minahan, widely known as the Belasco Bird Girl, has made a deep study of birds and her studies have led her to become interested in their conservation. The interest of women in the movement is being enlisted from coast to coast. The president of the Association is Mrs. William J. Hoggson, of Greenwich, Conn., and the vice-president, Mrs. Charles H. Ingersoll, of South Orange, N. J.

Chicago.—Miss Anna Martin, of Nevada, elected chairman of the National Woman's Party at the recent suffrage convention in this city, was active in the affairs of the Congressional Union during the campaign for the passage of the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the Constitution. Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, of California, mother of William Randolph Hearst, and Miss Mary A. Bartelme, of Illinois, were chosen vice-chairmen, with Mrs. Lena K. Brown, of Colorado, as alternate. Miss Mabel Vernon, of Nevada is the new national secretary.

"SUFFRAGETTES' CONVENTION."

The Christian Endeavor Society of Bethel chapel will present a comedy entitled, "The Suffragettes' Convention," in the chapel tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. All suffragettes and "antis," too, are urged to attend this performance, together with all their respective adherents and supporters. The Endeavorers have worked hard to make this a successful event in their year's work and look forward to seeing many of their friends witness the production. A nominal admission fee will be charged. In connection with the play, a strawberry festival will be held, and refreshments sold. A social hour will follow the sketch.

AUTO TRIP TO SOUTH BEACH.

Charles P. Freligh, assistant manager of the Astor Theatre, will suppervise an automobile trip to South Beach on Sunday. The start will be made from in front of the Astor Theatre at 9 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Freligh has arranged several similar trips during the season and all have been very successful. He has been in communication with the president of the Mardi Gras Association at Coney Island and is making arrangements to have a bus entered in the parade at the annual celebration.

THIRD ANNUAL OUTING.

The Loyal Daughters' Class of Hope chapel will give its third annual outing on Saturday to Palisades Park, a special trolley car making the trip without change. The price, 75 cents, includes admission to the Park. As the tickets are limited in number application should be made to members of the class at an early date for same. The car will leave Grant avenue and Front street at 8 o'clock, postoffice 8.05, transfer station 8.15 sharp.

LOCAL OPTION RALLY.

The voters of North Plainfield will hold a local option rally Friday evening, June 23, at 8 o'clock, at the Grace M. E. church, on Park place. The rally is being held under the auspices of the North Plainfield Local Option League and is a omni-partisan and undenominational organization. All voters of the borough are urged to attend and bring their friends.

BASEBALL NOTES

If the International League teams don't stop Providence pretty soon, the Grays will have the pennant nailed by July 4.

It is said the Red Sox plan to shift Pitcher Ruth to the outfield. The Sox don't miss Speaker. They only miss his fielding and his hitting.

Benny Kauff, of the Giants, is not hitting strong enough to get his name among the leading batsmen, but once on the paths he doesn't care how many bases he steals.

By giving to the Reds the finest kind of baseball, Hal Chase has crossed the critics who predicted he would not fit with the Herzog regime.

American League batting averages would make it appear that Collins and Collins, the well known Chicago firm of hitsmiths, has retired from business.

Milwaukee, usually a strong contender for the American Association pennant, has had troubles a plenty this season trying to get within hailing distance of the leaders.

Hitters of the .300 variety are as scarce in Boston as Prohibition voters in a brewery. Neither the Braves nor Red Sox own a pastimer who has been able to keep company with the heavy stickers.

During the 15 years Eddie Plank has been fighting big league ball he has pitched for world's champions, just plain champions and near champions. But all this happened in Philadelphia, before Eddie landed in St. Louis.

Messrs. Cobb and Speaker will have to keep tabs on Gen. Joseph Jackson. The White Sox gardener has started straightening out the benders as furnished by our very best heavers.

In stating that his team is as good as it was last year Manager Pat Moran, of the Phillies, hasn't anything on Connie Mack. The Athletics also are as good as they were last year.

The Pirates have Honus Wagner the king of pastimers; Max Carey, the king of base-stealers, and Al Mamaux, crown prince among pitchers. But it's a tough year on royalty.

Delegate John McGraw, of New York, has nominated the Giants to head the National League ticket and the Braves for second place. Leaving his specs at home perhaps caused John's failure to discern Bobby Robinson's "rotunda" figure across the bridge.

Danny Hoffman, formerly of the St. Louis Browns, has quit the Bridgeport Eastern League team and retired from the game. Playing with the Browns was a happy existence compared to pastiming with a tail-end team in a ten-club circuit, so Dan handed himself his release.

After scouting a year over the National League circuit for his lost batting eye, Chief Meyers finally has found it. Seems that the Indian backstop had mislaid his lamp during a visit to Brooklyn and didn't recover it until he was transferred by the Giants to the Superbas.

WAR WITH MEXICO THREATENS TO KILL BASEBALL EVEN IN BIG CITIES

The war spirit over the Mexican situation looms up as the biggest blow possible to baseball. Very few of the fellows playing in the majors will be taken to the front in the ordering of the militia to the border, but so many thousands of men taken from the business world will hurt the attendance at the games; the public will be interested in the news dispatches from Mexican territory and baseball—in fact, any other sport—will not hold the interest that it does now; and just as quickly as interest in the game is killed the magnates will be digging into their pockets to foot the bills. At the beginning of the baseball season President Johnson stated that in case of a war he would be in favor of closing up the baseball fields, as it would be a losing proposition to continue. This would involve all sorts of litigation over contracts, etc., but the situation looks serious. The taking away of so many men from the business world will congest the work of those who do stay at home, so that attending baseball games will receive but little consideration. Already the baseball teams have suffered big financial losses from the bad weather experienced, and to have the war spirit take such a firm hold now will mean a continuance of entries on the debit side of the ledger. At that, some of the teams will suffer by some of the players being drafted into service on account of their connection with the militia.

FORGIVENESS DOES NOT AWAIT SALLEE

Huggins Sore Over Desertion of Long Twirler—Will Not Trade Him.

Manager Miller Huggins will not forgive "Slim" Sallee for his recent quitting of the club, and there is no chance of the long pitcher being traded.

"Sallee found fault with the hotel where we stay here," said Huggins in New York. "He objected to the food and his room, but he didn't come to me with his complaints. I cannot understand his action. He has not been drinking this season and he has been a great help to the club. His loss will be a serious blow.

"I intend to make an example of Sallee," Huggins continued. "For some reason he does not care to play with St. Louis. Well, he will play with my club or nowhere, if I have may way. I will not sell him and I will not trade him. No, I will not say that Sallee has been tampered with by any one. There has been a lot of newspaper talk recently that he was coveted by the Giants, but in justice to the New York club I will say that I have never received a proposition and have not discussed Sallee's case with Manager McGraw or any other official of the Giants."

200 BOATS ENTERED IN CRUISE OF SATURDAY

Entries already received for the inter-club cruise which folows the annaul regatta of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club on Saturday indicate that fully 200 power and sail boats will be in the fleet, the largest number which ever participated in such an event. So important an event has it grown to be that the Treasury Department has ordered the revenue cutter Mohawk to report at the rendezvous in Oyster Bay to follow the fleet and see that there is no interference with the racers in their port-to-port trips back and forth across the Sound. Notwithstanding the Mexican situation, the destroyer Balch will accompany the fleet as ordered a week ago for the express purpose of watching the operations of the power boats which may be needed for auxiliary naval service, and which will make up about half the fleet.

CORNELL FOOTBALL TEAM TO REPORT SEPTEMBER 18

Dr. Sharpe, Reed, '98, and Van Orman, '08, will meet the candidates for the Cornell football eleven when they report for pre-season practice Sept. 18. This early date will give the forty candidates two weeks' practice before the first game, which is to be against Oberlin on Sept. 30.

COURTNEY, CORNELL COACH, CONFINED IN HOSPITAL

Ithaca, N. Y., June 21.—Charles E. Courtney, coach of the Cornell crews, who returned from Poughkeepsie Sunday night, is in the City Hospital taking a rest. Mr. Courtney is not seriously ill, but his physicians say that rest and quiet will be highly beneficial.

M'COY TO FIGHT AGAIN.

Al McCoy, of Brooklyn, the middleweight champion, who does less fighting than two-thirds of the fighters in the business, has finally consented to battle again. He was matched yesterday to meet Dave "Young" Kurtz, the Newark middle weight, for ten rounds at the Broadway Sporting Club on Saturday evening, July 1. As Kurtz is game he ought to give McCoy a hard battle. Kurtz is now under John Reisler's management.

WOLGAST STILL KNOCKS OUT SMALL OPPONENTS

Ad Wolgast, the former lightweight champion, still continues to knock out his opponents. At Richmond, Ind., last night he met Stewart Donnelly, the Indianapolis lightweight, in a bout and after punishing him severely for two rounds finally knocked him out in the third round with a heavy left hand swing in the stomach.

JOHNNY DUNDEE WILL FIGHT GEORGE CHANEY

An important match was arranged last night. The fighters who will clash in it are Johnny Dundee, the fast Italian light lightweight, and George Chaney, the hard-hitting fighter of Baltimore. They will come together in a fifteen round bout at the newly organized Oriole A. C., of Baltimore on July 16. Dundee is to receive a guarantee of $2,500, with an option of 30 per cent. of the gross receipts.

CRESCENT A. C. VS. T. A. B. S.

The Crescent A. C. team of Kearny will be the opponents of the T. A. B. S. on Avon Oval Sunday afternoon. This fast combination has been piling up victories this season in Newark and vicinity, but Manager James Scott is hoping to stop them in the game on Sunday. Denny and McFadden will be in the points for the T. A. B. S.

BETHEL CHAPEL'S TEAM.

Bethel chapel will be represented on the diamond this year by a junior baseball team that will be led by "Bill" Ranson. After taking a look at the Daily Press team dierctory, Ranson says he would like to hear from the Pans, West End Stars, or any other junior ball tossers. Most of last year's team will be on the firing line, besides several new ones.

FUNERAL OF MISS JOHNSON.

The funeral of Miss Martha Ann Johnson, whose death occurred in New York city, suddenly, last Wednesday, was held this afternoon at 2:30 in Bethel chapel. The service was in charge of the pastor, Rev. William Lloyd Imes, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends of the deceased. The floral offerings were especially beautiful, a number of set pieces being included in the number. The interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

CLASS DAY PROGRAM ENJOYED BY N. P. H. S.

Picnic and Presentation of Insignias Features Annual Festivities of 1916 Class.

The North Plainfield High School held its annual class day program last night in Debele's Hall. The affair was in the nature of a picnic and afforded much amusement. Clarence Roddy led the class in its "yell" and song, both being composed by himself, and there were recitations by Sherman Chandler, Martin McDonough and Miss Margaret Ewart.

The class history was read by four of the girls, each of them portraying a year. The class will and prophecy were each presented in an original and pleasing manner. The feature of the evening was the presentation of the 1916 class banner to the High School. This was the first gift of the kind. Principal Earley then presented the following boys with their High School insignias;

Basketball: Warren Townley, captain; John Dawe, Andrew McDonough, Harry Kirch, Oscar Dilts, Martin McDonough and Alfred Willett. Baseball: Oscar Dilts, captain; Andrew McDonough, Newton Mair, Edward Yates, John Dawe, Warren Townley, Harry Kirch, Martin McDonough, Appleton Van Mater, Douglas Stewart, Vincent LaPorte, Charles Roll, Kenneth Laurie, Alfred Seidel and William Seidel. The exercises closed with the singing of the class song.

MRS. KELLEY EXPLAINS HOW LEAGUE WAS STARTED

In the story appearing in yesterday's issue of the Daily Press, Mrs Florence Kelley, general secretary of the National Consumer's League, was quoted from a previous speech, on topics with which she did not touch on in her address here. In her address to the Plainfield Business Women's League at the Y. W. C. A. on Monday night, Mrs. Kelley told the attendance how the Consumer's League was first started twenty-five years ago until it now embraces six national leagues. During the course of her address she outlined what the leagues have undertaken in improving the working girls conditions.

She cited the eight hour law which the league especially advocated as well as the Saturday afternoon half holiday. In order to do this the public is always asked to co-operate with the league and in the latter case the public's refusal to buy articles on Saturday afternoon would assist in the granting of the half holiday. She concluded her talk with a summary of the work the organization is doing for the safety as well as the health of the public.

Eveready Preparedness

Don't go on your vacation without an Eveready Flashlight. Don't do it. Tuck an Eveready in your grip for use on the way—and all summer long.

Maybe those weird shapes of the night have never sent your heart to your mouth—maybe you know every highway and byway at night as by day—BUT leave it to the DARK to trap YOU sometime—UNLESS YOU'RE PREPARED. Eveready is the "light of preparedness." To have an Eveready with you is to be "armed" against the dark. You can never tell what danger the dark hides—without light.

Prepare Yourself With an Eveready Flashlight 75c up to $2.50.

CARRANZA MUST DISAVOW ATTACK ON AMERICAN TROOPS OR WAR IS TO BE DECLARED BY U. S. AT ONCE

GEN. OBREGON GAVE ORDER THAT LED TO KILLING OF 12 MEMBERS OF 10TH CAVALRY—HE ADMITS RESPONSIBILITY.

PUTS BLAME ON COMMANDER OF U. S. TROOPS

Story That Mexicans Used Flag of Truce as Trap Believed—Funston Has Not Yet Reported—17 Soldiers Taken Prisoners May Be Hanged—Pershing Takes Two Mexican Towns.

12 AMERICANS DEAD; MEXICANS LOST 14.

New York, June 22.—Twelve United States troopers were killed, including their commander, and 17 taken prisoners, in the fight at Carrizal yesterday, according to an announcement of the Mexican consulate here today. The Mexicans lost 14 dead and 30 wounded.

Mine Employees Safe.

New York, June 22.—Despatches received by the Greene Canacea Copper Company officials in this city this morning stated that the American workmen from the company's properties in Sonora had reached the border in safety.

Washington, June 22.—Senor Arredondo, Mexican Ambassador to the United States, is in conference with Secretary Lansing. He will be told that unless Carranza disavows the attack upon the Tenth Cavalry, drastic action will be taken by the United States. It is not probable that he will be handed his passports at present.

Senor Arredondo laid a full report of the Mexican version of the fight at Carrizal before Secretary of State Lansing today. Ambassador Arredondo said that the American cavalry were many miles away from their base and were moving toward Juarez. He thinks the Mexican commander believed the cavalry was moving toward the latter town with hostile intent, and therefore deemed it his duty to oppose the advance. Senor Arredondo placed a communication from Carranza before Secretary Lansing, taking this view of the matter. An inquiry as to the reported seizure of the town of Casas Grandes by Gen. Pershing's forces was also made. Senor Arredondo stated that his government would view the seizure of this town as a hostile act.

Carranza has given no statement as to his attitude toward the American note. The pressure upon him from the Entente Allies to maintain peaceful relations with the United States is increasing. Indications today, however, are that he will resist this pressure. Carranza has taken over all the railroads in Northern Mexico for military purposes.

Obregon Ordered Attack.

Mexico City, June 22.—Minister of War Obregon, in a statement made public at the War Department, takes complete responsibility for the attack upon United States troops at Carrizal. In the statement it is alleged that the American soldiers were making an effort to occupy the railway station at Carrizal. General Carranza, head of the de facto government, has summoned a meeting of the entire cabinet. At this session, Gen. Obregon will make a full report on the situation. The statement says that Gen. Obregon received a message reporting the death of Gen. Gomez. The capture of seventeen Americans is mentioned in the statement. The prisoners have been ordered brought to Chihuahua City. Gen. Trevino has reported to Gen. Obregon.

Forty Americans Were Killed.

El Paso, Tex., June 22.—No further details have been received yet as to the first serious clash between American and Carranza soldiers, which took place yesterday at Carrizal, an abandoned town on the Mexican National Railway, ninety miles south of Juarez.

All reports indicate that forty American troopers were slain, a number wounded and seventeen taken prisoners. The Carranzists are threatening to hang their captives.

Destroyer to Tampico.

Eastport, Me., June 22.—The torpedo destroyer Fanning, which arrived, expecting to remain a week, was today ordered to Tampico, Mex. The destroyer Spaulding and twenty others are expected tomorrow morning, some of which will also be sent to Mexican waters.

"THREE TYPES OF CHILDREN" DESCRIBED

W. A. Ackerman, of Somerville, Delivers Address at Grammar School.

The auditorium in the Plainfield High School was crowded to its capacity yesterady afternoon at the graduation exercises of the Plainfield Grammar School when one hundred and seventy-two pupils received their certificate of promotion into the High School. Parents and friends showered the pupils with well wishes. The invocation was offered by the Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The address of the afternoon was delivered by W. A. Ackerman, superintendent of the Somerville Schools, and his subject was "The Three Types of Children." He grouped children in three classes, the fortunate, henpecked and orphaned, and illustrated his points as follows: The first child be classed as coming from a well trained home, where the parents are companions and with him in everything; the second is the child that is continually nagged by his parents, does not have the sympathy of a parent and sees little of the father who spends his time more or less at the club; the last named child is an orphan, not literally, but because the child sees practically nothing of the mother or father, who are in the whirl of society or too busy with their club duties to attend to their children.

Dr. Henry W. Maxson also addressed the pupils. Prizes were conferred the winners by President of the Board of Education Archibald Cox as follows: Probasco History prize, Charles Gates; honorable mention, Ralph Newell and Rose Tofel; W. C. T. U. English composition, first prize, Clinton Harrower; honorable mention, Beatrice Lerch.

H. L. FOGLEMAN TO SPEAK.

H. L. Fogleman, of Chicago, representing the Sheldon School, of that city, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock on "The Science of Business Building."

SEVEN RECRUITS FOR PLAINFIELD TROOPERS

One Left Yesterday, Two Today and Four More Go Tomorrow Morning

By tomorrow noon at least seven new men will be added to the roster of Troop D, First Squadron New Jersey Cavalry, at Sea Girt, and it is probable that by the end of the week the troop will be recruited up to the full war strength, 100. Lieut. Daniel Runkle and Corporals Donald C. Fullerton and Charles D. Wardlaw have been busy at the Putnam avenue headquarters since the troop left yesterday morning examining candidates and up to this afternoon seven new troopers had been accepted.

Clinton F. Ivins, of 1225 Watchung avenue, left yesterday afternoon, and Augustus J. Fisk, of West Seventh street, and J. L. W. Conway left on the 8:12 train this morning. John Foster Sickler, George Hummel, P. J. Higgins and L. R. Logan are scheduled to leave early tomorrow morning.

It is probable that the three recruiting officers will leave for Sea Girt by automobile in the morning and those men contemplating applying for enlistment should visit the headquarters tonight or early tomorrow morning.

ELKS WILL CARE FOR FAMILIES OF MEMBERS

Secretary William R. Townsend, of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., offered at the weekly meeting last night a resolution for considering outlining a plan to take care of the families of members of the local lodge who enlist with the militia for service in Mexico. It is proposed to secure the name of the local Elk who affiliates himself with a military company to investigate the conditions under which he left his family.

The resolution will be offered for adoption at next week's meeting and will in all probability be passed unanimously. The lodge is a fraternal and patriotic organization and it is in keeping with the terms of its constitution to make this provision.

GEN. SCOTT TO ORDER ALL MILITIA TO BORDER WITHIN A WEEK; BAKER WILL ASK CONGRESS TO RAISE A NEW ARMY

Washington, June 22.—Gen Scott, Chief of Staff, announced shortly before noon today that all militia would be sent to the border as soon as it is effectively mobilized. The administration hopes to hasten this work and have the entire National Guard at the patrol stations within a week. Congress will be asked to sanction a joint resolution permitting service on Mexican soil without delay.

After a conference with President Wilson this morning, Secretary of War Baker went to the Capitol for a conference with Representative Hay, chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs. Secretary Baker declined to see newspaper men before his trip. It is believed some important step regarding the creation of a further supply of troops is in contemplation by the administration. Mr. Hay will be asked to handle the administration plans in the House.

Secretary Daniels of the Navy also made a hurried trip to the Capitol this morning. It is announced, however, that the Mexican situation did not call him there. He will see Senator Tillman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs, before returning to his office.

Senator Works, of California, announced that he would ask on the floor of the Senate why the Foreign Relations Committee had taken no action in regard to his resolution calling for armed intervention in Mexico.

"We have gone the limit in Mexico," declared Senator Chamberlain, of the Military Affairs Committee. "We should show no mercy from now on to Mexico. It is high time that we ordered the army to clean up things."

Secretary Baker said that no action would be taken on the Mexican matter based on the present information available here on the recent fight. He pointed out that all the available information to date regarding the fight at Carrizal was from Mexican sources. He said that Gen. Funston had been requested to make every effort to get a complete report from Gen. Pershing and that until it was received nothing could be done.

PRIZE AWARDS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Ruth Thomas Given Wellesley Cup and Herbert Peacock Gets Yale Trophy.

INSIGNAS PRESENTED

William Whelan, Captain of Basketball Team, Receives the Daily Press Prize—List of Honor Pupils Announced.

Unusual interest, especially in the awarding of the Yale and Wellesley cups, was manifested in the closing exercises of the Plainfield High School held in the auditorium this morning. The program was a varied one.

The presentation of the Wellesley cup to the girl in the senior class that attained the best record in scholarship and athletics during her senior year was made by Mrs. A. L. Kennelly, of Cranford, on behalf of the Wellesley Club, and when Miss Ruth Thomas was named as the winner of the cup the whole school burst forth in applause. Assemblyman William N. Runyon made a stirring address in making the presentation of the Yale cup to the boy in the senior class having attained the best record. Several minutes before Mr. Runyon announced Herbert Peacock as the winner of the cup the school guessed who it would be and as Peacock walked to the stage he was given an ovation. Both Miss Thomas and Peacock have taken an active part in the affairs of the school. Miss Thomas was one of the mainstays of the swimming team, was a member of her class basketball team, and was excellent in her studies; while Peacock has been president of his class for several years, and was a member of the basketball and baseball teams besides having an excellent scholarship record.

The silver loving cup donated by the Daily Press to the winner of the interscholastic basketball championship was presented to William Whelan, captain of the team, by Principal Lindsey Best, and Miss Florence Alpaugh was awarded the silver loving cup given by the G. A. A. for being girl tennis champion of the school. The following members of the baseball and track teams were awarded their insignia for having taken part in a majority of contests: Baseball, Linke, Hutchcroft, Semer, Lewis, Dealman and Stelle; track, Hand, Vail and Field. Condit was the only one to receive his insignia for swimming. For winning honors in the annual inter-class track meet, William Daniels was awarded a gold medal for first place, Wilson Field a gold medal for second place, Martin McDonough a bronze medal for third place, and the following were awarded ribbons for placing in at least one of the events, King, Mills, Hand, O'Donnell, Vail, Francke and Dunham. For having played on the basketball team, Priscilla Pennock, Marion Lansdale, Dorothy Butler, Gertrude Head and Natalie Goetter were allowed their letters, and for having been members of the basketball team of 1917 that won the girls' inter-scholastic championship, Clementine Bremble, Fannie Mann, Marion Lansdale, Lillian Handelman, Katheryn McDonald, Agusta Berrien, Lillian Ball, Gertrude Head, Florence Alpaugh, Ada Johnson, Virginia Sminck, Lydia Haight, Elsa Palmer and Dorothy Butler were awarded their class numerals.

The prizes awarded at the annual Alumnae Speaking Contest held last week were awarded, Miss Ruth Voorhees receiving first prize in the girls' division and Miss Irene Moy second, while Richmond Ritterbush received the boys' irst prize and Caryl Dunavan second. The large banner won by the team representing the High School in the recent New Jersey State Shorthand Contest was presented to the school, and Miss Ellen Shjarback and Miss Viola Sebring received gold medals for securing first and second honors, respectively. Miss Irma Waldorf, Miss Fannie Mann and Miss Florence Holt received bronze medals for being members of the team.

Richard Borden gave the original oration that won him second place in the New Jersey Colgate speaking contest last month, and Richmond Ritterbush gave the essay that was written and spoken by him at the Union County Oratoral Contest, where he won first place. Irving Manley sang several selections, and the exercises concluded with a short address by Superintendent of School Henry Maxson.

MANY WELL-KNOWN MOUNTS TAKEN TO SEA GIRT BY TROOPERS.

While a majority of the animals taken to the State mobilization camp at Sea Girt yesterday by the Troop D Cavalry men from Plainfield belonged to the members of the troop and to the Kensington stables, several were loaned by private individuals. Josef Grandi, of the Kensington stables, provided the troop with ten thoroughbred animals, and Stonewall Jackson sent along three fine steeds. Others were donated by Daniel Runkle, J. H. Mellick, R. D. Mellick, Brown Rolston and Frank D. Warren.

Eighteen in all were taken to camp by the Plainfielders, the original number being twenty, but two "went lame" and it was necessary to drop them. These belonged to Frank D. Warren, of Hillside avenue.

BESLER ASKED TO AID TROOP MOVING

New York, June 22.—At the request of the Secretary of War the American Railway Association has appointed a special committee on co-operation with military authorities, consisting of R. H. Bessler, president of the Central Railroad Company, and President Fairfax Harrison, of the Southern Railway Company, who will act as chairman of the committee. The Quartermaster General has asked that the committee nominate a railroad officer of experience in the operating department to attend at each point of concentration of State troops and to advise and help the Quartermaster at such camps in the use of all railroads.

GERMAN SUCCESS ON BOTH FRONTS

Claim They Have Made Gains Against French and Russians.

Berlin, June 22.—By wireless to Sayville—German successes in both the eastern and western theatre of war were reported today by the war office. The war office in its communique today admitted that the Germans after two determined attacks south and west of Vaux succeeded in penetrating the advanced trenches of the French between Fumin and Chenois Woods. Another stronghold assault was made by the Germans against the new French position on the southern slope of Le Mort Homme, Dead Man's Hill, but it was repulsed.

"STAY AT HOMES" WILL RENDER AID

Ernest R. Ackerman Suggests Plan for Care of Families of Enlisted Men.

TO PREVENT SUFFERING

Mayor Calkins Will Name Representative Committee to Carry Out Mr. Ackerman's Idea—Hearty Response Expected.

Recognizing the fact that everyone cannot offer their services and that those who do answer the call for the defense of the country do so from the highest patriotic motives and at considerable sacrifice, former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, makes a timely suggestion whereby those at home will be able to render valuable aid, in the present critical condition which confronts the country.

In an interview with a reporter for the Daily Press today, Mr. Ackerman suggests that there may be cases of those who have been called to the front who have left wives and children who are without means of support, it is right and proper that the citizens at home see that no suffering occurs. The matter has been called to the attention of Mayor Leighton Calkins and within a few days he will name a representative committee to carry out Mr. Aekerman's plan. In giving his views on the matter Mr. Ackerman said:

"The existing critical condition of the foreign relations of the United States especially with regard to Mexico calls for the highest personal sacrifice and patriotism. The President of the United States has called for mobilization of the militia of all the States to repel invasion on the Mexican frontier, and to protect the lives of American citizens, men, women and children, from outrage and massacre. Our duty is clear. We who are fortunate enough to remain at home in the peace and quiet of the surroundings of Plainfield, must not forget that many of our fellow citizens have responded or will respond to the country's call and are likely to see hard service along the extended line of the Mexican frontier.

"The situation may clear and the service may be short, but the future can only determine that question. In some cases those who have gone forward to defend the country, the integrity of its territory, and to uphold its honor, have left behind wives and children who are without means of support. Is it not, therefore, right and proper for the citizens of Plainfield to see that no suffering occurs in these cases? Should not this work of protecting the health and the welfare of those left behind be done in such a manner that it will not appear to be a public charity?

"Surely those who have given their time and service day after day, week after week in preparing themselves for the country's call should feel that those citizens, who up to this time have made no personal sacrifice, should at least protect those who for the time being may be without means of support. It occurs to me that the situation is one which does not call for generosity, but is a condition demanding fairness, that is to say, if men through their self sacrifice have schooled themselves so as to intelligently respond to their country's call then it is only a matter of justice for those who have made no effort to prepare themselves, if necessary, to take care of the families the heads of which are now in the country's service and who may be called upon to make great sacrifices like the heroes of the past.

"It is my earnest wish that our fellow citizens may see this question, its justice, in the light in which I have presented it, and that they will respond liberally to a fund to protect those who may be in need. Plainfield has always had a hight standard. It has always responded fairly and rightly to every appeal. Its citizenship has always been glad to make sacrifices, and I am sure that in the present instance the people of Plainfield will with enthusiasm maintain their most enviable record."

GOVERNOR PRAISES TROOP D FOR EFFICIENT MOBILIZATION; MEN AT HOME IN CAMP AFTER A WET NIGHT

HORSES ARRIVE AND ALL WILL BE MOUNTED BEFORE END OF DAY—PITCHED TENTS IN RAIN YESTERDAY.

HARD AT WORK GETTING READY FOR SERVICE

Expect to Be Ordered to Border After Necessary Preparation—All Members in Good Spirits—Prominent Visitors Call at Headquarters to Pay Respects to Plainfielders—Gossip of the Camp.

(By Telegraph from a Staff Correspondent.)

MOBILIZATION CAMP, SEA GIRT, June 22.—"What is the latest news?" "Are we going to be sent on to the border soon?" "Have you heard any more details of yesterday's engagement between the United States troops and Mexicans?" and scores of other questions were shot at the representative of the Daily Press by members of Troop D, of Plainfield, at their headquarters here this morning. The citizen soldiers, after a bad night, forgot all about the wet and unpleasant features in their eagerness to learn of the prospects for going to the southwest.

Bright sunshine gave the camp a more cheerful appearance this morning than that of yesterday afternoon. The men were up with the sun, after a restless night spent lying on the damp ground amid surroundings very much in contrast to their own beds occupied on Tuesday night. Blankets, overcoats and other equipment that had been soaked in the downpour of yesterday afternoon were soon hanging on tent ropes, or laid on the grass to dry and long before noon this work was complete. The company cooks had prepared an appetizing breakfast which was soon disposed of. Stable duty was attended to, although this was light this morning, for the troop has but twenty-two horses for seventy-two men. Before the day is over, however, it is expected that every man will be mounted, as a large consignment of horses arrived at Sea Girt during the night, and these will soon be assigned to the various organizations which are short of mounts.

The First Squadron, of which Troop D is a part, occupies a field on the Buckalew farm, about one mile inland from the regular State camp ground, upon which the tents of the infantry regiments have been pitched. Adjoining the squadron are two batteries of field artillery and the signal corp, making a total of about seven hundred men in this section of the camp, and nearly as many horses when fully equipped. The ground is high and slopes gradually down to the tracks of the Trenton and seashore line of the Pennsylvania Railroad. By employing a large number of pipefitters the State authorities succeeded in finishing a water supply line direct to the camp before the citizen soldiers arrived yesterday, and the sanitary arrangements were also thoroughly completed. The field, because of the slope, is naturally drained, and except in the case of a downpour such as last night, may reasonably be expected to be passable in all sorts of weather.

Captain Borden was much pleased with the manner in which the men made camp and went through the first night. He said to the Press representative that Troop D would immediately tackle the job of getting ready for real service and would surprise people by the rapid manner in which the boys would prepare for the border if they are to go.

Some one, perhaps a practical joker, caused a lot of excitement around the troop street last night by reporting that all would go on to Mexico on Saturday of this week. As the horses must be broken and some of the men are not even equipped yet this would be impossible, but until Captain Borden got in touch with the Governor last night, the report was given credence.

Governor Fielder, accompanied by members of his staff, called at Captain Borden's tent, unofficially, during the early evening and complimented him upon the excellent manner in which the Plainfield boys had made camp, in spite of the fact that the horses had to be relayed in order to carry the men and their equipment over the half mile of road intervening between the unloading point at Manasquan and the tents.

As told in yesterday's Daily Press, the troop train arrived at the Manasquan freight yard to unload a few minutes after noon. The men had been given lunch on the train and immediately fell to the task of taking the horses and their two supply wagons from the cars. The saddle bags and other equipment were placed in a field near the railroad siding, with a guard over them. It was after 2 o'clock before Captain Borden gave the command for those who had horses to mount and proceed to the camp ground, one of the wagons of equipment being on its way before the troopers started. When they arrived at the grounds they found Troops A and C, of Newark, and B, of Red Bank, already there, but no tents had been raised. As a shower was threatening Captain Borden requisitioned an automobile belonging to a Plainfielder who is summering at Spring Lake and with this aid and the sending of sixteen horses back to the station the balance of the men were on the field inside of an hour. The work of pitching the tents was started in a light rain, but the squads worked rapidly and before the downpour came the canvas was all up.

A better test of the quality of the khaki tents could not have been offered than that to which they were subjected in yesterday's storm. It rained hard and then harder and it was a cold driving rain. Underneath the tents the ground was dry, but everywhere outside of the place was a sea of mud, having been an open hay field until yesterday morning. Wagon wheels went into the ground a foot or more and the horses found the going hard. The sentries, who had to remain in the wet, put on their oiled slickers and made the best of it, but everyone else sought cover. The downpour continued, with occasional let-up, until about 9 in the evening. The air was quite chilled and army overcoats of winter weight were soon out and in demand.

Captain Borden and Lieutenant Charles occupy a tent facing the company street. When Lieutenant Runkle, who is acting as recruiting officer in Plainfield, joins the command, another tent will be used for the two lieutenants. Captain Borden had as his dinner guest last night Major William B. Bryant, commandant of the squadron, and his adjutant. Colonel Austen Colgate, assistant adjutant general, was also a visitor during the evening.

Last night no one was permitted to leave camp, and few desired to. There is a walk of over a mile to the nearest stores and trolley line and with weather conditions as they were this was not inviting.

Sea Girt has never been the mobilizing point for so large a body of troops before, and yet all the details had been so well worked out that there was nothing lacking yesterday except decent weather. The food supplies for the Plainfielders were deposited in a big pile under a tree near where their tents were to be pitched long before the men arrived in camp. Teams were provided for the baggage wagons of those detachments that were called out on short notice, and had no regular draft stock. All day long big baggage wagons were hauling food for the men and animals, and not a detail was neglected. The whole performance show-

TOWNSHIP SCHOOL QUESTION UNSETTLED

Another Special Meeting Held to Discuss Advisability of New Building.

At a special meeting of the Fanwood Township Board of Education held in School No. 1 last night a committee composed of Joseph E. Rhodes, chairman; Ten Eyck R. Beardsley, Harry P. Robinson, Offley T. Brown, Samuel W. McAnneny and Emil C. Eckhardt, representing the voters of Fanwood Borough, appeared before the Board to present their arguments for a school to be built in that place. During the course of a lengthy discussion of the problem, much was brought out that may tend toward the amicable settlement of the question.

Although the discussion became a general one, Mr. Rhodes was the spokesman for the borough committee, and in a short talk he outlined Fanwood's reasons for wanting a school. It was announced that two lots had been offered gratis, one on Watson road and the other on Martine avenue, as sites for a building, and figures were read and the committee contended would indicate that there were approximately one hundred and twenty-five children who would attend the school.

Mr. Johnson, in a short talk, endeavored to describe the situation that the Board found itself in. He laid special stress on the fact that the conditions at School No. 1 compelled an eight-room addition there. The various other members of the Board of Education and committee took part in the discussion, but nothing of a definite nature was learned.

Now that the committee has presented its arguments for a school that will accommmodate the younger children of the borough before the Board of Education, it is up to that body to decide whether or not it will ask the voters at the coming election to vote on an appropriation for a separate school as well as for the eight-room addition to School No. 1 or not.

SCHOOL TEACHER'S HEARING TO BE CONTINUED MONDAY

Adjourned from last week Monday, the hearing before Assistant State Commissioner of Education John C. Enright of the complaint of Miss Ma Tucker Merrill against the Fanwood Township Board of Education will be continued in School No. 1 Monday morning. Although the case had already occupied one day, it is not expected that it will be finished Monday, but will go over another day.

Miss Merrill, who is asking for back salary since the time the Board of Edusation dismissed her when the kindergarten was abolished, is expected to take the stand in her own behalf, and several witnesses for both sides are yet to be called. The outcome of the case really hinges on the ability of Francis J. Blatz, as attorney for the Board, to show that that body was justified in abolishing the kindergarten, which was taught by Miss Merrill, and Attorney Nichols, of Jersey City, will have to upset all the theories advanced to win the case.

Town Topics

Among the many and varied kinds of pride we hear of in this time of free speech, one that is being mentioned with greater frequency is pride in our public schools. Education is a thing that the very foundations of society is rested on and that the people of today realize that fact is shown by the way the majority are willing to expend money for improvements. The school question is one that vitally interests every public-spirited citizen, and if local parents want their children to go out into the world with an education that will permit them to grasp at the big things in life, then they have got to take an interest in the school affairs and be eager and ready to help.

It is an unquestionable fact that last year's "Community Picnic" was a success, but in striving to make it even better this year the various committees in charge of arrangements are to be commended in their efforts and every help extended to make them succeed. The affair will take on a patriotic air and attract attention from all over the county.

MISS GARDA GRADUATED.

A number of local people attended the annual graduation exercises of the Newark Normal School held yesterday afternoon, when Miss Emily Garda, of North avenue, was a member of one of the largest classes that has ever left that institution. Miss Garda is graduated after completing the course in two years, and her record has been such that she has already been tendered a position at Hasbrook Heights.

THIRTY-TWO COURT CASES.

That the borough recorder, Charles Sheelen, is doing a rushing business in police court this year is indicated by the number of cases he has tried so far. Last year there were only eighteen cases in the entire twelve months, and so far in 1916 there have been thirty-two. Scotch Plains is rather fortunate thus far, and Recorder Jahn and Justice of the Peace Clark have been having a quiet time.

PRESIDENT WILSON MAY SPEAK AT COMMUNITY PICNIC

But little has been done during the past week toward further plans for the second annual "Community Picnic" and until another meeting of the committee is held it is not likely that much will be done. The committee will have charge of an exhibit of articles made by local people and a keen sense of competition is already showing itself.

The work of the Rev. J. Madison Hare as chairman of the speakers' committee has been cut short for the time being by his departure to Sea Girt with the militia. However, with the national election issue at a fever heat and many speakers stumping the country Mr. Hare expects to secure a list of noted men for the occasion. A strong effort will be made by the committee to secure President Wilson as the principal speaker, while Mr. Hare's personal acquaintanceship with Governor Fielder is expected to be strong enough to persuade the State's chief executive to make his second appearance at the picnic.

WILLOW GROVE CHAPEL SOCIETIES ELECT OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Sewing Circle of the Willow Grove chapel was held in the chapel yesterday when the annual election of officers for the coming year was held that resulted in the following: President, Mrs. William Sisserson; vice president, Mrs. Evan Evans; secretary, Miss Anna Scudder; treasurer, Mrs. Ernest Wilcox; organist, Mrs. Louis K. Garda. In the absence of Mrs. Sisserson, who is taking a trip for her health, Mrs. Wilcox presided at the meeting, and after all the business had been transacted a social time was enjoyed.

At the annual meeting of the Sunday-school, William Sisserson was re-elected superintendent, and George W. Cravens was chosen assistant superintendent. Miss Anna Scudder was elected secretary, Miss Margaret Scudder treasurer, and Miss Lillian Lambert, pianist. Mrs. William Sisserson and Miss Ethelwyn Terry were chosen to form the flower committee.

CHANGE IN SERVICES.

The departure of the Rev. J. Madison Hare with his regiment for Sea Girt will necessitate a change in the schedule of services at the Baptist church. Mr. Hare will be able to return in time for Sunday, but it is probable that instead of the regular service, a special one will be held in the afternoon. After Sunday, however, Mr. Hare may not be able to leave his regiment, especially if there is any indications of a departure for the border, and in that case a supply will occupy the pulpit until his return.

LOCAL BOY SCOUTS ARE PLANNING SUMMER CAMP

The play presented a short time ago in the Parish House for the benefit of the Scouts put the financial end of the trip on a sound basis, and, with several local men interested, the affair should be a success.

LOCAL INTEREST KEEN IN THE MEXICAN CRISIS

Considerable local interest is being manifested in the present Mexican crisis because there are a number of residents that have answered to the call for militia. The Rev. J. Maurice Hall, of South avenue, and Frank Carter, of North avenue, have both gone to Camp Beekman, the New York State mobilization camp, the former as a member of the Seventh Regiment and Carter as a member of the Signal Corps. COURT DECIDES INTRICATE CASE

Contention of Local Attorneys Regarding Two Mortgages Sustained.

LOWER COURT REVERSE

Property Will Now Be Sold to Pay Amount Due on the Mortgages and the Costs of Suit—J. H. Van Winkle & Son and W. S. Angleman Represent Appelants.

A case of much importance on account of the principles involved and the precedent established and in which local lawyers were successful has just been decided by the Court of Errors and Appeals.

In 1873 Stephen O. Horton, who resided on Somerset street, in North Plainfield, for many years, sold a farm to Caleb S. Hughson, who was a half-brother of Mr. Horton's wife. He took back a mortgage, and later he took another mortgage for a larger amount. On his death he bequeathed the two mortgages to his wife, who later assigned the two mortgages to her sister, Elizabeth J. Hughson. Caleb S. Hughson, the owner of the property, died and devised the property to his wife, Amanda M. Hughson.

No interest had been paid on the mortgages since 1883, it was claimed, and, therefore, it was insisted that the statute of limitations had attached and the right to foreclose the mortgages had become barred.

The case was first tried in the Court of Chancery before Vice Chancellor Howell on a bill of complaint to foreclose the two mortgages. John H. Van Winkle & Son and W. S. Angleman, of this city, appeared for the holder of the mortgages and insisted that the relationship of the parties and the inability of the mortgagor to pay either principal or interest on the mortgages excused the holder of the mortgages from insisting on her rights and took the case out of the statute.

King & Vogt, of Morristown, who appeared for the owner of the property, insisted that as no interest had been paid for over sixteen years and as the foreclosure action had not been brought within twenty years after interest payments had ceased the mortgages were outlawed and could not be recovered on. Vice Chancellor Howell agreed with this contention and dismissed the bill to foreclose.

The local lawyers, however, believed that their view of the law of the case to be the correct one and took an appeal to the Court of Errors and Appeals, and the result showed that they were right. The decision just handed down in their favor completely sustains the points raised by them and the rights of their client for which they contended and reverses the decision of Vice Chancellor Howell with costs. Justice Bergen wrote the opinion of the court, and in it he discusses the principles involved in his usual able manner. The property will now be sold to pay the amount due on the mortgages and the costs of the suit.

WAR VETERAN STRUCK BY AUTO IN PARADE

Richard F. Davis, a member of the local camp of Spanish War Veterans, is at his home, 435 West Second street, with a badly injured foot as a result of an automobile accident in Newark on June 10. He was marching in the parade of veterans when an automobile ran over him.

There were about 225 present and refreshments were served by th members of the Pastor's Aid Society, with Miss Ruth Sadler, chairman of the entertainment committee, assisted by many of the women of the church, in charge. The social hour took on the form of a "Tag Party," all the new members attaching to themselves labels upon which were printed their names so that closer fellowship might result between the old and the new members.

The prayer service was led by the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Russell, of the Presbyterian Board of New York. Mrs. Charles E. Herring presided at the piano and Martin A. Korff led the singing of the Biederwolf songs on the violin.

The almost continuous wet weather this year has greatly delayed the tarring of streets, the work being much behind that of last year. Today East and West Seventh streets are being treated and tomorrow it is intended to tar Woodland avenue and Randolph road.

GERMANS HALT RUSSIAN DRIVE

Hold Foe In North, but Czar Advances In South.

London, June 22.—The official communications by the German, Austrian and Russian war offices all indicate that the Germans are making a determined effort to resume the initiative lost by the Russian General Brusiloff's drive and create a diversion by a strong attack on General Kuropatkin's armies in the north, especially in Volhynia, on the Styr and Stokhod rivers, in an effort to prevent the Russians receiving re-enforcements.

Most stubborn fighting with fluctuating results is proceeding around Gruziatyn, west of Kolki. The Germans are again attacking further north, in the Smorgon district and the region of Riga. Military experts say that it remains to be seen whether the Germans will be able to bring sufficient pressure in these sectors to relieve the hard pressed Austrians in Bukowina and enable them to make a fresh stand on a new line.

On the eastern and Italian fronts there are no actions of importance.

MAIL "PRESS GAG" DELAYED.

Senate Adopts Rural Delivery Amendment to Postoffice Bill.

Washington, June 22.—In the senate's consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill the senate committee has been sustained on every point. The senate amendment relating to rural free delivery was adopted. A point of order against it by Senator Bryan, representing the view of the postoffice department, was overruled, 37 to 18.

The section relating to "press gag" went over. This section gives the postmaster general arbitrary power over routing periodicals.

How Many Little Girls Have a Very Important Birthday This Month?

The birthday that takes you to your teens! Important birthdays! They are all important, of course, we know that. But this is the birthday that makes you feel grown-up

Yesterday You Were Twelve and Today You Are Thirteen

And somehow, all is changed. That coat, that frock you wore yesterday, is all wrong. It's too "babyish"—you discover that right off. The skirt is too short, the waist is too plain, there's something wrong with the sleeve. And so you tell mother you just must have some "older" things.

Mother Dreads the 'Teens—They're So Hard to Dress

She wants her little girl little as long as possible, of course. But, above all, she wants ittle daughter happy—and she understands how clothes that look wrong can make little girl dreadfully unhappy and uncomfortable.

But what to do! Take time and trouble to sew, when she has always bought your things so satisfactorily and economically at Hahne's!

It isn't necessary for—

We Have Built a Bridge for Thirteen and All the 'Teens—We Have Made "The Age Hard to Dress" An Age "Easy to Dress."

Magically? Far from it. By careful study, planning and securing the co-operation of manufacturers we are presenting to Newark and vicinity apparel for girls and misses that meets daughter's needs, and is being enthusiastically received by both mother and daughter.

It's all a matter of perspective, of looking after little daughter's individual needs. And to suit personalities there must be an interesting variety. That is

Why You Find Such Distinctive and Becoming Apparel for Girls and Misses at Hahne's

So, isn't this the store for mothers whose daughters are

"Standing With Reluctant Feet Where the Brook and River Meet?"

"LAWN FETE" HELD IN CHURCH PARLORS

Young People of Seventh-Day Baptist Church Carry Out Original Plans.

Weather conditions prevented the annual fete of the Seventh-Day Baptist church Christian Endeavor Society being held out of doors, last night, but transferral of all the attractions to the church parlors permitted the program to be carried out with equal success. In addition to the sale of refreshments and useful articles a program of entertainment was featured, the principal number being a Maypole dance by eight children. It proved very attractive despite the shifting from the original place selected on the lawn and was executed very cleverly under the direction of Mrs. Nathan E. Lewis.

The children taking part in the dance were Ruth Hunting, Frances Wells, Esther Vars, Jean Vail, Kenneth Bunn, Leonard Hunting, Donald Lewis and John Reed Spicer. Mrs. Roland G. Davis acted as accompanist on the piano. Vocal numbers were given during the evening by a quartet composed of Dr. O. B. Whitford, Ernest Whitford, Roy Titsworth and Charles Titsworth.

One of the largest and most liberally patronized booths in the room was one on which fancy articles were sold, principally of an outdoor nature. It was presided over by Miss Nellis St. John and Miss Mildred Green. They sold a large quantity of flower jars, porch pillows, garden hats and other things. Miss Miriam Warden and Miss Margaret Kimball were in charge of the candy table, while Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hubbard sold coffee and "hot dogs." Refreshments were served by the Misses Helen Rogers, Stephena Shaw, Marion West and Charlotte Norris.

The plans for the fete were arranged and conducted by a general committee from the Young People's Society, of which Miss Ethel Titsworth was chairman.

BOY SCOUT CAMP TO OPEN JUNE 29

Everything is Now in Readiness for Active Season at New Headquarters.

PRIZES TO BE OFFERED

Camp Will Not Be Military in Any Sense—Boys Will Be Thoroughly Trained in Principles of the Organization.

One week from today the Plainfield Boy Scout camp will be in full operation on Terril road. The committee is fully confident that the city of Plainfield will support this enterprise and with $264.49 in hand it has been decided to proceed with the plans to get the camp started by July 1.

Edward Harding, E. A. Sprowl, Lindsey Best, Louis H. Hosmer, O. W. Smith and President Theodore G. Davis, with Commissioner A. V. Searing and former Commissioner Allen E. Beals will close today or tomorrow with another scoutmaster to take charge of the camp. W. A. V. Thomsen, who rose from the tenderfoot rank to assistant scoutmaster in the local scout movement, has been called to service in the New Jersey Field Hospital Corps, under Major Corbusier, and will be unable to serve.

Applications in writing are receivable from local Boy Scouts who desire to go into the scout camp beginning next week. Applications may be made to Commissioner A. V. Searing. Boys above the age of twelve who are desirous of entering scoutcraft will also be admitted upon suitable recommendation by applying to Commissioner Searing.

Applications are being received from out-of-town scout troops, Chairman Harding having received applications already from Hackensack. It is the intention of the committee to give the local scout troops and prospective scouts the prior registering rights. Regarding the plans for the camp, Mr. Beals said today:

"This is not going to be a military camp in any sense of the word. It has been the judgment of the committee in charge of this enterprise as well as the members of the Boy Scout Council to remove from the camp routine anything that savors of military practice. The boys will be under regulation Boy Scout camp practice as approved and adopted by National Boy Scout Headquarters, of which William D. Murray, of this city, is a member of the national council.

"There are five acres of ground up there. The site is ideal, the tents being pitched on a knoll so that no rain can accumulate. The constant dread that parents have of sending their boys to camp where there is considerable water of various depth is entirely lacking at the Plainfield Boy Scout camp. Furthermore, the boy is always within a five-cent trolley fare of his home. There will be swimming at the camp, taught by a competent master, but under conditions as safe as the pool at the High School.

"This camp has been established by the members of the Council to give to the boys of Plainfield, between the ages of 12 and 15 years, some of the benefits of camp life. They will be thoroughly trained in the principles of scoutcraft, which center around the slogan, 'Do a Good Turn Daily.' There will be prizes offered for the best collections of leaves and barks of trees for the permanent exhibition at the new Boy Scout headquarters down town. There will be a healthy mixture of nature study, scout prowess and practical character uplift right where the best scout work can be done with the most beneficial effects upon the boys of Plainfield and vicinity.

"This camp will be open first to the present and prospective Boy Scouts of this city. By special application scouts from other cities and towns will be considered as candidates for entrance. Each scout's term in camp will be one week, but under certain circumstances, depending upon his conduct report at camp, his term may be extended.

"Fifteen candidates will be accepted for the first week, the first applications having the first consideration.

"Each member of the Scout Council is raising $15, toward this fund, but it is necessary to apeal to the people of Plainfield for financial assistance in carrying on this work this summer. The initial expense, besides the operating charges, such as the purchase of tents, cooking equipment, implements and materials for barriers, trek carts, first aid accoutrements, etc., will have to be borne this year. That is why a total of $700 is needed. This will be a permanent investment, and will not be a recurrent charge. The Boy Scouts have come to be an institution in Plainfield and the civic services they have rendered this city and its philantrophies on various occasions make their appeal worthy of active consideration. There is about $500 still to be raised. Checks may be sent to Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., 235 East Sixth street."

GRADED UNION PICNIC.

The Plainfield Graded Union of Sunday School Teachers will hold its annual picnic tomorrow at the Hydewood Golf Club in the borough. The members will enjoy a "spread" at noon and the morning and afternoon will be spent in an informal social way.

COUNCIL PLANS FOR PERMANENT PAVEMENT

Deplorable Condition of Local Streets Demand Improvement at Once.

The deplorable condition of West Front street from Madison avenue to the city line has called forth severe criticism on the part of autosist and others who have occasion to use that thoroughfare. The roadway is full of holes, ruts and other depressions which especially rack an automobile to pieces. The street has been patched up from time to time, but the heavy traffic demands the laying of some form of permanent pavement which will stand the hardest kind of wear and tear.

While the councilmanic street committee has apparently been slow to take action, it is understood that it has plans underway for extending the brick pavement on West Front street as well as other principal thoroughfares and paying for the improvement through the issuance of bonds. In this way property-owners will be called upon to pay their proportionate share of the expense and the future generation will also bear a part of the burden. The street committee has a hard problem confronting them at this time for the reason that the streets have been allowed to get into that condition which now compells it to take decisive steps looking toward permanent improvement and this will necessitate the expenditure of a large sum of money.

SALVATION ARMY SERVICE.

Ensign Duerr and Lieut. Rowland Sipley, of Bayonne, will have charge of the service at the Salvation Army headquarters tonight. Ensign Duerr was at one time the lightweight champion wrestler of Switzerland, but when coming to America he met the Salvation Army and joined with them. All are invited to attend the service.

DR. TITSWORTH IN CHARGE.

During the absence of Dr. Harold D. Corbusier at Sea Girt, Dr. Sidney Titsworth, of Hillside avenue, will take charge of the former's patients, while Dr. Joseph O'Dwyer, of New York city, the osteopathic specialist, will be in Plainfield every Wednesday.

WILL TELL OF HIS WORK.

Rev. W. R. Howell, of Seattle, Wash., who has charge of the Baptist missionary boat on Puget Sound, will speak of his work at the Park Avenue Baptist church tonight and exhibit about one hundred pictures taken in connection with his mission work.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 22, 1916.

OUR HEROES OF '16.

Plainfield gave its best. Whatever the call for troops may mean, whatever the need of men in this crisis in the affairs of our country, this city responded with its biggest and its best citizens, and no community in all the States will be better represented in the new army of Uncle Sam now being mobilized.

Bankers, brokers, merchants, professional men and just plain substantial hardworking citizens who are skilled mechanics were in that little band of khaki-clothed heroes that marched proudly to the troop train yesterday morning, and more than this—fathers and husbands were in it. They counted not the sacrifice. Not one stood back to await his turn in the battle line, as many might have done in all reason and without cowardice, for in such times those least needed at home should go first.

Plainfield was proud of Troop D yesterday morning and she will continue to be proud of this organization, for the men that went from here cannot help but stand out in any situation where intelligence, courage and love of country is demanded, as they have stood out among their fellowmen in the more peaceful pursuits of ordinary life. In the thousands that bid them Godspeed as they left home and family for they know not what, there were mothers, sisters, daughters, wives, fathers, sons, brothers and friends. And then there were others who experienced no personal loss in the going of the men, but who paid their tribute to the heroism of the troopers, who felt a thrill of pride in their race and their city as they watched these men sever home ties and march off to give their all, if need be, in the service of their flag. The plain "Goodbye" had a new meaning. It was murmured again as the old prayer of parting, "God be with you," and it went from the hearts of every man, woman and child in all of Plainfield.

If Watchung Troop is sent to the border it will go into action with a united city humbly beseeching Divine guardianship over the lives of its members, but even though it is destined for a duty no more dangerous than the routine of camp life at Sea Girt its men have shown the stuff of which they are made. They are our heroes of '16, to be given a place in our hearts with those that gave the Union birth in '76 and those that perpetuated it in '61, and to be honored for all time when they come back to take up again their work where it was left off when the bugle blew.

In selecting Vance C. McCormick, of Harrisburg, as chairman of their national committee, Democratic leaders have not made a mistake. Mr. McCormick is a publisher and lawyer of high standing. He has an established and creditable reputation in both callings. His political views have not always been in accord with those of a majority of the voters of the country, but he has commanded respect as a politician. He passed through the freshmen and sophomore courses into the senior political class long ago. He has been in the political harness long enough to fit himself for the responsible duties he now assumes. Regardless of the outcome of the November election it is safe to predict that the Democratic leaders will be better satisfied with their selection of a national committee chairman when the vote is counted than they are at present. The national policies Chairman McCormick now supports are to be placed under the acid test of the ballot. It will not be to his discredit if they fail in this test,for he will support them with vigor. His connection with the present national administration will not weaken its position by any means, and the leaders of his party were wise in utilizing his reputation and ability to support their cause. When the voting is over the Republican leaders will acknowledge that in Mr. McCormick they had a worthy opponent.—Pittsburgh Leader.

Now that America calls her men, that she needs every trained fighter to repulse the invasion of a foreign enemy, perhaps some of the Americans who have served France and England in such heroic fashion on the battlefields of Europe will come back home to enlist under the Stars and Stripes. Their courage and experience would be worth more than any man can tell to Gen. Funston in the scrap with Mexico that seems to be inevitable and surely France and England, in recognition of the service already rendered, will excuse them that they may serve the land that gave them birth.

MEET TONIGHT TO PLAN FOR FOURTH

All Local Organizations Invited by the Recreation Committee.

Every organization in the city of Plainfield promises to be represented at the meeting called tonight by the Recreation Committee when a program for the local Fourth of July celebration will be worked out. An invitation has been sent to each civic and commercial organization in Plainfield and North Plainfield and most have already accepted.

More money is needed to bring the Fourth fund up to $500, which is the amount necessary to carry out the tentative program arranged by the Recreation Committee. DeWitt Hubbell, of the Plainfield Trust Company, is treasurer of the fund and checks can be made payable to him.

One of the things to be done tonight is to select an orator and refer this matter to a sub-committee. It is desired that the speaker at the celebration shall be one of ability and a man of national prominence will probably be selected. Architect Fisher is working on plans for a stand that will accommodate the 500 singers that Clifford Braider promises to recruit for his chorus, and this will be erected in City Park as soon as sufficient funds are guaranteed.

Twenty-four Prisoners Farming.

Morristown, June 22.—The force of prisoners employed on the Morris county farm has been increased to twenty-four, the largest gang sent out thus far. Most of the men are employed in digging the ditch for the water supply of the new bunk house, but others are grubbing in the peach orchard and cultivating.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Due to the many requests received of late for a picture that is different from the usual run, the management of Proctor's have located just such a production in "The Leopard's Bride," which is presented at the theatre today as the headline attraction. The cast in this story of the terrors of India is a large one and includes such well known and popular favorites as Margaret Gibson, William Clifford, Brooklyn Keller, Nan Christy, Frederick Montague, Fred Goodwins and many others. The scenes are laid in Northern India, and the atmosphere is one of English army life. This gives ample opportunity for magnificent settings, and the action is what is commonly looked upon as "high life." Stunning gowns, pretty girls, dashing officers, and then ferocious animals. This is a combination which makes the picture unusual. Two army officers are rivals for the same girl. The superior takes advantage of his position, and sends the other off to a post in the jungle, the latter winning the love of a native girl, who watches him night and day. The superior officer, with the first girl and her father, take a party for a leopard hunt, and the white girl, becoming separated from her party is rescued by the native girl and taken to the camp where the junior officer—her true lover—is resting. Nadja, the native girl, realizing that she has no real place in the man's heart, wanders out into the jungle, walks into the lair of leopards and binds herself to a tree. She is rescued after the animals have attacked her, and is carried dying to camp. There she lives long enough to bring the lovers together and straighten out the wrongs of the past. In addition today a three-part drama, "The Primal Instinct," together with several comedy creations are presented. Tomorrow Violet Mersereau appears in the headline feature, "Autumn," while on Saturday Mabel Taliaferro is starred in "Her Great Price." Announcement is made that "Where Are My Children?" will be shown at Proctor's at an early date, as will also Anna Pavlowa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

--Astor Theatre--

It would pleaase a professional boxer immensely to see the fight put up by Arthur Hoops, star of the George Kleine photodrama. "The Danger Signal," in which he and a muscular young blacksmith "mix it" in one of the scenes. Hoops is an athlete and can hit with force of a pile-driver, a fact that the blacksmith will attest, because he is knocked off his pins and sent crashing against a nearby tree with force enough to break all the bones in his body. He comes back at Hoops, however, and is then punched so hard that the film shows him spitting out two teeth. "The Danger Signal" released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, will be shown at the Astor Theatre today, also the third episode of Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance," which is meeting with great favor among the Plainfield theatregoers. Tomorrow we will offer the treat of the season, Kitty Gordon in "As in a Looking Glass." Kitty Gordon, a star whose beauty will astound the most critical, whose gowns and hats are the most marvelous creations of the modiste's and milliner's art, and whose acting is the supreme expositon of illustrious dramatic power. Kitty Gordon, for years a noted beauty of the stage, will will be seen for the first time on the screen in the new World Film production, "As in a Looking Glass," a five-part thrilling drama. The story of "As in a Looking Glass," adapted from the novel of the same name, by F. C. Phillips, provides Miss Gordon with opportunites for remarkable emotional acting, as well as for the display of a succession of the most dazzling creations of the modiste's and milliner's art. The greater part of the action occurs in Washington, D. C., in the diplomatic circles, affording splendid chances for brilliant costuming and scenic embellishments. Miss Gordon has been surrounded by a remarkable cast of stage favorites. The gowns Miss Gordon wears in the supposed "drawing-room" at a Washington embassy are what we might well call "bee-yoot-i-ful" and there is no doubt they will be greatly admired by the fairer sex. It may be interesting to know that some sixteen years ago Miss Gordon married the Hon. Capt. Beresford, of the British army and nobility, and became known in England as Lady Beresford. Her daughter, Cynthia Beresford, is now fifteen years old, as beautiful as her mothr, and apparently as talented. In addition to this wonderful production we will show the Tribune Weekly, comedy and drama, etc. A big surprise is in store for the Fourth of July, watch daily program in the evening newspaper.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

One of the greatest events in the history of the motion picture art will take place at Plainfield Theatre today, tomorrow and Saturday, matinee and night, June 22, 23, 24, when Russia's dancer, Anna Pavlowa, will appear on the screen in a massive spectacle entitled "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

When Pavlowa was asked why she harkened to the siren call of the cameraman, she answered in a manner characteristic of a world celebrity who takes the precaution to look before she leaps. Said Pavlowa:

"The reason that I accepted the motion picture proposition is simple enough. I have not been seen in many places, and only in the largest cities of this country, while the smaller cities I have never visited at all. In Europe I have appeared less frequently than in America, while in many of the other nations I have never trod the boards of the stage.

"Naturally when I discovered that the motion picture art had developed as it has in the last two years I was possessed with the desire to appear all over the world simultaneously. I felt too that I would immeasurably add to my fame and popularity. It is now possible for me to appear before seventy-five per cent. of the world's population within two years' time. What more could any ambitious artist desire?

"Of course," continued Madame Pavlowa, "one may succeed in achieving one goal, but if I fail in the new art it would have been far wiser had I never attempted it.

"On the other hand, I not only hope to succeed in achieving a triumph, but I am confident that the screen will reveal my art vastly enhanced."

WHAT PATRIOTISM IS.
(From Boys Life, the Boy Scouts' Magazine.)

Patriotism—just what is it?

Is it shooting off firecrackers on the Fourth of July?

Is it clapping and yelling every time the Stars and Stripes is unfurled on the stage at the theatre?

Is it parading the streets to advertise preparedness, or whatever theory may be agitating the public mind at the moment?

Is it talking about doing something for your country at some future time on some field of battle or on some superdreadnought?

Common sense says no. Cheering the flag and marching in parades are all very well, but the man who does these things and nothing else is about as patriotic as a dog that barks and makes a lot of noise when he hears the band play.

Suppose a man showed his willingness to work only by shooting a cannon on Labor Day?

Suppose his idea of supporting a family was to clap and yell every time a pick or pen appeared in the moving pictures?

Suppose he marched in a parade once or twice a year and loafed the rest of the time?

Would you say he was a good worker?

Patriotism is patriotism only when it works.

It is patriotic to keep yourself mentally awake, increasing and using your store of knowledge.

It is patriotic to keep yourself morally straight, doing the right because it is the right.

It is patriotic to help other people at all times.

Patriotism is doing your common duty now—every day.

SCOUTS HERE AND THERE.

A fire fighting corps has been organized by the Boy Scouts of Salamanca, N. Y., to fight the forest fires that occur every spring and fall. A system of signals has been arranged to be blown on the municipal fire whistle to call the scouts together in emergency.

Three thousand scouts were the guests recently of Percy Haughton, manager of the Boston Braves, at the game between Boston and the Chicago Cubs, the scouts being admitted on presentation of their membership certificates, which made it impossible for anybody not a registered scout to take advantage of Mr. Haughton's offer. The Philadelphia scouts have been similarly entertained as guests of Connie Mack for several years.

At the New York School of Agriculture at Farmingdale, N. Y., a Boy Scout camp will be conducted this summer in co-operation with the Queens Borough Scout Council, Greater New York.

Training courses in scoutcraft will be conducted this summer in many colleges, universities and schools, among them Columbia University, University of Wisconsin, University of California, Culver Military Academy, University of Virginia, and the Northwestern State Normal School of Michigan. A special course on the organization of the Boy Scouts of America will be given in the summer school at Rutgers College.

C. H. Fenstermacher, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, has written to the National Headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America: "The campaign started two years ago with the Tulsa scouts to teach every scout to swim has continued, and today there are less than 100 boys over 10 years of age in Tulsa's 5,000 boys who cannot swim."

A mobilization test recently held in the second district of the Greater Boston Council resulted in the mobilization of 360 scouts within a period of two hours.

There is a rapidly increasing interest in boy scout work on the Pacific Coast, and many important developments are under way. In Los Angeles a successful $10,000 financial campaign was finished recently, and the Scout Council reorganized.

POWER OF ORGANIZATION.

I am more and more of the opinion that the Boy Scout Movement is going to grow more rapidly than most of its sanguine enthusiasts believe. It seems to me that I see evidence of it in so many different directions. The way to make it grow is through an effective organization. The United States has proven through several dissimilar institutions the wonderful and effective power of organization. The Standard Oil Company, the greatest commercial success in the world, is primarily successful because of its scientific organization. Tammany, the most powerful political organization we have, is the strongest because of its splendid organization. The Y. M. C. A., with its hundreds of millions of assets, is one of the greatest institutions in America primarily through effective organization. The great Roman Catholic Church is another world power, growing stronger constantly through its splendid organization. The Scout Movement will progress just as fast and as rapidly as its organized power can be increased and nationalized.—Milton A. McRae, vice president of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America.

COMMENCEMENT AT HARVARD.

Cambridge, Mass., June 22.—Harvard University, the oldest of all American educational institutions, today closed its 280th year, graduating one of the largest classes in its history. The commencement exercises, hitherto held in Sanders Theater, were transfered to the Stadium this year, because of the better facilities offered for handling the large crowd of invited guests. As in former years, the exercises of the day and the academic procession to the Stadium were in charge of the class that is celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of its graduation this year, the class of 1891 having the honor.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make any one who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—Adv.

THE STEEPLE.
By Laura Campbell

The steeple reaches up and up
'Most to the sky!
No man lives at the top of it—
It is so high!

But sometimes small birds, flying far!
Pause there to rest;
And once two little birds stayed on
And built a nest!

And sometimes twinkling stars at night
Let ladders down!
And to the steeple cloud elves climb
To watch our town!

They watch there when I go to bed,
The wee, wee people,
And all the night keep faithful guard
Upon the steeple!

Summer Don'ts By the Baby.

Don't forget I shall feel any sudden change sooner than you will.

Don't swaddle me with clothes that make me perspire. A band, shirt, napkin and rompers are about what I need for hot weather.

Don't forget to give me a ten-minute sponge-bath once or twice on hot days.

Don't forget my two-hour daily nap outdoors in a shady place. Mosquito-netting will save me from flies and insects during this nap.

Don't coax me to take food that I do not want.

Don't expose me to the tortures that follow letting me experiment with food that I pick up myself. Your judgment is better than mine in this matter.

Don't feed me more than four times a day. More than this gives me a pain.

Don't forget always to give me a drink of cool boiled water between meals. I need plenty.

Don't try to check any diarrhea I may have with patent medicines or remedies suggested by our neighbors, relatives or friends. Ask my friend, the doctor.

Don't bluff me with a pacifier. I want a good-looking mouth when I grow up.

AND

If you want me to keep well and happy during my second summer, I've just got to have CLEAN AIR, CLEAN CLOTHING AND CLEAN FOOD.

—The Delineator.

Read Good Books.

Louise Collier Wilcox, in advocating good books in the July Delineator, says: "If you but teach yourself to love books, and to read them, and to make their contents a part of yourself, you will have the seed of the flowers of life ready to scatter wherever you pull up a thistle. For, remember, all the very best of life is put into books, sooner or later.

"We are given a self and short lifetime. The problem set us is how in that given time to get rid of narrow, limited selves and go on into a bigger, broader, fuller, finer life—a life that half-consciously is scattering flower seeds where thistles grew."

A New Book for Mothers.

"In Self-Reliance," a Bobbs-Merrill publication, Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher has put down the things about assisting children to help themselves which every mother is fully aware of, but which many of them have forgotten in the hurry and press of modern domestic life. The book gives much valuable advice about developing self-reliance and a sense of responsibility in the child as it grows up. Mrs. Fisher treats the subject in a popular way, which is apt to prove attractive to mothers who usually find little interest in the heavier literature on the child education question.

Teach Reverence.

"What children need to be taught today is reverence and a respect for authority," said Superintendent Maxwell, of New York, in an address given in Philadelphia before the Association of College and Preparatory Schools.

Just where have mothers erred that such a statement can be made? In trying to be companions to their children, in trying to keep their confidence, have we forgotten the Fourth Commandment which from the child's point of view means honor for authority, while later in life authority means God.

Reverence cannot be taught by knowledge of sex hygiene. The medical students have such knowledge, but it has not made them reverent nor moral as a class. We have no real knowledge of death; but we have succeeded in teaching reverence for it. The awe of life is akin to the awe of death. Why smile knowingly at any thought which leads to the one? In teaching nature-study which leads to the coming of life, is the same reverent tone used as in teaching of death? Do we teach that life comes from God or that it just comes?

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Frederick and Kate Chased Some Peddlers.

They Marched Off to Hunt For Thieves.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

JACK and Evelyn sat down beside daddy and listened to the bedtime story:

"Once a man and his wife, Kate, chased some rogues who got their gold. They took along some luncheon, but Kate used the butter to grease some tree trunks, and while she bent over one of her cheeses rolled down a hill, and she was so cross that she threw the other cheese after it, nobody knew where, down the hill.

"So Frederick had to lunch on dry bread. 'What a goose you were to throw away the cheese and waste the butter!' he told her.

"'You never told me not to,' said Kate.

"'Then go home and bring me some food,' he said, 'and be sure you lock the door.'

"Kate found nothing to eat at home except vinegar and nuts. As she started back to her husband she said, 'Frederick told me to lock the door, but nowhere can it be so safe as if I took it along with me.'

"So she took off the door and carried it to Frederick, saying: 'Here is the door. Now you can watch it for safety.'

"'How stupid you are!' shouted Frederick. 'Now you have left the house so that any rogue can go in! You shall carry the door for your trouble!'

"'I will carry the door, but not the vinegar and nuts too. You may fasten them to the door if you please.'

"So they marched off into the woods to hunt for thieves, while Kate did not realize she was carrying the vinegar and nuts. When it grew dark they climbed up in a tree to pass the night. Soon along came the peddlers who had stolen their gold and made a fire right under the tree. After awhile Frederick threw some nuts down on their heads. But the rogues only blinked and said, 'It must be hailing.' When Kate's arm ached holding the door and vinegar jug Frederick spilled some vinegar down on the peddlers. But again they blinked and without looking up in the tree said, 'Now it is raining.'

"At last Kate's arm ached so much that she whispered to Frederick, 'This door is so heavy that I shall soon throw it down.' He begged her not to, for fear it would betray them to the rogues. But she cried, 'Here goes!' and let go of the door. It fell crash-bang! onto the thieves, who shouted 'Murder!' and without stopping to see anything ran away as fast as they could, leaving all their gold behind them.

"So Frederick and Kate climbed down from their tree and found all the yellow buttons that Kate had traded with the rogues safe and sound there on the ground," daddy finished.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

A Discussion of Mothers-in-Law Brings Out Some of Ethel's Interesting Views.

"You have never met our friends the Forsyths, have you?" asked Ethel Gordon of her neighbor, Nell Morton. "They are coming out to take us for a trip into the country to visit Mrs. Forsyth's aunt."

"That will be pleasant. Where does the aunt live?" Nell was showing proper interest, for the subjects of conversation that the women had in common were not many.

"I think it is about fifty miles from here. If you go by train you have to get off at Riverdale."

"Indeed! That is where we get off when we go to visit Mother Morton. We spent a month down there this summer; that is, Hal and I did, and Dick was there for his two weeks' vacation. It is a lovely country. Do you remember the aunt's name?"

"Let me see." Ethel referred to the letter. "It is Mrs. Tellson."

"Why, that is a neighbor of Dick's mother. Isn't that interesting? I have seen her, I think. I know she is a friend of Mother Morton's and that means she is a very fine character," laughed Nell.

"You seem to like your mother-in-law," remarked Ethel in surprise.

"No, I love her," corrected Nell. "She has done more to give me a correct view of life than any one I know. She is a fine character. I wish you could know her." Nell was thinking how intolerant the old lady would be of Ethel's thriftless ways and wondering what Ethel would do if the old lady "gave her a piece of her mind," as she called telling in plain language what she thought of a certain line of conduct that did not meet her approbation.

"Perhaps she will visit her some time and I can meet her," replied Ethel indifferently. "Mothers-in-law are not usually adored. I should like to see this one."

"Why, you must have had a very uncomfortable time with your mother-in-law," laughed Nell.

"No, I hardly know her, but I hope our paths will not cross very frequently. It is better so. No two people see alike and, of course, she is so interested in Ralph that she would think everything I did that did not meet with his approval was necessarily wrong. That's natural." Ethel's smile was sarcastic.

"Don't feel that way." Nell's tone was earnest. "I did at first, before I knew any better. Of course our husbands' mothers are interested in their boys. They would not be mothers if they weren't, but are not wives interested in their husbands, too? If the mothers, who have lived so much longer and consequently know so much more, can put us right when we are wrong, shouldn't we want them to?"

Ethel tossed her head. "Perhaps we should, but I for one do not want anyone interfering in my affairs."

"You surely do not mean that you would rather go on in a wrong course; go on making mistakes that would make everyone unhappy, rather than let someone show you your mistake?" inquired Nell incredulously.

Ethel shrugged her shoulders, but did not reply.

"Willingness to learn is the sign of an open mind. I want to learn of everyone who can teach me. It is so much easier than learning by experience."

"I can see why you get along with your mother-in-law," laughed Ethel. "You are a wonder, you are." And she rose to go.

DUKE OF GRAFTON IS BRITAIN'S OLDEST PEER

London, June 22.—The Duke of Grafton, oldest member of the British peerage, came in for congratulations today on the occasion of his ninety-fifth birthday anniversary. His Grace is one of the most wonderful men in the peerage. Despite his ninety-five years he gets about the country in wonderful fashion and is as alert mentally and physically as most men who are many years his junior.

The Duke of Grafton will be succeeded on his death by his eldest surviving son, the Earl of Euston. In this connection it may be recalled that an American girl declined what would have been an irresistable temptation to most girls—the chance to become the prospective Duchess of Grafton. The girl in question is Miss Edythe Havemeyer, of New York, whose marriage to the Earl of Euston was set for July 20, 1914. Almost at the last moment the bride declined to go to the altar. All of the formalities in regard to the marriage had been arranged, the trousseau had been ordered and society was awaiting the advent in the course of a reasonable time of a Duchess of Grafton at court. Why the American girl broke the engagement is as much a secret today, so far as the general public is concerned, as it was two years ago. The Earl of Euston recovered from the shock, however, and several months ago announcement was made of his engagement to marry Lady Borthwick, the widow of the twenty-first Baron Borthwick. Lady Borthwick's fortune, although considerable, is nothing in comparison to what Miss Havemeyer was supposed to be able to bestow upon the sadly impoverished Lord Euston, who will be confronted with the necessity for extensive repairs upon the family estates when they finally pass into his hands.

COLLEGE ROMANCE LEADS COUPLE TO THE ALTAR

Los Angeles, Cal., June 22.—The wedding of Miss Ruth Tinglepaugh and Richard Rutherford, which is to take place here tomorrow at the home of the bride's parents, will mark the culmination of a romance that had its beginning at the University of Nebraska, where both the prospective bride and bridegroom were prominent in student athletic circles. Rutherford was one of the greatest athletes ever developed at the Nebraska University, starring in basketball and wrestling and rounding out three years on the Husker football team without ever having met defeat. Miss Tinglepaugh, during the two years she attended the university, held the women's tennis champion. When her parents left Lincoln to make their home in Los Angeles, Rutherford secured a place with the life-saving crew at Long Beach during vacation last summer and figured in a number of thrilling rescues. After their wedding trip the couple will return to Lincoln, where Rutherford has been elected assistant coach at the university.

HONORS FOR VANCE.

Washington, D. C., June 22.—In commemoration of his great service to State and country, a statue of Zebulon B. Vance, soldier of the Confederacy, war governor of North Carolina, and for many years a prominent figure in the United States Senate, was unveiled today in Statuary Hall at the Capitol. The unveiling was made the occasion of an imposing ceremony, in which the participants included the Vice President of the United States, members of the Senate and House of Representatives, official representatives of the State of North Carolina, and several members of the family of the late Senator Vance. The statue is the work of Gutzon Borglum, the well known sculptor.

If it's advertised today it is likely that it is of timely interest to you today.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

CRACK GOLFERS WILL GIVE AN EXHIBITION

Travers, Marston, Kirby and Lewis to Meet at Country Club on Saturday.

Plainfield golf enthusiasts will have an opportunity of viewing the country's best performers in this city on Saturday morning and afternoon when a series of exhibition matches will be played at the Plainfield Country Club. The public is invited to witness the play, the first match commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning and the afternoon match at 2 o'clock.

There will be four contestants in the match which will consist of thirty-six holes. Eighteen will be played in the morning and the remaining half in the afternoon. The contestants will be the following: Jerome D. Travers, open golf champion of the United States and several times National Amateur Golf champion; Oswald Kirby, New Jersey State champion and Metropolitan Golf Association champion; Max Marston, runner-up last year in the amateur championship and winner of many other prominent tournaments, and Reginald Lewis, the well-known Westchester champion.

All four men are in the best of condition and have been playing in some of the big tourneys throughout the country. Max Marston yesterday won the first leg on the Lynnewood Hall Cup at Philadelphia, offered by George D. Widener, by defeating Cameron Buxton, of Philadelphia, 2 up and 1 to play, in the final match of the annual tournament at the Huntingdon Valley Country Club. Marston was a runner-up to Jerome Travers, national champion, in last year's Lynnewood Hall tournament.

"ZIM" SLIDES DOWN STAIRS.

Chicago, June 22.—Third Baseman Zimmerman, of the Chicago Nationals, will be out of the game for about ten days, it was announced yesterday, because of a dislocated shoulder, suffered when he fell down a flight of stairs.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

KOLY SAYS HE WON'T GO WITH REGIMENT

Noted Runner Says He Joined Militia Under Misapprehension.

Hannes Kolehmainen's defense is that a good soldier should be a poor runner. Accordingly, Hannes has refused to go to the front with his fellows in the Fourteenth Infantry Regiment. Beisdes, the climate down in Mexico is altogethr different from that of Finland, his naitve land.

Kolehmainen has not answered the call, and Colonel John Henry Foote, commander of the Fourteenth, is thinking seriously of ocurt-martialing him.

Koly says that he was induced to join the Fourteenth so that the members of that organization could be represented by him in military athletic competition. In addition, Hannes feelingly believes that his mother did not raise her boy to be a soldier.

Kolehmainen, it developed last night, is not a citizen of this country. He came here a few years ago, and to some extent carried out his intention of becoming a naturalized citizen.

As a distance runner Koly has few, if any, superiors. He is the holder of several championships, and has established quite a few running records since his arrival here. He was one of the stars at the last Olympic games.

William Kolehmainen, Hannes' brother and a professional runner of considerable ability, acted as Hannes' interpreter last night.

"You can say for me," said William in effect, "that my brotner is the victim of circumstances. When Hannes was induced to join the Fourteenth last winter, he did so with but one idea in mind. That was to rerresent the regiment in military competition. He ran for the regiment whenever he was told to. But he will not run any more this season. He is overtained."

Hannes received a telegram last Sunday night. The sense of this was an order to report for duty. He failed to do this, and two officers were sent to his home to get him. Koty told them, it is said, that he would not report, and defied them to take him, in broken English.

Colonel Foote, his commanding officer, indicated last night that Hannes will be made no exception to the call.

"I am aware," said Colonel Foote, "that Kolehmainen is not a citizen of this country. When he made out his enlistment papers he swore that he intended to become a citizen. That was enough. When we want him, we will get him. I do not know that two officers went to see him, but if he has disobeyed any orders he will be punished."

COLLEGE CREWS READY FOR BIG BOAT RACE

New London, June 22.—With the expectation of witnessing one of the greatest aquatic events of the year, the advance guard of an army of enthusiasts and college men arrived in New London today in anticipation of the annual Yale-Harvard boat races to be rowed over the Thames course tomorrow. The early visitors found the city in regatta garb, the hotels, business houses and many residences displaying a profusion of blue and crimson flags and bunting.

The several crews that will compete in the regatta took their final practice spins today. The coaches of the two institutions, after seeing the blades dipped in the water for the last time before the races, expressed themselves as well satisfied with the condition of the crews. It is the general opinion that both of the varsity eights have made a decided improvement over their early season form.

Three races will be included in the day's program. The morning races will be for the second varsity and freshmen eights, starting at 10:30 o'clock from the drawbridge and finishing two miles up the river. The race of the varsity eights, the big event of the day, will be called at 5:15 p. m. The start will be off Red Top and the finish at the drawbridge, four miles below. Last year and the year before the varsity race was rowed up stream.

ELIZABETHIAN ABSTAINERS WILL PLAY CUBAN GIANTS

Having gone hitless last Sunday when Arthur Romer, of the New York Police Department team performed against them, the Elizabeth Tabs are putting the finishing touches on their training stunts in order to be "pink" when they entertain the crack Cuban Stars at T. A. B. Park, Elizabethport, next Sunday afternoon. The Cubans have a splendid reputation, their latest achievement being the defeat of the fast Lincoln Giants. The Cubans created a great record in Cuba during the winter and are confident that there are mighty few teams in America who can take their measure. Prior to last Sunday's game the Tabs had a team batting average of .345, and realizing that this mark got an awful bump in their no-hit tilt, they are determined to regain [illegible] laurels at the expense of the Cubans. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock. T. A. B. Park is at the Elizabethport station, Central Railroad.

THEATRICAL LIGHTS OFF ON FISHING TRIP

Chris Sorensen, Jr., and Charlie Case Expect to Play Havoc With Denizens.

Chris Sorensen, Jr., of Putnam avenue, the well known popular magician, and Charlie Case, the monologuist, who has made millions of vaudeville patrons laugh at his "stories of father," left the former's home in this city this morning for a fishing trip to the Passaic river. They departed at 5 o'clock in Mr. Sorensen's 'flivver," and expect to spend the day in the vicinity of Berkeley Heights, casting and trolling for bass and pickerel. If there are any of this variety of fish in that vicinity it is one best bet that Messrs. Sorensen and Case will come home with a full share. They were given full instructions before they left as to where the biggest bass hang out by "Link" Martin, who is known among his friends as the "Passaic Hermit," because of his trips to the river by himself.

Both Mr. Sorensen and Mr. Case are kept very busy during the entire year, with the exception of a brief vacation period during June and July, and they never miss an opportunity to get in a few days at their favorite sport of fishing. Mr. Sorensen was formerly manager of Prior's Band and one of its principal tromboone soloists, but in recent years has been musical director for Eva Tanguay. Mr. Case is a resident of Lockport, N. Y., but is a great admirer of Plainfield, and talks of making his home here at some future time. He is the author of his stories about his fictitious father and his best ones have been retold all over the world. Both Mr. Sorensen and Mr. Case hold fishing records, won on trips through the Adirondacks and in Canada

Two Grads Receive War Cross from France.

Hoboken, June 22.—Two Stevens Tech graduates, Alexander Beck and Lawrence Van Vechten, are members of the Harjes Formation of American Red Cross Workers which recently received the Croix de Guerre from General Petain for bravery and devotion to duty under fire.

A clipping from a Paris newspaper, recently received at the school here, gives this information from a formal citation in army orders issued by the chief officers at the front:

"The organization assumed during the period of eleven days' fighting from March 8 to 19, with absolute disregard of danger, the transportation of wounded in a zone particularly swept by enemy artillery."

ARMOR PLATE OFFER ON COST BASIS

Bethlehem Steel's New Proposal to Senate Committee.

Washington, June 22.—President E. G. Grace of the Bethlehem Steel company has written a letter to Senator Benjamin R. Tillman, chairman of the senate committee on naval affairs, in which he makes an entirely new offer. This offer is to the effect that his company will manufacture armor plate for the government at actual cost, plus such overhead expenses as the federal trade commission may determine to be fair.

President Grace, after reciting the fact that the naval appropriation bill as it comes to the senate from the house contains a provision to construct a government armor plant at a cost of $11,000,000, says:

"The Bethlehem Steel company will agree for such a period as the government may designate as fully protecting the public interest to manufacture armor plate for the government of the United States at actual cost of operation plus such charges for overhead expenses, interest and depreciation as the federal trade commission may determine to be fair."

President Grace not only denies that the company's act is in the nature of a "deathbed" repentance, but also declares that the company does not for one moment concede that the prices charged for armor in the past, $432.62 a ton, have been unreasonable.

Since 1887 the government has taken but a trifle over 25 per cent of the company's capacity for armor plate production. Had a larger tonnage been contracted for the price would have been lower. Mr. Grace says the government's $11,000,000 plant will cost over $15,000,000 and that his company can manufacture for the government cheaper than the government can do so for itself.

"It is said," President Grace's letter continues, "'that a government plant should be built to take the profit out of war.' Our company has no inclination to make capital out of the military necessities of the United States. In the event of war or threatened war all the facilities we have for any purpose are at the disposal of the United States government upon its own terms. That means not only our armor plant. It includes our commercial plant and our ordnance making facilities. We have urged no program of preparedness, we only desire to be able to serve the government as we may be called upon."

President Grace states that his armor plant was built at the request of the government, that this request has by the implicit action of successive secretaries of the navy been frequently renewed, that the Bethlehem Steel company has repeatedly agreed to place all the figures relating to the cost of armor plate production at the disposal of committees of congress or the navy department and that the senate committee's own figures show that the United States has for twenty years obtained armor plate at a price less than that paid by any of the great naval powers.

After reciting that some $20,000,000 are now invested in three armor making plants, he urges the committee to reconsider his previous recommendation that a government plant be built not "with reference to the interests of the Bethlehem Steel company, but with supreme regard for adequate national defense and sound public policy."

GOVERNOR PRAISES TROOP D

ed that in spite of criticism of the National Guard by regular army officers, the New Jersey division, at least, is prepared for quick moves.

There was little that was spectacular about the arrival of the troops. The infantrymen marched into camp past the Governor's Cottage and were reviewed by him, but the mounted organizations went right to their location, without fuss and feathers, and were soon busily at work making camps.

Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., upon whom has fallen the work of getting the Guard properly mobilized at Sea Girt, was delighted with the smooth way in which things ran. When seen by a Daily Press reporter yesterday afternoon he showed in his face the strain that he has been under, and admitted that he had been almost a total stranger to sleep for three days. Early in the afternoon he sent the following telegram to the Secretary of War at Washington:

"New Jersey reports with pride that the entire complement of militia called for by order of the President and received at Trenton at 10 a. m., Monday, June ninteenth, is, at 3 p. m., Wednesday, June twenty-first, actually in camp at Sea Girt. All organizations have reported at the maximum peace strength and are fully equipped. All horses and mules required have been obtained and are either now at Sea Girt or on the way here. Cannot you arrange to allow these troops to go forward, to be followed by the recruits now here and rapidly coming in, as soon as you can furnish the necessary equipment for them? I respectfully represent that the honorable position which New Jersey holds among the States of the Union by reason of devoted service in past years and the efficient record of her militia as evidenced by this prompt response which a patriotic spirit has made to the nation's rallying call, entitled the New Jersey troops to a place among those first to be called into active service."

He also sent a telegram to General Leonard Wood, urging that supplies for the 1,200 or more men who had enlisted during the preceding two days be rushed, as the State was using all its peace strength equipment. Aside from rifles and blankets hundreds of infantrymen, and a few in the cavalry, were without the supplies from the government, and without any place to sleep. This latter condition was cared for by opening the big mess halls which were used until ten years ago to feed the men when in camp. Regular camp kitchens have taken the place of these with each company, and they proved of great service in the emergency last night.

NEW EDUCATIONAL FEATURE IS IDEAL

Charles D. Wardlaw Heads Fine Institution of Learning for Plainfield.

One of the finest equipped and most up-to-date boys' schools in the State of New Jersey will be opened this fall on Park avenue, near Randolph road, under the personal supervision of Charles D. Wardlaw, who for a number of years has been associated with the Leal School on West Front street. The new institution is a successor to John Leal's long established Plainfield school and offers special inducements for boys at the earliest school age. It will be conducted in the daytime and the cirriculum will be especially adapted to the class of students enrolled.

The building has been completely equipped with the latest and most approved facilites for instruction and student comfort and is the last word as a model of building sanitation and adaptability. The building, formerly located on the premises has been thoroughly overhauled and remodled.

An outdoor and indoor gymnasium with a course of physical education in charge of experts will be one of the features. The gyms. are provided with suitable lockers, shower baths and other necessities. Two tennis courts and an athletic field have also been located on the property and the site is in close proximity to Parker Field, Crescent Oval and the Plainfield Country Club.

Several notable additions will be made to the study courses that predominated under the old regime, among which will be art, singing and manual training. The teaching corps is large, well qualified and includes three men who are specialists in physical education.

The advisory board follows: Edward K. Graham, M. A., D. C. L., LL. D., president University of North Carolina; James C Egbert, Ph. D., Columbia University; Thomas Dennison Wood, D. D., Teachers' College, Columbia University; James C. Mackenzie, Ph. D., The Mackenzie School; Jesse F. Williams, M. D., Teachers' College, Columbia University; Henry C. Pearson, A. R. W. Aldrich who, for some time has been the [illegible] office of the Western Union Telegraph Company, has been [illegible] red to the Elizabeth office to take the place of Manager Felsenheld, who has joined his militia company, and the vacancy here has been filled by the appointment of Henry Betzenberger, who was night operator. ROOSEVELT LETTER READY.

Colonel Will Urge Moose to Support Hughes.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 22.—Colonel Roosevelt has completed the final draft of his letter to the Progressive national committee urging support of Justice Hughes, and the document is in the form in which it will be read at the meeting in Chicago on Monday.

It is expected the letter will be the swan song of the bull moose, that it will be followed by a statement from the colonel and that both messages will attack the Wilson administration touching upon the present crisis with Mexico and will call on all Progressives who are for straight out Americanism and preparedness to support the Republican nominee. Colonel Roosevelt motored to New York this morning.

Gregory May Succeed Hughes.

Washington, June 22.—An associate justice of the supreme court to succeed Charles E. Hughes probably will be appointed by President Wilson in a few days. It is considered certain that Attorney General Gregory will be appointed.

LARRY EVANS.

THEN I'LL COME BACK TO YOU

By LARRY EVANS

AUTHOR OF "ONCE TO EVERY MAN"

Copyright, 1915, by THE H. K. FLY COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.—Stephen O'Mara, a homeless and friendless boy, starting from the wilderness to see the city, is welcomed to the home of Caleb Hunter and his sister Sarah. Stephen meets Barbara Allison, young and rich, and Caleb gives him a home. Barbara ridicules Stephen, who runs away, declaring that he'll come back when worthy of her. Caleb learns that Stephen was well born. Ten years later Stephen returns, still loving Barbara and learns she is to wed Archibald Wickersham. She tells Stephen his love is hopeless.

Her father and Wickersham plan to block the railroad's completion and discredit O'Mara. Harrigan, a malcontent, is driven away by O'Mara and threatens revenge.

CHAPTER XIV.

Honey.

GARRY entered upon his new duties the following morning in a spirit anything but reassuring to his companion. Up to that time he had made his own industry the butt of much good natured ridicule, viewing it apparently as a sort of vacation novelty, amusing enough while the novelty lasted. But he went from task to task that next day in a methodical, dogged fashion that was farthest of all from amiability. Two or three times Steve, trying to spare him needless effort, attempting to show him how to favor blistered hands and aching back, met with rebuffs so curt that he learned to keep his advice to himself. He knew what end Garry was working to achieve. He would have allowed himself to smile over the thought that the other man would be tired enough before night came without trying to make that work any harder, only he did not dare venture that smile.

"You've been trying to help me," Garry said to Steve. "You've been trying to throw me a line. And for a time I tried to catch it, Steve. But it isn't in me to try that hard any more. Some men do things for what there is in it—the pecuniary reward, I mean. Some men—you, for instance—because their self respect won't let them stop, win or lose. But now and then there happens one who keeps on trying only because there is one other person at least who may be the gladder for his success. I don't expect you to understand. I know it will sound small and cowardly to you. It's too lonesome living, Steve, when there's no one who cares whether you live or not!"

"That does not fit your case," Steve objected instantly, "when your danger or your safety keeps a woman watching white faced with terror through the night for your return."

Garry propped himself upon one elbow, the better to see the speaker's countenance.

"My safety?" he repeated blankly. "My return?" And then, wanly grateful: "You are not the sort of man who lies convincingly, Steve."

And then Stephen O'Mara let him have it—all the story which had lain so many days in his heart. There were times when Garry went even paler during the short recital—times when everything else was submerged by the incredulity that flooded his face. But before Steve had finished the last trace of doubt was gone. Before the end came Garry had bowed his head, this time in flushed, self conscious wonder which transfigured him.

"Miriam Burrell!" he breathed. "Proud, intolerant"—

His head came up. The next instant he voiced the words which Steve most wanted to hear.

"You shouldn't have told me this," said he. "You had no right, unless"—

Steve laughed at him.

"God bless you," he exclaimed. "I asked her if I might. Why don't you understand that we love it to her self if I don't? You see, she is far, far braver than you are, Garry."

Garry lifted his hands and hid his face.

So quietly that his exit made no sound Steve slipped to his feet and passed outside. It had stopped raining. The hedgeless rows, touched by frost, were flaming strips of color against the rain washed evergreens when he picked his way over to the river and found a log to sit on for a seat. An hour and more he sat there while his thoughts went back over the trail of the years, the trail which had led him from that cabin to a pair of violet eyes and lips that arched like a boy's.

Steve let his mind turn a man once servedly to his own problem that morning. He tried to face squarely the road which still stretched ahead. He did not know that Garrett Devereau, the debonaire, the cynical, the world weary and world wise, had broken down and was sobbing noiselessly, as men sob, in the room which he had left, shaking with deep and terrible gasps that racked his very soul. But it was already daybreak; it was trail's end now for Garry. It does make a difference if one knows that some one cares.

Upon their return to Thirty Mile two nights later Joe's attitude of criticism was the first thing which piqued Steve's interest. There was something ludicrous in the former's voice as he sat and anatheniatized the food which the cook boy brought to the table, even though he devoured hungrily all that his plate would hold. And because Joe was so obviously primed for a sensation that evening out of sheer perversity Steve struggled to draw him into a discussion of a topic which, just as obviously, had no appeal just then.

"What I hope to do," he confided gravely to Garry, "is to finish up at Morrison and make possible the transfer of some of those men up here. We are working only one shift now. With two I figure we could sail along a-fogging. How does that strike you, Joe?"

That was only one of his many attempts, but all of them, save for the inner laughter which they afforded, were totally without result. Joe's answers were monosyllabic, his attention wandering at best. To that particular question he nodded his head spiritlessly.

"This butter ain't none too fresh," he growled sourly, "and I wonder if that cook boy thinks we dote on ham every meal? I don't for one. It may be all right if a man's plumb starving to death, but it don't lend no real elegance to a repast."

That gloomy complaint brought little more than a sparkle to Steve's eyes, but it made Garry lean forward in his place. Throughout the meal while the other two fenced in just such fashion he forgot his own food to listen, delighted anticipation in every feature. And when they had finished supper and pushed back their chairs he stood grinning a little, watching Joe survey that littered room which served as office and sleeping quarters for the chief engineer of the East Coast company. Fat Joe's gaze swung from wall to wall, from littered corner to heaped up chair. Then he shook his head in despair.

"It looks to me, Steve," he grunted, "as though you ain't never had no real training in tidiness, have you? There don't seem to be no system at all in the way you leave your things around. There's one boot over in that corner; it's got a mate, I know, because I saw you take them off last night. I wouldn't be certain otherwise. And it's the same way with all your things. Just look at this room! A nice place to receive callers in, now ain't it?"

That was the first lead he tendered them, but Steve, rather than gratify him with a direct question, chose to go forward in the dark. He leaned over and followed his usual custom when he wanted to think. He tapped out his pipe.

"But I can always find everything," he defended—"that is, unless you have taken the trouble to put things away. Then it's a tossup that something or other will never be found until it turns up of its own accord. It's not so bad, Joe." He, too, swung to survey the room. "Not so bad! Just a little unsettled, that's all. Are we likely to have any callers, do you think, who would object to this layout?"

Joe snorted, but his eyes were mournful. He knew that there was nothing else to do but yield a part at least.

"We ain't likely to," he murmured. "We're just naturally bound to have 'em. They're comin' in tomorrow, and I ask you again, ain't this a pleasing prospect to greet 'em?"

For all that he seemed to be staring ruefully down the room, he was watching for the surprise that darted across Steve's face. Momentarily the latter had forgotten his assumed air of placidity.

"Tomorrow? Who?" And then Steve laughed. "Go ahead and tell us, Joe. I'm beat! I'll admit that I'm panting with curiosity."

Joe pulled up a chair and dropped into it. It appealed to him, this method, whenever he had the time to spare. His pink face was still innocent of guile.

"I don't mind the men folks," he resumed. "That fat party, I mean, who wears the plaid suits, nor Caleb Hunter, either. Both of them are used to such truck as this. And I reckon it'll tickle the ladies too. But I can see Honey sti king his nose in the air and sniffin' superellious like the first minute he ge's his nose in the door. He ain't going to approve at all, at all—not any way you look at it."

"Honey!"

Both Steve and Garry ignored the rest of Joe's explanation to gasp that single word in concert.

"Who in the world do you mean by 'Honey?'"

"Who could I mean?" Joe demanded collectedly. "I didn't give him the name, did I? I mean that chap Wickersham, who owns the timber north of us. Foreign, ain't he? Sure, I thought so? Well, eve. time I run across that man's path my heart swells with patriotism. I guess I'm just as glad to be born plain United States."

The first part of that statement was listened to closely enough by both men; the last sentence or two, for all that it was heartfelt and sincere, was lost upon them both. And Steve's mirth was even more hysterical than was that of Garry Devereau.

"Honey!" he panted. "Now, isn't that a wonder? Joe, you're too good! You are altogether too good to be wasted on these timbered solitudes. Men pay $2 a seat, Joe, to hear performers work who are rank amateurs in comparison with you."

The riverman's eyes grew belligerent.

"Funny, is it? So awul funny! Well, perhaps you think I can't read plain print yet, never havin' enjoyed a liberal education. But take a look for yourself."

He pulled up a pile of newspapers which had come in since their absence, sorted out one that was creased open and handed it to Steve. It was an announcement of Barbara Allison's engagement to the Hon. Archibald Wickersham—that column to which Fat Joe had folded the sheet—a many days old anonuncement now. But the smile did not even stiffen upon Steve's lips. The picture which accompanied it was a poor one, heavy shadowed and smeared and lacking in detail, yet Barbara's face was unmistakable. The room became quiet. In that hush Garry realized that Joe's mistaken translation of the title had not been, as Joe had himself suggested, due to lack of knowledge, but to a desire to apprise his employer delicately of that which he believed was still news to him. And yet, from the easy way in which he read it, word for word, Garry was positive that all this which the New York daily blazoned forth with its customary mixture of snobbishness and vulgarity was no longer news to Steve. The latter's eyes lifted and dwelt long upon fat Joe's face.

"So that's where you got it, was it, Joe?" he asked evenly. "You make it 'Honey,' do you? And when do they come in, Joe?"

"Tomorrow night. One of the teamsters brought word this afternoon, just before you got back. Honey is going to have a look at his trees and things, the way I understand it. And the rest of them, I take it, want to look us over in our wild state. Where are we going to put them girls?"

Steve's answer was long in coming.

"Miss—Allison?" he wanted to know.

"And that tall, red headed one, Joe corrected promptly. I don't remember her name, but she's coming too."

As studiously as he had done a moment before, Garry again avoided Steve's eyes.

"Miriam Burrell," the latter supplied the omission. "And that's fine, isn't it? How long are they going to stay, Joe?"

But Joe had finished with trifling.

"Where are we going to put them?" he insisted doggedly.

"Why, we have a couple of shelter tents somewhere in the duffle, haven't we? We might pitch those if"—he looked about ruminatively—"if you think this is too squalid."

Joe turned appealingly to Garry, only to meet eyes flaring with deviltry.

"If you think that I'm going to give up my quarters for a troup of curious sightseers you're mistaken. If that's what you turned toward me for don't allow yourself to dwell upon it another minute. I'm a laboring man, and I have to have decent rest at nights. Do you suppose Cecile, the maid, would really mind a tent?"

And then Joe's face went red.

"Now ain't you the pair of rough jokers?" he whined. "Ain't you, though? But what's it going to be—this room or Garry's? The way I look at it we're elected to camp out ourselves. We're hardened sons of the wilderness, you know. That's what they always call us in print. But how am I going to get this place cleaned up?"

For another hour Joe argued it and at last settled upon the storehouse building as the likeliest for sleeping quarters for the feminine portion of the visitors.

"We have to eat in here, anyhow," he argued, "so I guess it's the best arrangement we can hit on. Honey won't be here much to meals e.ther. That'll be one nice thing about it. He'll be going north directly. And now—now I guess I'll go out and have a look at the pantry, even if it does make me feel sort of faint every time I think of the grub we've got on hand. Canned beans and boiled potatoes and ham and bacon to round out a banquet. Why couldn't a couple of mighty hunters like you bring home more than one little haunch of venison? Bacon and beans! Steve, you sure have been living mighty low down on this job."

He went out with a great show of haste, but returned almost immediately, forgot the urgency of matters in general in finding Garry idly shuffling a deck of cards. Throughout the evening Joe had exhibited an unwillingness to meet the third man's glances directly, but it was impossible for him to remain oblivious to the clicking of the chips. He balanced first on one foot and then on the other for a moment, then diffidently drew up a chair.

"Just a friendly hand or two, I suppose," he suggested when the other made no move to begin. "Low limit and wide open, eh?"

Garry still toyed with the cards.

"I don't suppose you've ever forgotten the first game in which we indulged, have you, Joe?" he asked at length.

Joe was not comfortable.

"Scarcely," he admitted, "scarcely."

"Nor the—stakes?" pursued Garry.

"I—I seem to recall 'em faintly."

Garry's peal of amusement was as rollicking as a boy's.

"So do I," he exclaimed. "And if I remember rightly you stated on that occasion that cash was no consideration with you. Does that still hold good?"

It was the first good look Joe had had at the other's face. The change he found in it seemed to perplex him more than a little.

"I take it that it does." Garry did not wait for his reply. And now—what do you say to that same full bottle against a—a ninety-nine year blanket restriction, with me at the wrong end of the odds?"

Joe slitted his eyes.

"When they tuck a ninety-nine year clause into a franchise they mean it's forever, don't they?" he wanted to know.

"Forever, to all intents and purposes!" said Garry.

Joe's chest sank and rose in a long, long breath.

"It's no word to trifle with," he cautioned at last. "If you lose it'll be a considerable drouth."

"Cut!" invited Garry, and they started to play.

That other night Garry's stack of chips had lasted far longer than they did on this second occasion. A half hour later, when he rose to go to bed, his ninety-nine year promise of abstinence was piled symmetrically before Fat Joe. But his good night was gay. For a time after his departure Joe eyed Steve sidewise.

"Hum-m-m," he cleared his throat. "Hum-m-m! And I was expectin' you to turn up any hour of the last twenty-four with a request that I come and help bring home the remains. You must be quite a silver tongued exhorter, aren't you, Steve?"

Stephen O'Mara was silent over the paper which Joe had handed him earlier in the evening, and the lack of any offer on his part to go into details did not trouble his questioner. Fat Joe sat and bobbed his head over what would never cease to be a miracle in his eyes.

"And he'll stick this time," he vented his wonder aloud. "He's surely going to stick!" Then he smiled widely. "And I reckon you'll have to admit that I handled the small part that came my way with ease and dispatch when I tell you that he didn't catch so much as one lonesome pair all the time I was dealing. I'm ashamed of myself. I haven't seen such a mean, crooked game of stud dealt since I came east!"

"OH, I CAN'T TELL YOU HOW GLAD I AM TO SEE YOU SO WELL."

Garry was very quiet the next morning when he and Steve went back to their work; before noon came his uneasiness had become very apparent to the man he was assisting. But neither his silence nor his nervousness any longer worried Steve. Instead the latter let himself smile over both those outward evidences of inward panic, whenever his thoughts were on Garry at all. For the latter's diffidence as the day aged became a flushed and warm cheeked thing, until at 4 in the afternoon Steve could no longer withhold the suggestion for which, wordlessly, Garry was asking.

"Joe was more than half right," he remarked, one eye to his level, "in spite of the fact that we refused to take him seriously. We can't let those people come in and find everything too hopelessly uncomfortable, so perhaps you'd better run ahead now, Garry, and see what he has accomplished. I don't want to leave this spot myself until I have some figures upon which I know I can rely. But you might run ahead, if you will. I'll be along later."

It was couched in the form of a request, but Garry's face flamed. He went, albeit a bit reluctantly. And he stopped more than a few times in his climb from the edge of the timber to the door of Steve's shack. But once he had passed over the threshold to find that unrecognizably trim room empty, his face grew heavy with disappointment. He was on the point of going back outside to scan the bowl of the valley when a tall, short skirted figure, enveloped in a voluminous apron which Fat Joe in a moment of mistaken zeal had once provided for the cook boy, flashed through the passageway from the kitchen annex and barely missed catapulting into his arms. Miriam Burrell, pink faced from the heat of the roaring wood stove and smudged with flour on forehead and cheek, lifted her apron and swung it like a flag of victory.

"I've found it," she sang triumphantly. "I've found out what was the matter! I'd just forgotten the baking powder, that was all! Next time"—

Then she recognized him. With outstretched hands still clutching the edge of her apron, she stood, almond eyes widening, and scanned him from head to foot. Even Steve, who had been with him every moment, had noticed the hour to hour change that had been taking place in Garry's appearance. To the girl who had not seen him for weeks, that flushed, self conscious man was a different Garry than she had never known before. Hungrily her gaze went from open shirt to caked boots, from steady hands to clear eyes which made her own eyes shy. And then Miriam Burrell, cool and poised Miriam, did what many another maid in a checkered apron has done in similar situations. She lifted that stiff gingham to hide her unutterable happiness. But before he could speak she found her voice, nor was it very steady at that.

"I thought you were that party of idlers come back," she hesitated. "How—how tanned you are becoming, Garry! I thought they—oh, I can't tell you how glad I am to see you so—so well. I'm making biscuits for supper—that is, I've just been practicing until now. It seemed as though I'd forgotten something that was necessary to the recipe, because they were flatter after they were cooked than when I put them in the oven. And most marvelously heavy too! But it was just the baking powder, that was all. Do you—do you think you'd care to help?"

Steve was very late in returning to camp that night. Throughout the rest of the afternoon he set himself a pace knee deep in slushy mud which Garry could not have maintained. But when he paused there in the dark where he always stopped for a moment and a tumult of voices swept down to meet him he forgot his fatigue. He had lifted his battered hat from his head, striving to distinguish a single note in all that treble of girlish laughter, when, framed suddenly against the background of light within, he saw a slender silhouette take up its station in the door frame. Barbara was still peering out across the darkness when he came up to her.

"We've been waiting dinner for you for almost an hour," she rebuked him in place of what might have been a commonplace greeting. "We've been waiting in the face of Mr. Morgan's insistence that it was practically useless. He has been telling us that when a man here in the hills fails to turn up for a meal you never bother to look for him. You know that the worst has happened."

Over her head the first eyes that Steve encountered that evening were those of Archibald Wickersham. While shaking hands with the girl he bowed in grave welcome to the tall figure in leather puttees and whipcord riding breeches, and Wickersham from the far side of the room bowed back in equal gravity. Then Caleb Hunter grasped Steve's elbow and spun him around toward the light and peered at him accusingly. Barbara had not noticed until then how tired Steve looked.

"Before the others get to talking," said Caleb, "before the tide grows too strong for my weak voice, young man, I want to deliver a message. Miss Sarah wants it explicitly understood that unless you stop in to say hello on your next trip down she herself will take the trail up here. And lest that ultimatum sound too little threatening I might add that when Miss Sarah takes the trail she never travels with less than six trunks."

Caleb clung so tightly to his arm that it brought a tinge of color to Steve's cheeks. It was minutes before he could get away to change his wet clothes, and in that minute or two he could not help but contrast, grimly, his own mud bespattered attire with that of Archie Wickersham. The tired blue circles beneath his eyes were even more noticeable when he returnd, to be ushered with much ceremony by Fat Joe to the head of the table.

It was an utterly irresponsible gathering that leaned over the red tablecloth that night—an oddly assorted group which from the very first Joe realized was not at all to Wickersham's liking. Dexter Allison himself, fairly radiating good will, sat at the foot of the table, with his son-in-law to be on one side and Barbara's little maid, Cecile, on the other. And between Cecile and Barbara, who sat opposite Garry and Miriam, Fat Joe leaned both elbows upon the table edge and monopolized the conversation. The seating arrangement was Joe's; it was his party. And the absolute inattention to detail, the large indifference to veracity which his discourse disclosed before that noisy supper was over, grew to be an astonishing thing. His flights of fancy left Steve aghast in more than one instance; they even forced a stiff smile to Wickersham's lips, and that is saying much for Joe's success as an entertainer, for in the bearing of those two men toward each other there had been evident from the first a chill antipathy which amounted actually to armed truce. And the color in Miriam's cheeks, whenever his gaze strayed to that side of the table, helped Steve to forge., temporarily, much that he found not pleasant to recall at all.

For Miriam's tongue was no less irresponsible than was Joe's. Her mood was so mercurial that she drew time and again the eyes of all at the table. She chattered with an abandon that scandalized Barbara; broke in and interrupted every argument with hoydenish trivialities, in one breath, to appeal to Garry the next for refutation. And Garry, the light tongued and quick witted, sat almost dumb of lip before her happy garrulity. But his eyes never left her; they spoke his thoughts aloud. The quick lift and droop of her eyelids, the brilliancy of her lips, made Miriam's face a living thing of happiness—made Barbara's silence seem even more profound. For the latter's withdrawal from the hilarity, dominated half the time by her father's booming bass, was nearly as complete as that of Wickersham himself.

Just once, shortly before they withdrew for the night, Steve caught a gleam of mischief in the dark eyes she turned toward him. She rose the next moment and started slowly around the room, poking demurely into corners and closeted nooks. Every eye was following her when she finally found the thing for which she was searching. She drew a red felt, yellow mottoed cushion from beneath the deer hide covering a chair and held it up so that all might read. "What Is Home Without a Father?" it ran, and when the joy that stormed through the room made it sure that the exhibition needed no interpreter Fat Joe turned and hid his face. Miriam rose languidly and joined the other girl in an examination of his handiwork. Smooth face tinted by the firelight, copper hair almost disheveled in its disarray, she was an exquisitely lovely thing. In her alto voice she expressed her opinion.

"It's an entirely new stitch to me, Bobs," she averred. "I don't think I have ever before seen just this method employed." And she turned to Stephen O'Mara. "Do you suppose, Mr. O'Mara," she asked, "that I might learn it from the one who did this work for you? It's rather" and her head tilted to one side—"it's rather a pretty thing."

Again they succumbed to mirth, and then Joe rose, bristling, and went forward much as a gamecock might step out to do battle. He took the cushion from the hands of the girls, who no longer had strength enough even to hold it.

"If you are aiming to do any sewing around this camp," he stated, "you can start in sewing on buttons. This kind of work is entirely too nerve wearing for amateurs."

He carried the cushion across the room and placed it not where it had been hidden by the deer hide, but in colorful prominence against the back of the chair. Long after he had crossed with Steve and Garry to their tents he continued to explode with soft chuckles.

"I never did say," he defended himself, "that that sentiment was strictly appropriate. I always stated that it was the best I could. And as for my technique—well, either of you guys try it some time. You just take a needleful of that yellow worsted and start tracking across a couple of yards of red and pathless desert and see where you come out. I know, because I've done it. I'm a pioneer. But if I ever tackle another job like that it's going to be a crazy quilt."

And Joe considered in spite of the din which answered him that his challenge was ample.

PERSHING SAYS MEXICANS USED TREACHERY IN FORCING BATTLE AT CARRIZAL; ONLY 4 ESCAPED

TOTAL LOSSES, INCLUDING CAPTURED, OF TROOP C, 10TH CAVALRY, BELIEVED TO BE 61.

SOLDIERS SLEPT IN UNIFORMS LAST NIGHT

Await orders to Avenge Comrades—Gen. Funston Sends Official Report to Washington and Calls for Militia—Big Guns Are Ready to Begin Bombardment of Vera Cruz.

El Paso, June 23.—Gen. Pershing's official report of the fight at Carrizal, where 65 colored American soldiers stood off 325 Mexicans for half a day, is that the Americans were led into a trap through treachery, and this, coupled with Obregon's acceptance of responsibility for the battle, has put the border troops on edge.

Last night they slept in uniform, with arms at hand, awaiting an order to move into Mexico under a declaration of war. Today there is feverish activity everywhere and orders to begin a campaign of reprisal for numerous outrages of Carranza troops and bandit bands are expected at any moment. Gen. Funston's call for more troops, with the knowledge that the militiamen are not yet ready, shows how serious the situation has become.

Four of the negro troopers that were in the Carrizal fighting have shown up in camp at Colonia Dunlan, and it is believed that they are the only survivors of Troop C, Tenth United States cavalry. It is on their stories that Gen. Pershing bases his report to Gen. Funston, which has been forwarded to the War Department.

Forty-seven field pieces are mounted today on the table land back of El Paso, with their noses pointed toward Juarez. The cannon have a range of six miles, being of the largest 4.7 inch type used in the American army. Sudden orders during the night kept all of the troops under orders at Fort Bliss, Texas, the men sleeping in their uniforms. Everything points to arrangements to move at a moment's notice into Juarez, the Mexican city opposite El Paso and the largest Mexican community and most important railroad centre on the border. Juarez has been abandoned by the Mexican troops and officials.

Army men here today greeted news from Washington that the War Department had ordered the Western and Central Military divisions to despatch all militia units to the border at once, as further evidence that the moment had come for decisive action in Mexico.

VILLA IS WITH CARRANZA.

El Paso, June 23.—Francisco Villa, the Mexican bandit whose raid on Columbus, N. M., precipitated all the present international trouble, has appeared again, says a report today. It is said that Villa has offered his services to the Carranza government in the fight against the Americans and that his offer was accepted.

One report says Villa was in Juarez just before the evacuation of the garrison late Thursday evening.

Here is the story of the fight made public by General Funston, as reported to him by General Pershing:

Troop C, Captain Boyd commanding, and Troop K, Captain Morey commanding, joined each other the night of June 20 at Ojo Santa Domingo, west of Carrizal. Boyd, as senior captain, took command and the two troops took up the march toward Carrizal at 4 o'clock on the morning of the 21st.

At 7:30 o'clock the scouting party had reached a point a mile west of Carrizal. Learning that the deserted village and the road toward Villa Ahumada were held by a force of Carranzistas, Captain Boyd halted his troopers and sent a Mexican to the Carranzista commanding officer asking permission to pass through the village.

In a short time this messenger came back with a note from General Gomez refusing this permission.

While Captain Boyd was consulting with Captain Morey, a messenger arrived from General Gomez with a note stating that the requested permission would be granted if the American commander would stop as his troops passed through Carrizal for a conference with Gomez.

Before Captain Boyd had time to reply Gomez himself, accompanied by aides, came out and approached him.

The American captain and the Mexican general stood in conversation for fifteen or twenty minutes. While they talked soldiers of Gomez's command, little by little, moved forward, apparently as if they wanted to be in position to protect their general if the Americans should prove treacherous.

The movement became more noticeable and rapid, until it looked to the American troopers that the object of the menacing companies and troops was to sorround the American command.

The returned men report that Captain Boyd seemed to be protesting vigorously against this encroachment of the soldiers of Gomez, who had moved forward in surprisingly large force. As Boyd protested the Mexican forces were moving around to get flanking positions. Gomez seemed to accept the protests of Boyd in good faith and hastened back toward a group of mounted staff officers, apparently to give orders for the withdrawal of the menacing forces.

The moment Gomez reached this group at the right of his men the Mexicans opened fire with machine guns.

American Troops Calm.

Captain Boyd rallied his troopers in the face of this deadly attack, dismounted them, deployed the little band and made a desperate stand against overwhelming odds. From the first the spraying fire of the machine guns moved down our troopers, while the hurriedly dismounted soldiers, prone on the ground, fired coolly and with deadly results into the Mexicans, driving them back and gaining some respite.

The story of the death of Gomez, whether the Mexican leader was killed by a shot from this first position of the troopers, or whether they charged and took the machine guns and went on to close quarters with the Mexicans and killed Gomez in that desperate charge, still lacks its American version.

The stragglers who arrived today at the camp of the main column, exhausted from thirst and hunger and the fatigue of the return to the column, had nothing to tell in coherent manner of the fortunes of the combatants. They were the men who, not being in the thick of the fight, held there by the frenzy of the struggle, and elbow to elbow touch with comrades, fled out of the zone of the hail of bullets from the machine guns.

The first of the stragglers to get back was a horseholder who told so wild a story of himself being the sole survivor that Pershing wired Funston he was not willing to base any statement whatever on this man's narrative.

Shortly after another message came from Pershing, giving the account of the fight as obtained from the other stragglers in the Carrizal fight.

The few troopers who found their way back to the main column did not meet on the way the two squadrons of the Eleventh Cavalry which Pershing rushed to the support of the distressed troops when he learned of the fight through General Funston's messages of inquiry.

Gen. Funston said today he had no doubt the two squadrons had found the survivors of the encounter, and were returning with them and their wounded to the column. The ride before them was a hard one, and the return with the wounded men must necessarily be slow.

House to Authorize Draft.

Washington, June 23.—The Hay resolution, authorizing the President to draft members of the National Guard into the Federal service because of the critical situation in Mexico, was taken up when the House met today. Mr. Hay said that he was authorized to state that President Wilson believes a crisis has been reached in relation to Mexico, and that the passage of the resolution is necessary to protect the United States. The resolution will be passed before adjournment today.

The State Department announced that Americans are being gotten out of Mexico with all posible speed and that a second special train will leave the Mexican capital for Vera Cruz tomorrow. The transports Salem, Dolphin and Dixie are en route to that port where the refugees will be picked up and brought to the United States. Marines are soon to leave Santo Domingo for Vera Cruz, but no expedition, it is said, will be alnded at this time. A blockade could be instituted, say the Navy Department officials, with the vessels now in Mexican waters.

Order Shoes for Soldiers.

St. Louis, June 23.—The War Department has awarded to two St. Louis shoe factories a contract approximating $1,029,500 for 290,000 pairs of army shoes.

1916 GRADUATING CLASS OF THE PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL

PLAN A LIVELY FOURTH OF JULY

Local Committee Helping Arrange for Boy Scout Parade.

EXERCISES AT 4 P. M.

City Park Will be Scene of Big Demonstration—No Fireworks Considered by the Recreation Committee.

Plainfield is going to show its patriotism as seldom before if the plans of Champlain L. Riley and the members of the Public Recreation Committee for independence Day observances work out as at present indicated. Meetings are being held almost nightly to complete the arrangements which are to be on a scale little realized by the general public.

The Boy Scout officials of the city and vicinity are co-operating in making this celebration one of the most memorable in the city's history. It is to be distinctly a safe and sane, but rousingly patriotic observance. Fourth of July this year will be one of those very rare ones when the folks at home will have as an impetus to their enthusiasm the inspiring services being rendered the country by their own townsmen in camp or the field. The Biederwolf Chorus Choir, under the leadership of Clifford A. Braider, is to be one of the big features.

Full plans have not yet been worked out but in the morning there will be a Boy Scout parade of all troops led by a band if possible, the necessary funds for which have been promised by a public spirited friend of the scout movement. There will be a parade to the camp starting at 9:30 from the First Baptist church. At the camp an oration will be delivered on "The Significance of the Day We Celebrate" by a speaker to be announced later. Among the features at the camp celebration will be a flag raising, camp inspection, a flag raid and probably some exhibition diving and swimming, especially some exhibitions by the older boys of life saving in the water.

In the cool of the afternoon around 4 o'clock the big community celebration will take place. It is planned to have a Boy Scout detachment present to serve as ushers and aides and to establish a rest place for aged or infirm persons.

The fact that wonderfully impressive celebrations have been held in other important cities throughout the country has led the Plainfield Recreation Commission, of which George P. Mellick is president, to abandon its customary fireworks celebration at Parker Field this year and to bring the Independence Day observances closer to the heart of the city and the hearts of its people by giving as many as possible some part in the exercises.

Various organizations, lodges, civic associations, city officials, public school children and the great Biederwolf choir, with suitable accompaniment, under leadership of Clifford A. Braider, will combine to make this year's celebration one entirely worthy of the Queen City. Already many organizations have expressed their sympathy and have pledged their support of this modern type of Fourth of July celebration.

A meeting of the Public Recreation Committee was held at the library last night.

BOY SCOUTS OF HOPE CHAPEL IN NEED OF TENTS

Because of present conditions, Company K will not be able to donate the use of their tents to the Boy Scouts of Hope chapel for their summer camp this year, consequently the West Fourth street boys make an appeal to the public. Any one who has a tent and wishes to give the boys the use of same will confer a great favor. Those having such tents and can let the scouts have them for their summer camp which begins on July 8 may communicate with James Penny, 128 East Seventh street.

P. H. S. SENIORS ARE GRADUATED

Class of Seventy-six Young Men and Women Are Given Their Diplomas.

MANY PRIZE AWARDS

Miss Edwards and Miss Shjarback Deliver Salutatory and Valedictory Essays—Prof. Smith, of Colgate, Makes Address—List of Graduates

Seventy-six young men and women having completed their course of study were given diplomas at the forty-sixth annual commencement of the Plainfield High School last night, the interesting exercises being held in the High School auditorium, which was filled with parents and friends of the graduates and the school. Aside from the customary essays and addresses there was great expectancy regarding the presentation of awards, an anxious moment for both pupils and parents.

The class occupied seats on the platform, together with the members of the Board of Education and the speaker of the evening, Professor E. W. Smith, of Colgate University, the whole making an attractive picture. Suspended overhead was a 1916 class banner.

After a selection from "Princess Pat," by the Waldorf orchestra, there was the invocation by the Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church. Then followed the salutatory address and essay.

The salutatorian address by Miss Helen Edwards is as follows:

The Golden Rule in Business.

"To all of our friends here this evening we extend our most hearty greeting. To our faculty, to our ever helpful principal, Mr. Best; our warm friend, Dr. Maxson; to the Board of Education, to our distinguished guest who has come to give us his valuable advice, and to the worthy citizens of Plainfield—to you all, we give a most cordial welcome. It is through your efforts that we have been able to secure the key which unlocks for us the door of opportunity.

"Those of us to whom opportunity has come through our commercial course feel that the most important part of our work has been not simply the business training which we have received, but the fine ideals of efficiency and service which have always been our inspiration. The motto in one of our class-rooms, the words of a former much beloved teacher, Mr. McNabb, might sum up the spirit of our training.

"'The heaping good measure of service
That no one nas quite the right to ask of us,
That is what everyone wants from us.'

"This suppemental service we might call the principle of the Golden Rule in business.

"In this century of great progress in the business world, the Golden Rule has become not only an ideal, but, as has been proved many a time in practical affairs, has worked out as a most successful rule of life. First, let us consider this principle from the standpoint of the employer. One example of the excellent results obtained by the application of this rule is Mr. Ford's profit-sharing method. He devised a plan so that every employe's daily wages and profits combined would average from $5 to $6. His purpose of doing this was to establish a just arrangement with his co-workers and to better the financial and moral conditions of his men. This scheme, however, not only turned out to be successful for the employes, but proved of great value to the Ford Company. The profits were increased by 15 per cent. and the company cleared $25,000,000 in one year because of the larger amount and more efficient work produced by their workmen. Even in the most hopeless cases, Mr. Ford believes his rule, 'treat a man fairly and he will respond' holds true. This was proved one evening when a suspicious looking character assailed the salesmanager of the company and asked for a job. He said he was a burglar, had served twenty years in prison, but was ready for work. He reported for work next day and proved

BOARDMAN WILL OPPOSE CAPSTICK

Plainfielder Announces Candidacy for Republican Nomination for Congress.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE

Was Born in Vermont Forty Years Ago and Has Resided Here for Ten Years—Member of Law Firm of Condict, Condict & Boardman.

Richard Boardman, well known attorney, being a member of the firm of Condict, Condict & Boardman, of Jersey City, today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congress from the Fifth Congressional district, which means that he will oppose Congressman John H. Capstick for the nomination in the fall primaries. Mr. Boardman has been a resident of Plainfield for the past ten years, his home being at 915 Madison avenue.

He is forty years old, being born in Northern Vermont, May 12, 1876. He was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1897. From 1897 to 1900 he taught at the Morris Academy in Morristown, and in the private school of Mr. Talmadge. During the same period he read law, first with the late Alfred Mills and later with Henry C. Pitney. During his clerkship in the Pitney offices Mr. Boardman in his studies was under the direct guidance and advice of the late Vice-Chancellor Henry C. Pitney.

Mr. Boardman was admitted to the New Jersey Bar in 1900, as an attorney, and as counsellor in 1903. He practiced law in Morristown from 1900 to 1902 and in the latter year went to Jersey City, where he entered the office of his present associates, Henry C. Condict and Walter H. Condict. In February, 1903, the firm of Condict, Condict & Boardman was formed, of which Mr. Boardman is now a member. The firm's offices are at 15 Exchange place, Jersey City. In 1912 Mr. Boardman was appointed one of the special masters of the Court of Chancery by Mahlon Pitney, then chancellor.

In June, 1906, Mr. Boardman was married to Miss Dorcas Floyd Leese, of Portland, Maine. They have three children. Mr. Boardman has been a Republican since he cast his first vote in 1898. In 1912 he voted for Taft for President. He is a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of this city.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER DIES IN DETROIT, MICHIGAN

Word was received in this city last night of the death at Detroit, Michigan, of William Kane, a former well-known Plainfielder. He was the son of Martin Kane, of 509 West Third street, and had not been living here locally in many years. He was a chef and caterer by trade, having learned the business with Max Wiertz, who was chef of the old Union County Country Club when it occupied the Casino at Seventh street and Arlington avenue. Later Mr. Wiertz opened a catering business at 544 West Front street, where Mr. Kane remained with him. The business was afterward removed to New York and since that time Mr. Kane has been located in various parts of the country. According to the telegrams received last night, death ensued Wednesday after a brief illness but no further details were given.

Beside his father, the deceased is survived by two sisters living in Carbondale, Pa., and three brothers, James and Martin, of this city, and Thomas, surviving, as a marine in the United States navy. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

TROOP D AND HOSPITAL CORP MAY LEAVE FOR FRONT IN A FEW DAYS —MOUNTED AND READY ANY TIME

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE HAS ADVISED GOVERNMENT THAT UNITS ARE ALL READY EXCEPT FOR INFANTRY EQUIPMENT.

PLAINFIELD BOYS HAPPY AND ARE WELL FED

First Quality Was For Daily Press—Have Erected Temporary Bathtub and Given "Rookies" Their First Rubs—Father Bogan Sends a Fine Letter to Recruit.

Mrs. Harold D. Corbusier received a 'phone message this afternoon from Major Corbusier, stating that the Field Hospital Corps under his command would leave tomorrow afternoon for San Antonio, Texas, and that friends would be able to see them to say "Goodbye" tomorrow morning.

When a Press reporter asked General Sadler about this later, he stated that there was nothing definite as yet, and that he could not say when the hospital corps would leave, but that they might go at any time as they were ready ,except for a shortage of about twenty men.

RECRUITS RECEIVED INTO WATCHUNG TROOP.

Recruits who have been accepted by Troop D, and who are now on their way to Sea Girt to join the local cavalry organization are George Benjamin Hoffman, of Somerville, single; Richard N. Bird, Plainfield, single; Joseph William Gallagher, Dunellen, single; William Albert Kopia, Newark, single; William Palmer Smith, Jr., Netherwood, single.

(By Telegraph from a Staff Correspondent.)

MOBILIZATION CAMP, SEA GIRT, June 22.—Plainfielders in the New Jersey National Guard may be on their way to the Mexican border within the next twenty-four hours. This much was admitted at the office of Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., when a Daily Press reporter called there at 2:15 this afternoon. The first detachment containing residents of Plainfield which may go will be the Field Hospital Corps, commanded by Major Harold D. Corbusier, of Park avenue, and containing in its roster Alfred Seals, Raymond Manley, Clinton Berrien, Taylor Brokaw and James Stranahan.

Battery A, of East Orange, who was encamped across the road from Troop D, received orders early this afternoon to break camp and move a mile down the road to Sea Girt, so as to be near the trains for loading. It is thought that they, with the hospital corps, will be the first men to move from here.

General Sadler told the Press representative that a wire had been received from the War Department, requesting advice as to what troops could be moved at once for the border, and the list included the hospital corps. As for Troop D, it is reasonably certain that they will not be sent forward tomorrow, but may be called for at any time after that. The troop did not receive their horses, aside from the twenty-two which they brought from Plainfield on Wednesday until this afternoon, but is fully mounted, and had their first drill this afternoon. There has also been delay on the part of the National Government in supplying equipment for the new men who have been enlisted in the various commands here, and the State authorities have no idea when this equipment will be received. It should have been shipped from Philadelphia on Monday.

Members of Troop D are rapidly becoming accustomed to camp life. Although short of horses all the new members were given a chance to do a little riding on the animals which were brought down from Plainfield before the full quota arrived. The rookies are being given most of the practice, as the older members of the troop have had opportunity to become accustomed to the mounted formations.

The health of the command is of the best. Up to the present time not a member has felt any need for a doctor, although two privates were thrown from horses while drilling, and are stiff and sore as a result of the treatment. The food being supplied is splendid. Members of the troop assured the Daily Press representative when he arrived on the field at 1:15 this afternoon that Cooks Johnson, Daniels and Irby are the best in camp, and they have no fears for the comfort of the inner man so long as the commissary department keeps the food coming to the troop kitchen.

Private John A. Hall left the command this morning to go to Connecticut, where his brother is a major in the National Guard, and he will become a staff officer with the rank of first lieutenant.

One of the things that has pleased the citizen soldiers more than anything else since they arrived here was the splendid letter of praise sent to Private John Caulfield by Rev. B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, which was received this morning. In the communication Father Bogan praised the troopers for their patriotism, wishing them Godspeed and a safe return. The letter made such an impression on the many members of the Plainfield organization that it was posted on the bulletin board so that all could read it. It will be printed in the Daily Press tomorrow night.

The soldier boys are looking to their physical comfort in more ways than one. The camp is so far from the beach that it is not convenient to do any surf bathing. In order to offset this a home made bathtub has been erected in one of the tents, and the men are enjoying "all the comforts of home." Last night they were much more cheerful than on the preceding evening, and up to 9:30, when all turned in for a good night's sleep, there was some fun in camp at the expense of the rookies.

One thing that has caused inconvenience has been the failure of the mail to deliver the Daily Press to the many members who have ordered it to be sent to them while away from home. When the Press correspondent arrived this afternoon the paper was the first thing they asked for. The papers which have been mailed regularly have not been received, due to the congestion in the Sea Girt postoffice, but it is expected that this will be straightened out in a few days, if the troop remains here.

Several new recruits arrived this morning, but they cannot be started on their work until their equipment is supplied by the government.

The Plainfielders have had a strenuous time of it since their arrival in camp on Wednesday. Some of the new members of the troop have not been astride a horse for many years, and a few have never ridden. All succeeded in saddling their beasts, not without some amusing incidents happening, and had opportunity to ride both yesterday and today. Not much could be done in the way of drills, because of lack of mounts, but there is more than one man nursing bruises and stiffness because of the unfamiliarity with the saddles and mounts.

The warm sun was welcomed again this morning, as the thermometer went pretty low down close to the ground upon which the troopers slept last night. Heavy overcoats were welcomed again as they were the night before. The soldier boys passed a more comfort-

"SUFFRAGETTES CONVENTION" GIVEN AT BETHEL CHAPEL

Members and friends of Bethel chapel were entertained at the chapel last evening with a delightful one-act comedy sketch entitled "The Suffragette's Convention," given by the young women of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. In the opening scene of the playlet, the women file into a regular and typically fitted convention hall, not without much noise and confusion, and heaving sighs of "Votes for Women." Each one proves herself an ardent exponent of "the cause" and after heated discussions of various topics the meeting of the "suffs" is adjourned.

The audience was much amused at the well brought out humor and applauded heartily. The color setting was orange and black. The young women who took part were the Misses W. Reid, Mattie Jeter, Gladys Stearns, Hazel Fielder, Ruth Kirby, Margaret Carey, Maud Lambert, M. Knight, Elsie Cornelius, Lottie Smith, Madeline Burns, W. Mayse and Joseph Garner, who as "Silas Curtis," the only "man" reconciled to the "cause," furnished great amusement. The performance was given under the management of Mrs. R. C. Wormley.

S. KRAUTHAMER

Maker of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Coats and Suits.

400-402 Watchung Ave., Plainfield, N. J.
Upstairs, Corner 4th St. Trolley Station. OPEN SATURDAY EVENINGS

Miss Anita Stewart, the popular Vitagraph star, had no theatrical training prior to her debut into motion pictures except for a few amateur operas in which she participated under the direction of her musical instructor, Mrs. Mary Gunning, mother of Louise Gunning, the operatic star. The characters which she interpreted in these musical entertainments, however, were met with brilliant success.

While attending Erasmus High School in Brooklyn, Miss Stewart's personal beauty was first utilized by several New York artists. She was employed by them as a subject for high-class pictorial lithography and calendars.

Miss Stewart's first parts were those of maids and other unimportant characters, the first role of any prestige being in "The Wood Violet," a sort of primitive little lady who was brought to New York as a rich man's wife. She soon tires of the veneer of society and the artificiality of it all and returns to her native haunts, only to be followed later by her husband, who truly loves her. Seemingly this is a simple story, yet its very simplicity is its charm and Miss Stewart made one of the greatest impressions in her entire career in this part.

Her first comedy picture was "Why I am Here," in which she played a slangy, gum-chewing stenographer. It was a character part in every sense of the word and immediately stamped Miss Stewart as being a wonderfully versatile young lady.

Some of her greatest successes include "A Million Bid," "The Juggernaut," "Sins of the Mothers," "413," "The Goddess," "My Lady's Slipper," and "The Suspect."

The latter is perhaps her best piece of emotional work. In this picture Miss Stewart is caused to become a Nihilist by the harsh, inhuman treatment to which her family is subjected. In two or three "close-ups" in particular, her facial expressions are worthy of special mention. Her sorrow, which turns slowly to joy, is wonderfully registered by this master-artist of the film who has won her way into hearts of thousands.

In fact throughout the entire production her conflicting emotions are evident to every person in the audience, as she seemingly lives through years of pain and pleasure.

COMMUNITY CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA TO REHEARSE

The Plainfield Community Chorus and Orchestra will hold a very important rehearsal in the Plainfield High School on Thursday evening, June 29, at 8 o'clock.

At this time the music which is to be used at the Fourth of July celebration will be rehearsed, and plans completed for this first public appearance of the new organization. The director, Mr. Braider, is anxious to have every member present, and it is earnestly hoped that every member will consider this as a personal invitation to be in attendance at this rehearsal.

JERSEY SHOWS THE WAY.

FIRST to completely mobilize troops.
FIRST to notify Wilson that troops were ready to move.
FIRST to send formal statement of strength and condition in field to eastern department.

Governor James F. Fielder says:

"I am proud of the prompt manner in which the different organizations ordered out responded to the orders and made us the first State to completely mobilize in response to the President's call. All credit is due to the adjutant general's and quartermaster general's departments for the fine results.

"I am also proud of the manner in which the recruits have enlisted. It is very remarkable how many former officers and guardsmen are sending letters and telegrams offering their services to the State.

"The one disappointment is that the Federal Government has not sent us supplies and equipment promptly with which to take care of the great number of enlisted men who have come here following the President's call. Had it not been that we secured tents and blankets from the Second and Third Regiments, the men would have suffered severely in this bad weather.

"All of this refutes the argument men of the regular army have made, that the National Guard could not respond promptly for duty. The fact is, at this time the National Guard is away ahead of the regular army. If we had necessary supplies and equipment from the government, our men would be ready to move tomorrow in case such orders should come. I hope that the balance of our guard can be ordered out, and I have wired President Wilson, asking if such an order could not be issued. The men in the other organizations are anxious and ready to serve."

NEED MORE MONEY FOR CELEBRATION

Recreation Committee Discusses Plans With Thirteen Organizations.

Thirteen organizations were represented at the special meeting of the Public Recreation Committee held in the Public Library rooms last night, to co-operate in making final plans for the Community Fourth of July Celebration to be held in the City Park, in front of the Plainfield High School. The lodges and their representatives attendant at the session were as follows: Italian Nest of Owls, No. 1733, D. Di Lonardo; Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., R. F. R. Huntsman; G. A. R. and Firemen's Relief Association, T. O. Doane; Knights of the Golden Eagle, O. A. Moore; Boys' Auxiliary, Plant, Flower and Frunt Guild, Howard V. Hall; Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, J. M. Harper and Charles R. Banks; Anchor lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., T. C. Vail; Plainfield Community chorus and orchestra, F. T. Dickerson; National Association of Letter Carriers, R. Heinold; Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., W. R. Causbrook; Business Men's Association, H. W. Farley; Jehuda Halevi Camp, No. 57, Order B'Nei Zion, Samuel Rosenbaum, and Division No. 1, A. O. H., John F. Casey.

Thus far, $250 has been received by the committee of the $500 needed to insure the success of the affair. Accordingly, the committee makes an urgent appeal to the patriotic citizens of Plainfield for the remainder of the sum required—$250. A great deal of effort has been spent on the plans and those who have witnessed "Safe and Sane" Independence Day celebrations in the past know that they always provide the right kind of recreation for both young and old on a day that should give its education as well as entertainment. Any amount will be gratefully received by the treasurer, DeWitt Hubbell, of the Plainfield Trust Company, to whom contributions may be sent. Those who have already subscribed to the fund are the following:

The committee hopes to make this year's celebration a memorable one and have combined an oratorical and musical program for the event. A stand will be erected with a seating capacity of five hundred, to accommodate the large community chorus which is being trained by Clifford A. Braider for the occasion. A program of "war songs" will be sung with solo and quartette numbers. It is the plan of the committee to use the platform during the entire summer for Sunday afternoon concerts, and later in the fall a pageant will be produced by the Recreation Committee on a gigantic scale.

C. L. Riley, chairman of the Recreation committee, presided during the meeting and outlined the work being accomplished by the committee in the schools of the city. The greater part of the work in the schools is carried on during the winter season, when the school auditoriums are thrown open for entertainments, dances, lectures and other social events. A. B. Jones told of the work of the West End Community Center and the various features introduced during the past winter. The Washington School has been one of the most popular schools, rooms being utilized each evening with sewing circles, glee clubs, lectures and socials. It is the plan of the committee to introduce a community center in the East End of the city next fall. Speaking of the boys and girls who spend a day in the office or store during the day and then meet in social and educational intercourse in the evening, Mr. White pointed out that in each instance the young man and young woman go back the next morning with a cleaner, brighter mind and ready to approach their duties with a vim.

RUSSIANS' BIG DRIVE SLACKENS IN NORTH

Czar Continues to Gain In South Against Austrians.

London, June 23.—The official announcement by the Russian war office of the capture of Radutz, a town of 13,000 inhabitants situated thirty miles south of Czernowitz and ten miles from the Roumanian frontier, shows how actively General Letchitzky is pursuing the broken Austrian forces.

According to Petrograd dispatches, nothing but a miracle can avert the destruction of General Pflanger's army, as General Letchitzky now holds a stretch of twenty miles on the Sereth river.

According to a report from Rome, an Austrian army under General Baltin is shut up in the angle of the frontier near the town of Sereth, completely surrounded by Russians.

The Austrian official communication claims that the Austrians have repulsed Russian attacks near Gura Humora. This town is in the extreme south of Bukowina, on the Moldava river, fifty-four miles south of Czernowitz. Thus, unless some other town of the same name is meant, the Russian pursuit seemingly has extended much further than the Russians claim.

In the center and along the northern flank the Russian drive has been halted by the fierce counter offensive of the Teutonic allies.

The defense of the Kovel-Lutsk region has been taken over entirely by German reenforcements, which are making a determined attempt to regain the ground lost during the first ten days of the Russian advance.

There is no activity on the other fronts. The reported revolt in Arabia against the Turks and the seizure of the holy city of Mecca by the rebels is regarded as likely to have important consequences.

EDITORS AT NAVY YARD.

National Association Also Gets Circulation Tip.

New York, June 23.—Members of the National Editorial association, who are holding their thirty-first annual convention at the McAlpin, are navy experts now. Through the courtesy of Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, the members and their families went to the Brooklyn navy yard, where the commandant, Rear Admiral Usher, took them aboard the dreadnaught Wyoming, the flagship of Admiral Mayo.

George W. Wagenseller, editor and publisher of the Middleburgh Post, later told the editors how he built up and maintained a circulation of 5,000 in a county of 16,800 population, with six competitive newspapers. One of his prescriptions was:

"Find out the kind of news the people want and give it to them. This will successfully solve the circulation problem not only for the weekly newspaper, but for every newspaper that is published."

Daddy's Bedtime Story

Little Tuk at Last Learns His Geography Lesson.

Together They Flew Across Zealand.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WHEN daddy sat down the children cried, "A story!" So he told them: "A little boy, Tuk, who had to help his mother so much he had no time to study his geography lesson, used to dream it. One night an old weeding woman who could change into a beautiful green frog and then back into an old woman again came to tell him about the little town of Soro. She had an apron over her head so wet that Tuk knew it had been raining in her town.

"'Yes, indeed,' said the old weeding woman, 'it is wet; it is wet in my town. My town is like a bottle. You get in by the neck, and then you have to get out the same way again. Once I used to have beautiful fish there. Now I have rosy cheeked boys down at the bottom of the bottle. They get a great deal of wisdom there—in school, you know, Greek and Latin. Ko-ax!'

"It was just like the croaking of frogs or the creaking of fishing boots when you walk through a swamp. It was always the same sound the old woman made just before she changed back into a frog. Such a tiresome sound, Ko-ax!' that little Tuk fell into the soundest kind of a sleep, which was best for him.

"But in his sleep he dreamed that his little baby sister that he used to take care of when he should have been studying geography had grown up into a big girl with beautiful curls and that she could fly. Together they flew right across Zealand, where Tuk studied his lesson.

"'Do you hear the cock crowing, little Tuk?' he heard the old weeding woman saying. 'Cock-a-doodle-do! You shall have a big chicken yard at your house. You will be a rich and happy man. Your house will hold up its head like King Waldemar's towers, and your name will spread around the world.'

"'Remember the estates of the realm!' somebody said just then.

"'You will go to parliament and speak wisely and well'—

"'Just as if I really were in the little town of Soro!' cried little Tuk, quite disgusted with the voices. And then he woke up. It was bright daylight, and he remembered nothing about his dream, but only that he had been too busy to get his geography lesson and had gone to bed with the book under his pillow. He sprang out of bed and studied till he knew his lesson. Then the old washerwoman that he had helped carry a pail of water stuck her head in his door, nodded and said: 'Many thanks for helping me, little Tuk. May all your dreams come true.'"

"Did they, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

And daddy kissed her twice.

Marrying a Butterfly

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Thinks It Would Be Fine to Gain Some Good Habits if It Were Not "Too Late."

"Oh, Mrs. Morton," called Ethel Gorden from her porch. "I saw your mother-in-law yesterday. I asked Mrs. Tellson which was her house and when we drove by she was in the yard." Ethel had walked down to the dividing fence. "This woman was tall and straight as a pole. She glanced up as we passed and from under her sunbonnet peered the sharpest pair of eyes I ever saw."

"That was Mother Morton all right," laughed Nell.

"I would be afraid of her," continued Ethel.

"Not after you knew her. I was afraid of her at first, but she has the kindest heart that ever beat, and there is nothing she would not do for you. She is the greatest worker I ever saw."

"Is that one of the ways she made you over? You are a wonderful worker." There was a smile on Ethel's pretty face.

"Me! I am no worker at all compared with her."

"Whatever would she say to me, then?" There was round-eyed wonder in the blue eyes.

"I would really like to know," was Nell's honest though tactless reply. Ethel flushed.

"I am a useless sort of a person," she remarked. "I think I had better take some lessons in general usefulness from your mother-in-law," she said, looking down.

"She would be delighted to teach you." There was no levity in Nell's tone. Ethel looked up to see if she really meant it.

"There was a young woman who knew next to nothing of what a wife should know, and she got in all kinds of a tangle in consequence. Finally she got sick and that blessed woman took her home to her house, and nursed her back to strength and, what was far better, put a new sense of responsibility in her; made her see what a wife's duties really are. Do you know, that woman came back to her family changed. She had a different conception of life. They are very happy now, and all because Mother Morton interfered to 'save the woman from herself,' as she expressed it."

Ethel was drawing patterns in the dust on the fence post.

"If Ralph knew about her he would be for sending me there to complete my education." There was a pathetic little quiver in her voice. "I wish my mother had brought me up to do something."

"Why don't you learn now? You are young yet and your life is just beginning." Nell was intent on doing mission work.

"It is too late," replied Ethel listlessly. "Habits of uselessness are too strong."

"Don't you ever think it," called Nell after her as she walked slowly toward the house.

"I really felt sorry for that helpless Mrs. Gordon this afternoon," remarked Nell to Dick that night at supper. "I believe she would be willing to do something if she only knew how."

"Why in time doesn't she learn then?" Dick's tone was impatient.

"She says it is too late; that her habits of uselessness are too strong," replied Nell.

"Piffle! That's just an excuse. She doesn't want to do anything, and that poor fellow is saddled with a worthless toy for life. He has my sympathy."

THE EFFECT UPON BUSINESS OF A PRESIDENTIAL YEAR.

There is a respectable list of presidential years which have been seasons of unfavorable business. Such years as 1884, the "Blaine-Cleveland contest," or 1896 and 1900, the "Bryan years," will at once occur to mind as having been marked by financial and industrial disturbance. The "Roosevelt year," 1904, was a season of trade reaction and unsettled markets. When, however, the other electoral years in the series are examined, the precedent is not altogether so convincing.

Notwithstanding a temporary atmosphere of hesitation in several of them, most of the other presidential contests of the past generation have been accompanied with at least a satisfactory measure of business prosperity. This was certainly true of 1880, when an exceedingly bitter political campaign failed to disturb the notable forward movement of the day in American finance. It was equally true of the last presidential election; for, although the shifting of control from the Republican to the Democratic party was pretty clearly indicated from the beginning of the canvass, 1912 was a year of rising markets and reviving prosperity. The most inveterate partisan had to confess, after election, that the campaign, although foreshadowing change in the tariff and revision of the currency, had exerted no visibly bad influence of any kind on the business situation.

HAMMOND TORPEDO, BOUGHT BY U. S. MAY ALTER WAR.

Among the stories of "Interesting People" in the July American Magazine is an account of John Hays Hammond, Jr., whose remarkable device for steering torpedoes by wireless has been bought by the United States for $750,000.

"As soon as he got out of college he put up a laboratory at Gloucester and got down to the business of perfecting his system of wireless control of torpedoes. That he had to take out one hundred and thirty patents, and that he worked on the proposition almost seven years, is proof enough that this young fellow had tackled a big job.

"This torpedo of Hammond's is really a surface craft which can carry one thousand pounds and travel at about fifty miles an hour. When several army officers—doubting Thomases' all of them—at last were prevailed upon to visit Gloucester, Hammond, leading them to his wireless station, said:

"'If you take these glasses, you will see a bamboo pole which I have set upright in the water three miles out at sea. It is upright because one end of it is weighted. I propose to hit that pole with this torpedo nine times out of ten.'

"The officers took the glasses and saw the feat accomplished.

"'Now,' pursued the inventor, 'if you gentlemen will get on the craft and wigwag to me, while you are on it, in what direction you want to go, when you want to stop, and where you want to strike, I'll carry out the directions.'

"They consented rather reluctantly. Hammond, by manipulating wireless waves agains tthe delicate machinery of the torpedo, steered them as they directed through the sailing vessels and other craft.

"After that the War Department began to sit up and take notice."

Chicago, Ill.—Mrs. Bruce Smith, a popular member of the Lake Forest colony, recently broke all Chicago records by calling up a number of friends on the telephone and telling of the birth of a daughter, who had arrived on the previous night. When she wasn't busy with the 'phone she was writing—not dictating—notes acknowledging early congratulations. Mrs. Smith, when Miss Pauline Mackey, won the woman's national golf championship in 1905 and is essentially an outdoor woman. Last winter she handled tarpon and other big fish in the waters around Long Key, Fla., with more skill and power than the average man.

It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

MEXICO.

New developments of the last twenty-four hours indicate that it will undoubtedly be necessary to send all of the National Guard to the Mexican border. It has been evident in fact for the last two years that the United States would eventually have to undertake the task of bringing order out of chaos in that country. The general opinion now is that it was a great mistake to withdraw our troops from Mexico when they were sent to Vera Cruz two years ago, for ever since then Mexicans have been raiding Texas, Arizona and New Mexico towns and plantations, killing Americans, taking prisoners, robbing and burning.

The Carranza government, little better than a broken reed, made it appear that the raiding was done by Villa bandits.

Early in March last a thousand Mexicans, supposed then to be bandits under the command of Gen. Villa, surprised and attacked Columbus, N. M., killed and wounded a number of American cavalrymen, several citizens, burned part of the town and carried away much loot. That was the last straw and the United States at once planned pursuit of the bandits, with the approval of the Carranza government.

But when the United States forces entered Mexico, in command of Gen. Pershing, it was found that Carranza not only was unwilling to co-operate in capturing Villa and his band, but was quick to place obstacles in the way of the chase. Mexican railroads were needed to transport troops, munitions and rations. Carranza refused the reasonable request. It was found important to enter cities and villages to make searches for the offenders. Carranza forbade that, and when Maj. Tompkins and his small force neared Parral, learned that Villa was in the city and was given permission to enter the place, his soldiers were mobbed and several killed, Carranza soldiers leading the mob.

Nothing, apparently, has been left undone to make Gen. Pershing as much trouble as possible. Every few days Carranza has let it be known that the United States forces must get out of Mexico. Last week his chief in command in Northern Mexico informed Gen. Pershing that if he moved in any other direction than toward the United States he would regard it as an act of war and attack the Americans.

In addition to all of these facts, the Mexican army, in large force, is close to the American border, equipped for battle—a suspicious state of affairs. A force twice or three times as large as Gen. Pershing's is located on three sides of his army of ten thousand, placed there, it is believed, to provoke a battle.

It was high time for this government to arrange to meet any eventuality. A mobilization of the militia and National Guard and their federalization will prove of great benefit to both, and if Mexico makes it necessary to strike, with the National Guard and militia on the border, hardened and ready for a war campaign, Uncle Sam can hit quick and hard, as Dewey did in Manila bay, and hurry the end of a war that President Wilson has done his best to prevent.

New Jersey has nearly two brigades of well disciplined and equipped National Guardsmen who are not only ready to go to the border at once, but to meet an enemy in battle. There are no better troops anywhere.

NOT AGAIN THIS YEAR!

Enclosed in a plain envelope, postmarked Elizabeth, the following interesting item arrived at the Daily Press office this morning:

"There is a movement afoot to start a 'Non-Partisan Taxpayers' League,' the object of which will be to conduct a campaign against the large board of freeholders and to work in the interest of a change in the county government. The instigators of the movement mainly are Republicans who are dissatisfied with the county government which was so strongly criticised by the last grand jury.

"The leaders desire to lose no time in organizing so that a thorough campaign of education can be carried on before the general election in November, when the small board referendum will again be presented for the approval of the electorate.

"The campaign will be handled by the league as a taxpayers' issue, regardless of party politics. It is probable that the leaders in the movement will issue circulars regarding the organization of the league within the next few weeks."

There is no identifying feature. Who the "instigators" who are "mainly Republicans" are we do not know. But the Daily Press does know that, in view of the decisive majority against the movement at the special election on June 13, there is no excuse or reason for bringing up the question again until the law has been changed. The people of Union county evidently are afraid that with the method now provided of electing all seven freeholders at large, the municipalities outside of Elizabeth will suffer, and until the law is changed there is no excuse for agitating the question again. We have a suspicion that there is politics in this move, largely from the fact that whoever sent out this story was mighty careful to keep his identity secret, as well as that of the members of the organization he professes to represent. There is no excuse for voting on the subject again this year.

"BY HIS WORKS YE SHALL KNOW HIM."

While the State of New Jersey is punishing a Paterson workman who "deserted" on publication of the call for militiamen because he could not afford to leave his family without a breadwinner while he served his country on the border, Henry Ford is preventing hundreds of men from enlisting by notifying his employes that those who give their services to their country will be "fired." This order not only applies to the men who might volunteer, but to those who are already members of the militia. They are forced by law to serve with their companies, only to lose the wages that should be theirs and, worse, to come back from a heroic work of patriotism and begin life over again. Ford's folly in playing angel to the Oscar II was laughable, but this latest evidence of his real character should be resented by every real American. The kindest thing that can be said of him is that the article he manufactures is a credit to him.

• • • • • •

Developments day by day indicate that Company K, Second Regiment, with headquarters in this city, will soon be called to active service. Conditions along the border are such that every available militiaman will probably be required there to keep the Mexican bandits out of the country, while the members of the regular army tackle the job of making the Mexican army behave itself. It would not be surprising, indeed, should President Wilson find it necessary to call out 100,000 volunteers or more, before the task is completed.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Violet Mersereau, the diminutive Universal star, and famous as one of the most beautiful screen actresses, appears at Proctor's today in a five-part romantic drama, "Autumn." O. A. C. Lund, who wrote and directed this picture, has done admirably well and has centered a strong drama, about the attractive star, not overlooking opportunities for offsetting her charming personality. She appears in her favorite part, a wild, unsophisticated young lady of the north woods, and Miss Mersereau always convinces as such. There is another notable attraction about "Autumn" and that is that Lieut. Percy Richards, well known in Times Square and environs as "The Man in White," is cast as the hero, and although many heroes have been much more active than the brawny lieutenant, he does exceedingly well in all his scenes, acting with a naturalness and ease that is pleasing. The story centers about Autumn (Violet Mersereau), a little waif of the Northwest. Dick Leslie, of the Royal Mounted, is commanded to find a certain man who disappeared years before and naturally enough he encounters Autumn, and after a while it is proven that the man wanted is her father. To this there is added a spicy bit of villiany in the shape of one Diamond Jack, a gambler, who turns covetous eyes on Autumn. He is murdered by a jealous rival of Autumn, and after determining Autumn's innocence, Leslie is made happy with the bright little girl of the woods. There are also several other pleasing subjects presented today, while tomorrow Mabel Taliaferro will appear in a splendid character portrayal in "Her Great Price," a Metro production, and in addition another dramatic picture, "The Oath of Hate," will be presented. Among the offerings booked for the coming week are DeWolf Hopper in "Mr. Goode, the Samaritan," Robert Mantell in "The Spider and the Fly," H. B. Warner in "The Market of Vain Desire," and Francis X. Bushman in "The Wall Between."

--Astor Theatre--

Kitty Gordon, the "English Lillian Russell," makes her debut with the World Film Corporation in a screen version of F. C. Phillips' noted novel, "As in a Looking Glass." Heretofore Miss Gordon's statuesque beauty and inimitable grace have been admired alone across the footlights. Miss Gordon first flashed her beauty above the American horizon twelve years ago, when she appeared in a musical play in New York, "Veronique." The piece was not much of a success, nor did it afford Miss Gordon a chance to make an important hit. She returned to the London stage, where she was already well known as a music hall singer and light operatic prima donna. Six years ago she came again to these shores to play the leading role with Sam Bernard in the musical farce, "He Came From Milwaukee." This time her hit was instantaneous. Critics and the public alike began to rave over this British beauty's marvelous figure, face and vocal talent. Kitty Gordon in "As in a Looking Glass" will be the big attraction at this theatre today, and with the rest of our interesting program will be a notable drawing card for this house. Tomorrow we will offer the big Knickerbocker feature, "Pay Dirt," with the famous actor of the "Who Pays" series, Henry King, a virile play full of swift moving incidents and color. There are many good authors, actors and directors in the world of pictures, but there are few who win recognition in the triple role of author, actor and director. Henry King, the versatile star who appears in the leading role in the five-reel Knickerbocker Star Film feature, "Pay Dirt," has won his laurels in all three fields of action. King, who is a big, virile, well-proportioned chap, has brains as well as looks, and his interpretations of the characters he presents are marked by the real ability that made him so popular in the "Who Pays" series. The play is full of color and incident that leads so naturally to the end that not a scene could be dispensed with, without marring its effect. In addition to this wonderful photo-drama we will show the ninth episode of "The Girl and the Game," and a Lubin comedy. The attractions that we offer at this theatre are the best that money can produce and we spare no expense in pleasing our patrons. A comfortable house with a goodly amount of invigorating air, with every door and window opening to the street, 20 to 30 degrees cooler in our theatre than on the street. Come in and see for yourself.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

One of the greatest events in the history of the motion picture art will take place at Plainfield Theatre today and tomorrow, when Russia's dancer will appear on the screen in a massive spectacle entitled "The Dumb Girl of Portici," in a reproduction of the opera, "Masaniello," as it was given all over the world a generation ago. The wildest imagination of one who recalls the primitive operatic production will not conceive even the faintest idea of what a woman in filmcraft has accomplished within the confines of a modern picture plant. "The Black Crook" was the title of the spectacle presented in our theatres at the time "Masaniello" was the rage. Neither "The Black Crook" or "Masaniello" would do today. The only reason why Pavlowa chose "Masaniello" as a vehicle was the remarkable character of "Fenella" and because the Russian celebrity is the only woman who could portray the role which has frightened more singers and caused more of a furore in its day than any mind of an author has ever conceived.

CHAUTAUQUA OPENS TODAY; ALL PROFITS WILL BE TURNED OVER TO LOCAL CHARITIES

The 1916 Community Chautauqua for Plainfield begins this afternoon, with a program arranged especially for children. All is in readiness at the grounds on Watchung avenue, near the Friends' church, and enough season tickets have been sold by the local committee to insure a good attendance at all of the entertainments to be given during Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday. There will be no Sunday program in Plainfield, and the entertainment put down for that day will probably be offered Monday morning.

Chairman Marshall, of the local committee, is anxious that a goodly sum be realized here, as every cent of the profits are to be turned over to local charities. The advance sale of tickets has been gratifying, but many more must be sold if any money is to be made from the entertainment.

The American Quartet and Clayton Conrad, the cartoonist, will present the prelude to the Chautauqua program this evening. The quartet have those rare qualities which go to produce a superb organization, and nothing is sweeter than the perfect blending of four male voices.

They not only produce a beautiful vocal program, but give a most varied entertainment, with violin, cello, flute, piano, whistling solos and readings. They are supplemented by cartoons under the deft hand of Clayton Conrad.

The Quartet is a whole program, but the real number of the evening is Francis Lybarger, the eminent member of the Philadelphia bar, a man known nationally for his fearless and powerful utterances on "Wastes in Government Administration." He will strike the keynote of the Chautauqua purpose and consciousness in his address on "The Community Conscience."

With the remarkable number of public-spirited citizens living in Plainfield, this address will come as a welcome word to emphasize the potentialities existing in the lives of a fine community like this.

The Chautauqua movement is one of the very best channels through which this community conscience can be developed to powerful proportions.

Saturday's program is one of the strongest on any Chautauqua platform in America.

At 2:30 o'clock Ole Theodaldi, with his star assistants, will appear and present a program such as has brought signal honors to him from the leading crowned heads of Europe.

The Saturday evening program is one of interest and power. It begins at 7:30 sharp, and has a song recital and impersonations by O'Hara and Wetmore. Mr. O'Hara is a noted Irish actor, who has scored a success as composer and tenor soloist. Tabor Wetmore, who appears with him, is known nationally as an impersonator of commanding ability.

Following the prelude, Plainfield is to hear one of the nation's most distinguished citizens, William Howard Taft, who will speak on "Our World Relationships." Mr. Taft needs no introduction to any American audience.

VISIONS

1898.

In the spring of 1898, the President of the United States called on the National Guard of the country for defensive and offensive movements against Spain. New Jersey sent some thousands of enthusiastic, but poorly trained and poorly equipped Guardsmen, who did not average three men to the company, to Sea Girt. They suffered many hardships, were hungry, went without equipment and proper quarters—and some of them died in Southern concentration camps without having seen service.

1916.

Today, about 5,000 fairly well trained men, making the biggest camp of National Guard in New Jersey history, equipped and ready for war, with about 800 recruits, are in a soldierly and efficient camp.

His Belief.

"Do you believe in hypnotism, dear?" asked the young wife, just as the honeymoon was preparing to retire from business.

"Sure," answered the man who had promised to love, honor and pay the freight. "Otherwise I would still be a bachelor."—Milwaukee Journal.

URGES FUND FOR SOLDIERS' WIVES

George P. Mellick Favors Plan to Provide for the Families of Enlisted Men.

A PATRIOTIC APPEAL

Follows Up Suggestion of Ernest R. Ackerman that No One Should Suffer Through the Absence of Those Called to the Front.

Following up the very timely suggestion made by former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman in the Daily Press of yesterday, George P. Mellick, of East Seventh street, urges that a strong organization be formed here to undertake carefully the important work of looking after any family of an enlisted man which may need help, financially or otherwise. Mr. Mellick's suggestions along that line are incorporated in the following impressive letter:

"I am hoping to see a strong organization formed in our city for the purpose to undertake most carefully the important work of saving from embarrassment, financially, any family of a Plainfield man who has enlisted in the service of his country. It should be the duty and pleasure of the citizens of Plainfield to supply this organization with funds sufficient to relieve every Plainfield soldier boy from any anxiety or apprehension in regard to the care of wife or children, or others dependent upon him.

"Plainfield has been most liberal in all charitable and uplift work, the various organizations of our city for the relief of the suffering in Europe during the horrors of war have contributed largely to such relief work. Now it is a time to pause and meditate over our own at home and to leave no stone unturned toward giving all relief and aid of every description where necessary. I am hoping that such an organization as is formed will constitute all classes of relief work. We do not want two or three different societies of this character; we little know as yet as to the seriousness of the present situation. The American soldiers may be in service for a very long period, and it will certainly be necessary that the women of Plainfield do their part, as only women can do, in the many opportunities which will be afforded them. Therefore, there should be allied with this new organization a group of women in order that the whole important work may be managed under one direct head.

"Plainfield, its present citizens at least, have never been called upon before to contribute money or time to a work which this movement will now afford them. There can be no doubt but that our citizens will give most liberally, and they should withhold contributions until a definite organization is completed and the plan in scope of the committee outlined as will be done through the Plainfield press.

"The scene at the freight yard Wednesday morning when Troop D departed for Sea Girt will never be forgotten by those who had the privilege of being witnesses. The dignity and composure of the members of the Troop; the manner in which the many parents, brothers and sisters and sweethearts stood the strain of seeing their loved ones depart was most impressionable. When Company K is called upon to go to camp, a like demonstration should be given, and all citizens must hold in deep significance the interest of every Plainfield man who has responded to the call of his country.

"Troop D, First N. J. Field Hospital Corps, which include five from Plainfield, and Company K are the three military organizations which we all will have close to our hearts."

SECOND AND THIRD STILL OPTIMISTIC

Regiments May Send Delegates to Call on President Wilson Today.

Officers of the Second Regiment, of which Company K is a member, and the Third Regiment are considering the advisability of sending a delegation to see President Wilson and beg that they may be called to the colors. The men in both of these regiments feel that they have been slighted and are anxious to get to Sea Girt with the First Brigade, comprising the First, Fourth and Fifth Regiments.

Captain Charles Peterson, of Company K, is holding his men in readiness for duty at a moment's notice and is convinced that the welcome summons will come within the next twenty-four hours. The Second Regiment was rated the highest in the State at the last Federal inspection and for this reason, if for no other, the men believe that they should have been considered in the initial call.

The reason for the failure to include the Second Regiment in the call is said to have centered around the fact that this infantry was not brigaded and Secretary of War Newton D. Baker's instructions called for a brigaded delegation of men.

Rumor had it that the Second and Third Regiments would be put with the only infantry regiment of Delaware, thus making another brigade.

The officers got a lot of gloomy retrospective thoughts out of what might have been even after General Sadler and Colonel Austen Colgate, who has tied his political boom home and is confining himself exclusively to military affairs, assured them that no such thing could happen. The officers have decided that when the call for volunteers comes that they can swing their entire regiments as units in as volunteers, and to that end they rigorously opposed any desire on the part of their men to enlist in the regiments that have been called.

Some of Colonel Horace M. Reading's men—officers of the Second—are vowing that Colonel Reading will start a little revolution and become the Villa of this country unless the bloodthirsty Trentonians are allowed to participate in the battles that they confidently are expecting.

Affected by the sorrow of the Second and Third, and, because of the recurrence of the rumor that New Jersey would not be among the first called to the border, Governor Fielder sent a telegram to President Wilson late yesterday afternoon.

Exempts End Convention.

Hoboken, June 23.—The New Jersey Exempt Firemen's association re-elected John Kennell of Passaic president for the sixteenth consecutive year. F. A. Augustus Schwartz of Elizabeth was elected vice president. Horace G. Adams of Plainfield was re-elected secretary, Nicholas D. Schnyder of Trenton treasurer and John J. O'Brien of Hoboken statistician. The 1918 convention will be held in Perth Amboy.

ALL TEAMS WILL STAY IN PENN-JERSEY LEAGUE

Phillipsburg, June 23.—A meeting of the managers of all the teams of the Penn-Jersey League, of which Tommy Mullin and Clif Randolph, of Plainfield, are members, was held Wednesday afternoon at the Lee House, Union square, when it was decided to continue the season with the teams that now constitute the league.

For several weeks a rumor has been afloat that the Stroudsburg team intended withdrawing and that that berth would be turned over to Phillipsburg, but the Stroudsburg owners emphatically stated that they intend staying in the league until the schedule is completed.

DILLON-LEVINSKY FIGHT.

Jack Dillon and Battling Levinsky will fight July 14 in a fifteen-round bout to be held in the Baltimore International League baseball park. The mill, which will be held during the Elks' convention, is being advertised as deciding the light heavyweight championship of the world. The Oriole Athletic Club is the new organization which will promote the fight. The club is also dickering for a mill between Frankie Brown and Johnny Ertle.

ASBURY BOXING CARD.

The boxing tournament to be held at Asbury Park next Saturday night under the auspices of the Arrigon Club promises to be one of the most interesting affairs ever held among amateurs in the State. There are four classes to be competed for—115, 125, 135 and 150 pounds.

A. L. WALKER WINS FOX HILLS MEDAL

T. S. Wheeler, of Plainfield, Turns in a Card of 51-49—100.

Unheralded and hitherto unsung, A. L. Walker, Jr., of the Richmond County Country Club, a tall, lanky youth of some twenty summers, appeared on the Fox Hills links yesterday putting his time to such good use that he was declared the winner of the low score golf medal in the qualifying round of the annual Fox Hill invitation tournament, leading a field of 103 starters, some golfers and some others, with a card of 38, 40-78.

It was almost as much of a surprise for the Richmond county youngster as for any one else when he found himself with a score of 78 at the end of the round. He had played on Fox Hills links several times, but never before had been able to make a respectable showing, as he said. It was Walker's first tournament, and had it not been for the coaxing of A. F. Kammer, who came in second with a card of 79, he would have passed up the event.

Considering the conditions Walker did not waste many shots. He had a 7 at the long thirteenth, but that was a hard hole yesterday. The winning card:

Out .....5 5 4 4 3 5 4 4 4—38
In .....4 5 3 7 4 5 4 4 4—40—78

The program originally called for four sixteens to qualify, but when the committee saw the golfers roll up in such numbers another cup was added.

In the fifth sixteen T. S. Wheeler, of Plainfield, turned in a card of 51, 49-100.

MILITIA UNIFORM IS BASEBALL PASS

The khaki uniform of the National Guard will be a free ticket to Ebbets Feild when the New York Giants and the Brooklyn Robins clash in baseball this afternoon. Charles H. Ebbets issued the following statement:

"Through the courtesy of the Brooklyn and New York Baseball Clubs all enlisted men of the Fourteenth, Twenty-third and Forty-seventh Regiments, who are now mobilizing for the defense of the United States against Mexico, are invited to attend in uniform the baseball game between New York and Brooklyn clubs on Friday at Ebbets Field.

"Seats will be provided for all in the upper tier of the grand-stand."

WRISTON PLANNING TO OPEN RECREATION CENTER

With the closing of the local schools yesterday, George Wriston, supervisor of Parker Field, is rushing plans for the opening of that recreation centre for the summer and will have things in full swing by the Fourth of July.

Because of the continuous wet weather last summer the schedule arranged by Mr. Wriston was greatly interfered with and so this year he has arranged one that will start on July 5 and be short enough so that it may be completed notwithstanding the weather. Mr. Wriston intends to start the boys' baseball league race on the same date and is now busy getting the names of all the teams that will be entered so that he can make out a schedule.

Any boy that wishes to play in the league and cannot locate with one of the teams already entered may get in touch with Mr. Wriston at 976 Union avenue. It will be necessary to give besides the name, the weight and age, so that he may know how to place the various applicants. It is expected that there will be at least eight teams in the league and of this number several will be uniformed.

TITLE MEET IN NEWARK?

The metropolitan champions of the A. A. U., which belong to the Irish-Americans this year, may be contested for in Newark, August 26 being the tentative date. The suggestion of holding this meeting in Newark was broached last night to the committee on athletics and exhibitions of the Committee of One Hundred by Fred W. Rubien, president of the metropolitan association of the A. A. U., who pointed out that, with the champions in Newark the city would gain much publicity, for the results of the meet are watched for by athletes all over the country.

HARVEY AFTER LEONARD.

Johnny Harvey is still waiting to hear from Benny Leonard. It is now more than three weeks since Harvey's manager offered Leonard a guarantee of $2,500 to box 10 rounds. The money will be placed in the hands of a reputable stakeholder just as soon as Leonard decides to accept the challenge. Harvey is going to box next Monday night against Jimmy Duffy, of the West Side. They will meet at the Olympic A. C.

HARVARD FRESHMEN OUT-ROW YALE EIGHT IN MOST SPECTACULAR RACE IN HISTORY

New London, Conn., June 23.—A runaway victory for the Harvard crew over Yale in the four-mile varsity race which is to be rowed about sunset on the Thames River was predicted this morning. The betting odds of 2 to 1 on Harvard which prevailed late yesterday were back down to 5 to 4 during the forenoon and even money may rule before race time. Harvard was a ten to seven favorite in the junior varsity race, with even money being bet on the freshmen contest. Fully 20,000 persons will witness the contest. The program follows: 9 a. m., junior eight-oared varsity, two miles; 10 a. m., freshmen, 8 oared, two miles; 5:45 p. m., varsity, four miles. The weather this morning was bright with conditions ideal for the oarsmen. There was enough breeze to skip up the water a bit but this was not considered serious. The regatta officials ignored the rough water this morning and started the first race almost on schedule time. A stiff wind was blowing. The program was revised and the freshmen eight was the first of the day. This will be followed by the junior eight-oared varsity, both two-mile affairs. Both crews reached the starting point at about the same time at 9:35 a. m. They made a false start and were called back.

The freshmen race started at 9:44 a. m., with Yale in the lead by about three-quarters of a length. This was soon increased to one full length. At the half mile mark the Yale boys, keeping up a steady stroke, increased their lead a little more. Both crews were racing strongly and neither was splashing. At the 3-4 mile Yale had taken a lead of two lengths. Harvard appeared to be holding its strength in reserve. As they approached the first mile both crews were pulling an even stroke. Passing the mile Yale was still leading but Harvard had hit up the pace and was only a length behind. Both were going strong. With the race half over the Yale oarsmen increased their stroke and lead to a length and a half. Harvard's stroke was also quickened. Half a mile from the finish Yale continued to hold the lead by about a length. At this point the Yale crew began to splash but the Harvard stroke was still steady and strong. Both crews increased their stroke to 36 and then shot up to 38 as they went into the stretch. The Harvard crew was making a desperate effort to overhaul the Blue shell but the Yale men held out gamely. Nearing the finish Harvard used every ounce of reserve strength and passed the Yale boat as if it had been standing still. In one of the most wonderful spurts ever witnessed in a boat race the Crimson crew snatched the victory in the last 300 yards and crossed the finish line two lengths ahead of the Yale oarsmen. The official time of the Freshmen eight oared race was Harvard, 10.36 3-5; Yale, 10.39.

HARVARD JUNIOR VARSITY WINS AFTER EXCITING RACE

The varsity junior eights reached the starting point at 10:40 o'clock, but were not given the starting signal until 10:58. Yale got away in the lead by half a length. Pulling a heavy stroke it still held the lead after the crews had gone a quarter of a mile. Nearing the half mile Harvard hit up its stroke endeavoring to catch the Yale crew but as the crews neared the end of the first mile the Blue was still in the lead. The water was choppy but neither crew splashed to any extent. Yale also hit up its stroke and still held the lead. As it neared the end of the first mile Harvard was pulling hard. Passing the first mile mark Harvard jumped into the lead and pulled ahead until it was a length in front. Once more Yale quickened its stroke and was pulling evenly. After the two shells had gone a mile and a quarter Yale began to creep up with its rapid stroke. The Crimson crew rowed evenly, however, apparently reserving its strength for the finol spurt. The crews were even at the mile and a half mark but then Harvard put all its strength behind its stroke and took the lead. It maintained this during the last half mile and crossed the finish line a length to the good.

A.: Marley, catcher; Butler, pitcher; Mair, first base; Dawe, second base; F. Mullin, shortstop; McDonough, third base; Semer, left field; Davidson, center field; Kline, right field. ERIE A. C. WILL MEET T. A. B. S. ON SUNDAY

The Erie A. C., a strong team from Kearny, N. J., will come to Plainfield Sunday to take on the T. A. B. S. In order not to keep T. A. B. rooters waiting as was the case last Sunday, Manager Scott has been very careful to have the outsiders get here on time. They will make the trip by auto and will get here not only in time to start the game but in time for a little practice. This they will probably need inasmuch as the locals are preparing to give them a hot welcome.

The Erie A. C. has a strong reputation and on all occasions has been able to give a good account of itself. The T. A. B. S., although confident of victory, still expect a close game. Wall, who played with them last Sunday for the first time, Denitzio and Hannon will be on the line up.

TO SWIM ACROSS CHESAPEAKE.

Philadelphia, June 3.—Having indulged in a plunge into the Delaware every day during the past winter and spring, Charles B. Durborow, the Philadelphia bank clerk long distance swimmer, plans to swim across the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay tomorrow. The course he has selected is from Cape Henry to Fisherman's Island, a distance of 30 miles. He expects to start at 10:30 tonight, when the tidal conditions are most favorable, and plans to finish tomorrow afternoon, after swimming throughout the night and forenoon.

P. A. C. VS. AMERICAN CO.

The Plainfield A. C. will cross bats with the fast American Cement Tiles Compay baseball nine tomorrow on the Lincln diamond. The local lineup will be as follows: H. Stites, p.; L. Stites, first base; B. Ross, catcher; Moffett, second base; Snyder, shortstop; Paritz, third base; Mullen, left field; Coffey, center field; McGulick, right field.

ST. JOSEPH'S SUPPER.

A supper will be served by the women of St. Joseph's church in the hall on Wednesday night from 6 until 9 o'clock. There will be music and other entertaining features.

MOTORCYCLE RACING FOR CHAMPIONSHIPS

Fine Sport Will Be Provided at Sheepshead Bay Speedway, July 4.

Motorcycle racing will receive powerful impetus in the metropolitan district when, on Tuesday, July 4, national and State championships will be decided on the Sheepshead Bay Speedway, New York city, in connection with the New York State F. A. M. Convention. Tours from all States east of the Mississippi River are now being arranged, and these, together with throngs attracted by the sensational added features, will bring the attendance far above the 100,000 mark.

Among the extra attractions will be Rodman Law, the champion daredevil, who, at an altitude of 1,500 feet, will dynamite his balloon and trust to a parachute to bring him safely to earth from the zone of explosion. A young woman—a suffragist, who is willing to risk life to prove that woman's courage equals man's—will share Law's peril in this hazardous feat.

The State Convention will be held at Sheepshead Bay Speedway in the forenoon of July 4, and in the afternoon there will be the following races: One, two, five, ten and twenty-five mile New York State Amateur Championships; two-mile National F. A. M. Professional Champion, ten-mile Professional Championship and 100-mile Professional Championship—all races under sanction of F. A. M. Cash prizes of over $2,000 are offered—the largest total on record for a one-day meet.

Much interest attaches to the July 4 Sheepshead Bay Speedway meet because of the unheard-of opportunities for motorcycists to make new records. The board-on-concrete track, two miles around and of ample width—representing an investment of $3,500,000—gives motorcycle racers every inducement to "let out" to the uttermost speed.

Many visiting motorcyclists will arrive in New York on Monday, July 3. Those who ride to the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on that date will be admitted free to witness the elimination trials. These visitors will find ample entertainment on the evening of July 3 at Coney Island, which is a scant ten-minutes ride from Sheepshead Bay Speedway itself.

Entry blanks and other information regarding the races will be furnished on application to Irving W. Barnard, secretary, Speedway Motorcycle Club, Inc., 15 Warren street, New York city.

CLASS FOR RACES.

Classes for the next matinee of the Road Horse Association of New Jersey, to be held at Weequahic Park, the Fourth of July, were chosen last night at a meeting of the race committee in the Automobile and Motor Club. The divisions will be 2.35 trot, 2.28 trot and pace, 2.22 trot and pace, 2.19 trot, 2.15 trot and pace, and a free-for-all.

GOOD RACE MEETING.

New York, June 23.—All the indications are that the summer meeting of the Queens County Jockey Club, which opens at the Aqueduct race course tomorrow will be one of the most successful meetings since the revival of the sport in the metropolitan district. There are several hundred well known harness horses now stabled at the track and this number will be largely increased after the close of the meeting at Jamaica today.

Fourteen stake events are to be run during the Aqueduct meeting, chief of which are the Brooklyn Handicap, the Brooklyn Derby and the Queens County Handicap. The Brooklyn Handicap and the Brooklyn Derby are among the oldest racing events in the East, and were formerly run at Gravesend, the opening year being 1887, when Dry Monopole took the Handicap and Hanover won the Brooklyn Derby.

CIVIL SERVICE EAMINATION.

The New Jersey Civil Service Commission will hold examinations for tenement house inspector of the Tenement House Inspector of the Board of Tenement House Supervision, which will be open to male residents of the State. The examination will be held on Wednesday, July 5. Candidates should file their application blanks with the commission at the State House, Trenton, not later than noon, Wednesday, June 28. The salary is $1,200 per annum.

TO BE EXECUTED IN PRIVATE.

Tampa, Fla., June 23.—The first strictly private execution in the history of Tampa takes place in the county jail here today. Heretofore the executions have been conducted in the jail yard within view of hundreds of spectators. Today's victim of the noose is Charles Haines, a negro, convicted of the murder of Marshal Joe S. Walker, at Port City several months ago.

PRIZES AWARDED AT CLOSING EXERCISES

Interesting Program Marks Final Gathering of Boro High School Seniors.

The school year of North Plainfield High School terminated with impressive exercises this morning. Before the entire student body and friends, the members of the senior class took their seats in chapel, while the school song was being sung. Mr. Earley greeted the graduating members with a last welome, giving a brief resume of their achievements during the past four years and wished them success in their future developments.

The prizes were awarded by the Parent-Teacher Association for the members of the class given for the best graduation dresses, within the maximum cost not to exceed five dollars. Bertha Keller received the first prize of five dollars, being followed by May Hoagland and Helen Yates, who received prizes of three and two dollars, respectively.

The curiosity of the student body was aroused by Mr. Earley who had announced previously that a surprise was in store for those who attended this morning. Mayor William L. Smalley made this a realization when he presented Marjorie Burtis with a silver loving cup given by her friends for the excellent record she made both in athletics and scholarship during her four years of High School life.

Mr. Aungst furnished another surprise when after a short talk he called Warren Townley to the platform and presented him with a handsome silver loving cup, the source of which was unknown, the giver presenting it as a tribute to the student for his accomplishments for his Alma Mater.

The program was concluded with two selections by the senior quartet and the singing of the class song by the members of the fourth year classmen.

WESTERN UNION EMPLOYES WILL RECEIVE HALF PAY

When it became likely that the National Guard might be called on to patrol the Mexican border, the Western Union Telegraph Company issued instructions that any of its employes, members of the National Guard, called out by the President for duty on the Mexican border, who have been in the company's service for a year or more will be entitled to half pay, while in the service of the government, unless such half pay plus the government pay exceeds their full salary, in which case they will be entitled to whatever amount will, added to the government pay, bring their total compensation up to the level of their full pay.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moreland, of West Third street, are entertaining relatives from Slatington, Pa.

Joseph J. Mutnick, Jr., who was graduated from the Plainfield High School last night will resume his studies in the fall in the law department of the New York University.

The Young People's Society of the First Baptist church of New Market will have charge of the service at the Rescue Mission tonight.

CHARLES DICKERMAN WILLIAMS WINS THE PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS PRIZE

Charles Dickerman Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Williams, of Kensington avenue, a member of the 1916 class of the Plainfield High School, was the winner of The Plainfield Daily Press prize of $10 in gold offered to the member of the class writing the best essay on a munivipal topic. Mr. Williams took for his subject, "Commission Government and How It Would Benefit Plainfield." The essay which treats the subject in an interesting manner, is as follows:

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT, AND HOW IT WOULD BENEFIT PLAINFIELD.

The most important recent development in municipal politics is generally considered to be the introduction and growth of the Commission Form of City Government. Starting in Galveston in 1900, this movement has had a remarkable growth, spreading from the Southwest in all directions. Almost five hundred American cities have adopted this form of government, of which the largest are Buffalo, Denver and Jersey City. But let us now consider what Commission Government really is.

All cities may be considered as corporations of which the voters are the stockholders. The commission plan gives to a small board of directors, elected by the municipal stockholders as a while, all the corporate powers of a municipality. Then each of these directors is at the head of an administrative department, such as public safety, or finances. This plan differs from the council-mayor plan in many important respects. In the first place the commission, or board, is elected by the electorate at large, irrespective of wards, thus doing away with ward politicians, the political saloonkeeper and petty bosses; in the second, the various departments of the city are managed, instead of by bulky committees, irresponsible and slow, byt one executive head, with full power, but directly responsible to the city.

We may consider the advantages that accrue from it. These advantages are expressed by the three E's of Commission Government—efficiency, economy and expedition, which we will consider in order. In regard to my first topic, the efficiency of Commission Government, we may take certain commission cities and measure it there. The first city to adopt Commission Government was Galveston, but there it was taken up only as an emergency measure, at a time of disaster, but its efficiency caused it to become permanent. After the flood trouble had been taken care of, the commissioners found their terms unexpired, and for the remaining time devoted themselves to the ordinary needs of the city. The commission built a huge sea wall to protect the city from future storms. Then the Board repaired the damage done by the previous flood to the city hall and some fire engine houses, and butlt three new engines and three engine houses. Then they put the hospital on a sound financial and medical basis. But the city was then badly in debt; so the Board reorganized the finances, collected back taxes and interest on bank deposits. Soon the city finances were so healthy that $400,000 could be used for new street paving. A new electric lighting plant was built. Nor were the commissioners geniuses; they were just level-headed business men, working with a plan that was clear. And, as a consequence, the plan was not only retained in Galveston, but spread to other cities.

One of these new Commission Government disciples was Cedar Rapids, Iowa. After a small-pox epidemic had been energetically taken care of, the Board turned its attention to civic improvements. New streets were laid, a new city hall was built, and an entire ward was given sewer and water facilities which it had previously lacked, a new grade was excavated and a new bridge built at one third the price, by the way, of the same kind of a bridge previously erected under the old regime; and, besides that, the tax rate was greatly reduced. But, meanwhile, the improvements had increased the valuation by three millions of dollars. This is an example of the economy which a commission can practice and effect, but which the clumsy council-mayor plan renders impossible.

As to the expedition gained by Commission Government, we need not take any particular city. The very form of Commission Government makes expedition inevitable. Suppose, under the council-mayor plan, a fire inspector finds a tenement in bad condition and the owner refuses to fix it up. Then the poor inspector has to wait for the next council meeting, make a report to his particular committee, and then wait for it to do something. Even if it is willing, it is difficult to act fast. Meanwhile a disastrous fire may have occurred. But under the commission plan the situation is entirely different. The inspector just calls up his particular superintendent, who tells the owner to get busy. If the man still sulks, which is improbable, the superintendent has adequate means to force him. And this also applies to faulty weights and measures, incorrect taxes, bad sewers ,poor paving, sloppy office work, incorrect surveys, et cetera, ad infinitum.

I will now try to prove the falsity of certain arguments against it. Of these the main is the assertion that Commission Government puts too much power in a few hands. This difficulty was soon recognized by the advocates of Commision Government and a series of checks was devised, called the initiative, the refereadum, and the recall. If a board should not pass a law desired by the majority of the voters, a petition signed by fifteen per cent. (New Jersey law) of the voters at the previous election, could secure a special election, at which the electorate could show its will. In the same way the referendum provides for the rescinding of an unpopular bill, while the recall makes it possible for incompetent members to be taken off the board. By these checks the "too much power" idea is crushed.

And now we come to that which interests us—the relation of Commission Government to Plainfield. Many people admit all the previous part of this argument, but say that in Plainfield we should "let well enough alone," remarking that we are now well governed, with goods streets, fine schools and teachers, strict health rgulations, and that few incompetent men have ever held office. Whatever truth there is in this city only goes to show what a fine city we would have under a board, if the faults we have now could be eradicated. But in The Daily Press for May 5, can be read the report of a group of men hired to find out what was the matter with Plainfield. These men recommended, among other things, a modern accounting system, combination of the office of city clerk and auditor, also a combination of the street, sewer and sidewalk departments. In fact, they recommended as much of a commission government as is possible under our plan—combination of committees under one head, and the combination of certain departments under one head. But to complete these reforms undr our present system will take a long time, be somewhat inefficient, and slightly expensive.

Can we not take the short step to Commission Government which will facilitate these and further reforms? Commission Government cannot make good government, but do we claim that it will assist democracy and enable us to choose better men, and, having chosen these man, make it easier for thm to make our government more efficient, more economical, and more expeditious.

TROOPER TAPS

Captain Borden was engaged in the serious business of reading the articles of war to the men gathered in one of the coaches on the way down on Wednesday, when the train was stopped in the Bradley Beach station. Aside from the captain's voice not a sound was to be heard within the car, when suddenly under the window a small boy, who could see the uniforms, piped "Hey, you goin' to beat 'em up?" Even the Captain stopped long enough to smile.

"Hey, let Johnny take a good look at me before I leave. He may not know me when I come back. I'm going away a Sergeant and may come back a General," said one of the popular members of the troop to some friends outside the car as they waited in the freight yard.

When the troop arrived in camp there was a long string of horses tied to the fence. Someone said they were cavalry horses which had been trained for the French army, and "captured" just as they were to be shipped from Jersey City. The Plainfield boys had their eyes on these "trained" horses, for some of them are not overskilled riders. They continued to keep their eyes on them until some of the men in Troop C decided they might like a few of the mounts, and took one to their street to try him out. He was the meekest looking brute of the lot, but when the saddle and other equipment were put on him and a trooper mounted, the Plainfielders changed their minds and decided to wait and get horses that had been trained for the United States army. The horse in question started in to do wild west stunts that a good many people would pay admission to see.

Members of the Plainfield troopers' families are looking for accommodations near Sea Girt, and if the organization is to be there any length of time it is probable that a number from this city will go down.

People who can carry messages or small packages from Plainfield to Sea Girt are mighty popular with the troopers. The Press man went down this morning with a dozen or more articles from fond relatives, and the automobile looked somewhat like a moving van. Incidentally the Daily Press will be glad to see that messages are delivered promptly to and from the camp, and in cases of great emergency can get phone messages direct to the men on short notice.

A Little Chat On Telephone Etiquette

DO YOU remember the old, well-thumbed book we used to have on the parlor table at home — the "Handbook of Etiquette and Guide to the Social Graces"? We consulted it for everything — from the Inaugural Ball to acknowledging an invitation.

If a revised edition of that old work is ever brought out, it will contain a chapter on telephone manners. People are beginning to pay more attention to their telephone manners than formerly.

The telephone "Hello" is no longer in use among particular people. It is becoming obsolete because it is both meaningless and time-wasting.

In the modern, up-to-date business establishment, the telephone is answered thus: "Jones & Company, Mr. Smith speaking."

This same man in his home will answer his telephone thus: "Mr. Smith speaking."

When his home telephone is answered by a servant, he has instructed her to say: "Mr. Smith's residence."

Next week we are going to bring our series of chats to a close.

MAY LEAVE FOR FRONT IN A FEW DAYS

able night, for the ground was not so damp, and they were more used to sleeping on it after the preceding night's experience. There were no wet blankets and other equipment, and in addition the men had a more strenuous day yesterday than they had the day before and were thoroughly tired out.

The food supply is good. Everything is substantial, with plenty of nourishing meat, bread, etc., and the commissary department is well on the job. Some of the troopers telephoned to their friends in Plainfield that cake and such things were mighty scarce, and several automobile loads of Plainfielders who came down today were well stocked with the food supplies which do not come with regular army rations. A few wives of members visited the camp this morning, and there were several other automobile parties. From all indications there will be a big crowd of visitors from Plainfield on Sunday. Word has been received that scores of friends of the troopers will come down by auto and train and preparations are being made to entertain them as can best be done in keeping with military requirements. In view of the uncertainty as to when the troops will be sent on to the border, it is possible that this will be the last chance the troopers will have to see their friends before departing for active duty in the field, and that explains the probable presence of a great crowd.

NOW IT'S EASY TO SHIP EGGS BY MAIL

Millions to American farmers and postmasters, and fresh eggs every morning to the denizens of large cities is the promise held out by a new container for parcels post shipments, the unqualified approval of which by post office department experts has just been announced.

The committee on experiment, research and design of the post office department, after reporting favorably on the container, added, "In our opinion it is superior in every way to any other containers for this purpose that have been submitted to this committee for examination."

The new container is made of the same fiber as used in the manufacture of car wheels, is very light and yet strong enough to bear the weight of a man. It is said to be a non-conductor of heat or cold. A peculiar inner arrangement of thin fiber partitions absorbs all shocks.

The value of the new invention to the postmasters is not alone in the additional parcels post business but in the plan to have the postmasters of smaller cities act as agents on commission. The value to the farmer is seen in the ready disposal of his eggs and other produce direct to the consumer, thus eliminating the middle man.

One of the new features of the box is its reversible tag. F. W. Edwardy, the inventor, at the Oxford Hotel, Washington, attaches considerable importance to the tag, which he says thus insures the return of the box to the original sender, withholding it being a violation of postal regulations, he says.

ATTRACTIVE ISSUE OF THE HIGH SCHOOL ORACLE

The graduation number for the Plainfield High School Oracle for the clas of 1916 has just made its appearance and is considered one of of the best issued by a graduating class of the school. Besides all of the customary departments there are several additional features.

One of the features that is entirely new is a number of cartoons of the various members of the class that were drawn by Morris Roddy. The class history, honors and various prizes won are all given, as well as the class prophecy, prize essays and pictures of the graduates. The pictures of the football, basketball and baseball teams and class are also included, and the whole is bound for the first time in the history of the Oracle by leather. Although the publication cost three hundred and fifty dollars, it is expected that the sale will leave sufficient funds to start the Oracle off next year.

WILL LOOK AFTER PRACTICE.

During the absence of Dr. Harold D. Corbusier at Sea Girt, Dr. Sidney Titsworth, of this city, and Dr. Joseph O'Dwyer, of New York, the orthopedic specialist, will look after the former's patients. The latter will come to Plainfield only on Wednesdays.

COMPANY K NOT YET ORDERED INTO SERVICE

Although officers of Company K are momentarily expecting a call into service, no orders have yet been received. Capt. Peterson will go to Sea Girt tomorrow, but his company has not been ordered to report. It was reported on the streets this morning that the local militiamen were getting under arms and had been ordered to report at Sea Girt tomorrow, but this was not based on fact.

FESTIVAL A SUCCESS.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue church gave its annual strawberry festival in the church parlors last night. The attendance was very large and the success of the affair was even better than in previous years. An informal program of music was rendered throughout the evening, while the berries and cream were passed by the waitresses. Miss Mary Mathews was chairman of the committee which made the arrangements.

Washington, June 23.—Following today's Cabinet meeting orders were sent to Gen. Leonard Wood, commanding the Department of the East, Gen. Thomas Barry, commanding the Central Department, and Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commanding the Western Department, to send all militia under their jurisdiction to the border as soon as they are ready.

The militia will go forward in units without waiting for the completion of the individual State mobilization. It is understood here that Gen. Wood and Gen. Barry have been urged to get the New York and Illinois National Guard under way immediately if possible.

P. H. S. BASEBALL PLAYERS ARE LOOKING FOR BERTHS

Now that the Plainfield High School baseball team has disbanded for the year, most of the players are trying to secure berths on other teams, looking with especial favor at the prospects in the City League.

It is practically certain that Captain "Box" Apgar will help out the catching department of the Clinton Avenue team of the City League, where he played last year. Philip Mills and Carlton Dunham, both P. H. S. outfielders, expect to go with the Baptist outfit, and "Art" Kyle, next year's captain, will play with the Tabs. "Sam" Davidson, who held up the pitching burden during the season, and William Victorson, the third sacker, will wear the colors of the Y. M. H. A. Noonan and Semer may connect with some aggregation, but Linke will leave the city and will lay baseball aside until he goes to Annapolis.

ASSEMBLYMAN RUNYON STIRS TRENTON REPUBLICANS

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, majority leader of the House of Assembly, set the hearts of about 200 Republicans throbbing to the beat of victory last evening at the Republican club in Trenton. The occasion was the regular monthly dinner of the booster committee, and former Judge Runyon, who was the principal speaker, kept his auditors on edge throughout a halfhour talk, filled with the sturdy doctrine of Republicanism and characterized by a conviction of triumph for the Grand Old Party at the polls in November. Cheers vitalized by the warmth of spontaniety approved the sentiments of the speaker and made the dinner the mos enthusiastic of the booster series.

Judge Runyon, though crippled by an attack of pleurisy, was "game," and gave a demonstration of his versality by contributing the solo, "A Perfect Day."

Judge Runyon assailed the foreign policy of the administration, particularly the Mexican policy, and asked if, after all, the Democratic battle cry, "we kept the country out of war," will be made good.

"It is all right to keep out of war," declared the speaker, "but make the other fellow respect you. Make him feel that you will go the limit for peace with honor—but that's all the farther you will go."

With sound statesmanship, the speaker thought that the present Mexican trouble could have been avoided.

FIGHT COST U. S. 12 MEN AT CARRIZAL

Expect More Clashes With Mexicans.

ENEMY THREE TO ONE

Pershing Sends Cavalry to Rescue of Lone Troop.

NO WORD YET FROM THEM

Negro Troopers Inflicted Heavy Loss on Attacking Carranzistas at Carrizal—Pershing Sends 500 Cavalry to Aid of Lone Troop—Juarez Is Evacuated.

El Paso, June 23.—Further clashes between the American expeditionary force and Carranza troops are expected. The best traditions of the American army were maintained when one troop of United States cavalry was drawn into an ambuscade at Carrizal, Mexico, by a Carranza force three times as large.

The Mexicans were in ambush and had a machine gun with which to pour their fire into the Americans, while the negroes were armed with only their revolvers and carbines. They were also forced to charge across an open field.

General Bell's information was to the effect that the American command consisted of nothing more than Troop C, Tenth cavalry, commanded by Captain Lewis Morey, who lost his life in the charge against the intrenched Mexicans. The Mexicans themselves admit that they had 200 men and assert that the American command numbered about the same. Army men assert that the American command did not number more than sixty men.

American Aim Deadly.

The fact that late reports bring the number of dead down to fourteen Mexicans and twelve Americans shows the deadly aim of the American cavalrymen. Although the odds were against them, they killed more Mexicans than they lost in the fight. The first Mexican claims placed the American dead at forty, but this has been scaled down until the Mexicans no longer make any such claims.

Andres Garcia, Mexican consul at El Paso, assured the military authorities that the seventeen prisoners taken by the Carranzistas in the fighting at Carrizal would not be executed. Refugees brought the report that the negro troopers were being held in a cattle car at Villa Ahumada and that the Mexicans were boasting that they were to be taken south and shot.

A report was received in Juarez that General Pershing had arrived in person at Villa Ahumada with 2,200 men and that re-enforcements were expected from El Valle and the Galeana district. The report was said to have been received over the Juarez telegraph lines.

The Carranza troops under Colonel Rivas are said to be seventeen miles south of Villa Ahumada, heading toward Chihuahua. If the report is true General Pershing's column will be between two Carranza forces, as the troops from the Juarez garrison are approaching Villa Ahumada.

Army officers deny that General Pershing is at Villa Ahumada in person, although they say it is possible that he sent a large force there, and further fighting would be no surprise.

Bitter feeling between Americans and Mexicans along the border is growing stronger.

The sheriff of Pecos county, Tex., was fired on by a Mexican in ambush. The sheriff returned the fire, killing the Mexican. Clashes were reported all along the line.

One American soldier was killed and five others were wounded at Naco, Ariz., when William Humphrey, a half-breed Mexican guard at the water works, opened fire upon members of Company E, Fourteenth infantry, as the guard was being changed. The sergeant in charge of the guard was injured. He was shot in the back. Another soldier was shot through the neck and a third wounded in the hip.

The man killed was Private Powell. Private John G. Gregory was seriously wounded.

The soldiers were standing within fifty feet of the water plant when Humphrey opened fire. Humphrey was overpowered by the soldiers and taken into custody.

A Mighty Smoker.

Emile Augier, the dramatist, was inordinately addicted to tobacco. When he was writing "Le Gendre de M. Poirier" he used every morning on sitting down to work to fill twelve pipes, and he always continued smoking until he had smoked them all. At the end of the eighth pipe his mouth was so inflamed that every puff was painful, but it was then his practice to smear his tongue with butter so as to be able to smoke on to the bitter end.

It is not surprising in the circumstances that his doctor warned him that unless he gave up smoking he would die of nicotine poisoning within twelve months. He did give it up, but his life was shortened by his habit.

PASTOR AND WIFE GIVEN A SURPRISE

Rev. E. C. Conover Presented With Purse as He Enters Upon 6th Year as Pastor.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Temple Baptist church last night surprised the pastor, Rev. Evarts C. Conover and his wife. The party met at the church and then proceeded in a body to the parsonage. It was a genuine surprise, the pastor and his wife having no intimation of the visit. The company took possession of the parsonage and everybody was made to "feel at home." A pleasant evening was spent in music and games, after which refreshments were served.

During the evening the pastor was taken into the parlor, where, after an appropriate speech by Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, he was presented with a card case well filled with currency as a token of affection and esteem and best wishes for the year.

Mr. Conover has just begun his sixth year as pastor of the church, and, with pastor and people united, the new year opens with much promise for the best in the history of the church.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, will be the speaker at the annual meeting of the Dutch Arms Men's Association of Trinity Reformed church, Monday night. His subject will be "National Preparedness," one with which he is quite familiar. There will be a business meeting at 7:45 o'clock, and Dr. Eaton will speak at 8:15.

At the business session officers will be elected for the coming year, those to be chosen being president, first and second vice-presidents, corresponding secretary, financial secretary and treasurer.

REV. W. R. HOWELL WILL TELL OF MISSION WORK

Rev. Wilbert R. Howell, missionary, who operates the "Robert G. Mr. Howell's home is in Seattle, Wash., and his missionary boat is operated on Puget Sound. He has a remarkable story to tell of his travels in the far west and his views are said to be unusually interesting.

NETHERWOOD TEAM WILL HAVE TWO HARD GAMES

The Netherwood basebal team will have two hard games for the week-end. Tomorrow afternoon they will tackle the First Baptist ball tossers on the Netherwood grounds. Patterson will have a strong team there to try to pull the Netherwoods down a peg. On Sunday the "Champs" will visit New Brunswick where they will face the Knights of St. Peter. The Netherwood team will have to play some to beat Denzer, who is probably one of the best pitchers in semi-pro. baseball.

The list contains over five hundred marriages, one of which is that of Joseph Spicer, father of J. D. Spicer, of West Fifth street, this city. He married Content Potter, November 12, 1818. She was a sister of the late Charles Potter, of this city.

CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL TO HOLD PICNIC

The first annual picnic of the Congregational church Sunday school will be held tomorrow afternoon. Members will meet at the trolley station, at Fourth street and Watchung avenue in time for the 2.30 car, to go to the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp, where the affair will be held. Each attendant is asked to bring his lunch. Ice cream will be served at 5 o'clock. Features planned for the afternoon include running races, three-legged races, baseball, volley ball and a tug of war. If the weather should prove inclement the picnic will be held in the Parish House.

LAST OF THE "AT HOMES" GIVEN AT BOROUGH CHURCH

The last of the "At Homes" of the Rev. and Mrs. J. C. McKelvery, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, was held last night in the church parlors. The affair was in the nature of a reception to new members who have joined with the church since the Biederwolf campaign. During the evening vocal selections were rendered by the following: Mrs. Edgar, John Richards, Miss Ruth Wheeler and Sylvanus Jenkins. The reception committee consisted of the Mesdames John Higgins, John Johnson, Dave Smith, William Bacon, Peter Seader, Alfred Causbrook, David Kline, A. J. Stiglitz and Miss Hattie Taynor. Refreshments were served during the evening.

WILL ORGANIZE BUSINESS MEN'S EFFICIENCY CLUB

H. L. Fogleman, who is an official lecturer for the Sheldon School of Business Building, Chicago, addressed a large and enthusiastic audience of business men at the Y. M. C. A., last night, when he spoke on the "Building of Any Business."

The talk was considered one of the most helpful yet heard by those present. Mr. Fogleman was introduced as the "'Billy' Sunday of the Business World," and it was the opinion of those who heard him that he lived up to the reputation. It is proposed to start a Business Men's Efficiency Club here similar to many such organizations which have been formed throughout the country.

It is believed that a live organization of business men can be formed in this city. Alexander Moodie, of New York, will have charge of the organization and he will be assisted by Earl B. Pierson, of this city, who is an enthusiastic supporter of the Sheldon principles.

TEMPLAR CONCLAVE ENDS.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 23.—The triennial conclave of Knights Templar, which has held forth in Los Angeles this week, is now a thing of the past. Already the white plumes and gold girt uniforms which have been so familiar for five days are today a comparative rarity, and tonight the outgoing trains will be laden with the rear guard of homebound passengers. In numerous instances the commanderies will split up in order to take in points of interest in the far West before resuming their journey homeward. The triennial has been notable for the great number of women present. A majority of the Sir Knights brought their wives or daughters with them, and California's daughters were everywhere looking to the entertainment of guests. For the enjoyment of the visitors who remained over tomorrow there was a midsummer allegorical and floral parade this morning. The eight divisions were composed of more than 3,000 pupils of the Los Angeles public schools.

very satisfactory. Not long ago he opened a bank account. 'It was the first time,' he said, 'that I ever went into a bank except to get the lay of it or to rob it.'

"In the mind of the employer who is guided by the principle of service, the daily wage, however scientifically adjusted is not all that a man, who stays by an enterprise for a term of years, earns. The employer who pays only wages has no right to ask more than wage service. If he wishes to arouse and keep the interest of the employe in his work, he must show his appreciation in other ways than through the pay envelope. How has this idea been put into actual practice?

"Many factories and stores are doing much for the comfort and happiness of their employes. Those who have gone through Wanamaker's store only on a hasty shopping tour probably have no idea of the many and varied diversions that this and many other large stores of its kind offer their employes. This store has a cadet battalion, 400 strong, composed of boys of the store who drill regularly under a competent military instructor; a drum and bugle corps; orchestras; literary and dramatic clubs, and athletics. Aside from amusements, the education and health of all workers are carefully considered. Classes are held daily for educational purposes and special classes have been organized for the purpose of teaching foreigners our language. The health of the employes is looked after by a corps of physicians and nurses. Three years ago, this store also introduced a full Saturday holiday in addition to a two weeks' vacation.

"Employers are being brought to realize that nothing is quite so valuable economically as man. The saving of life has become an industrial issue. If the directors of the Steel Corporation had been told ten years ago that they would soon be spending $3,000,000 annually in accident prevention, would be giving their own time and that of their employes, that they would be running hospitals, a museum, publishing books and pamphlets to aid safety, they would have believed it almost impossible and very improbable. Such means as these, however, have given the employer a new notion of his own work. He sees himself as something more than a maker of things. He is a saver of life and of suffering. His industry has become an important link in the chain of human institutions which minister to men.

"Let us consider the application of the Golden Rule from the standpoint which is most practical for us as we go into the business world. In return for all these advantages and comforts furnished employes by their employers, what does the ideal employe contribute to show his appreciation? An employer once said, 'I find it pays to give each of my employes two weeks' vacation.' The person to whom this remark was directed inquired, 'I suppose you find that they do much better work after they have had a rest?' But the employer replied, 'Oh, no, it isn't so much that; it helps to make them understand that they are not entirely indispensable.' The ideal business man or woman of today does not give his employer cause for such a comment. First, he shows willingness and initiative toward his work. If he wishes to advance rapidly in the commercial field, he doesn't acquire the habit of being told what to do. Orison Marden states that a habit of doing nothing without orders or directions is death to individuality and originality. Then, the employer wants orderly, systematic, painstaking employes, for he dislikes slipshod and slovenly methods. Thirdly, the employe must have tact—tact and cheerfulness in dealing with callers or customers. He tries everywhere possible to promote his employer's interests and to carry out his plans. Maurice Switzer in his 'Letters of a Self-made Failure' believes modesty to be a very desirable quality for the employe. He says, 'Be modest. I know it is a little out of fashion in New York, but for that very reason somebody may notice you.' It is because of qualities such as these, that men like Charles Schwab and James Hill, the great railroad magnate who died only recently rose from humble circumstances to positions of great power and responsibility. Some one has said, 'In playing the game, it's the steady, vigilant, intense fighting with every ounce of strength given to every minute of play that wins the game of business the pennants of commerce.'

"So we see that men are coming to realize more and more that it is only through the application of the Golden Rule that the problem of the right relation between the employer and the employe can be solved. It is only as the principle of 'supplemental service' is applied to our everyday affairs that we can hope for true success, the success which brings not only worldly results, but rich returns in character, and in the spirit of brotherhood."

The address was then given by Professor E. W. Smith, of Colgate University, which was well received and proved interesting to the large assemblage. In part Prof. Smith said:

"Were I to venture a guess as to what we 'old folks' of Plainfield are thinking tonight as we gather to bid 'God speed' to these young graduates, I should word my guess like this, 'What opportunities are theirs that were not mine. I am glad that my boy and my girl will have a better opportunity at a better life than I had.' I venture this guess because, as I understand it, the fundamental ambition of every true American is this, to get one notch higher than that in which he was born, and to put his children one notch higher than he achieves. This is America's inheritance from a hard headed Anglo-Saxon ancestry which never knew when to stop climbing. 'One notch higher' has come to be the motto of every true American under whatever flag fate gave him birth. I should have said, to be exact, of every true American but one, the President of the United States. There is no higher notch, and I should not be surprised if there were fathers and mothers here tonight whose clothing is a little less fine, whose eyes are a little less clear, whose steps are a little less nimble because their children are having that better chance.

"Were I to hazard a guess as to what these serious minded boys and girls are thinking tonight as they stand upon a threshold and look out upon the world, I should put it like this: 'How I wish I had the chance my parents had, when the world was younger, when the town was newer, and all the places had not been filled. Why all they had to do was to go in and go to work. Now that the places are so scarce I shall have to work hard to succeed at all.' Then, young fellow, if that is the case, you are in luck, that's all.

"Now which is right, the older or the younger? It is true that Uncle Sam has no more farms to give away. You young men cannot pack your grips tomorrow morning, present your card next week to Uncle Sam's agent in Montana or New Mexico, loaf around in a cyclone cellar for a few weeks each year, and come back with a deed in your pocket for a good farm. Your fathers and grandfathers could have done that. It is probably true that you cannot go into this valley and without cash buy a farm and pay for it with the ease that men of the last generation did. But if the manna showers are fewer, how much larger the kit of tools you possess with which to open the doors of opportunity. You know the secrets of the soil, the secrets of life processes, the secrets of the air and the machine that flys in it, the secrets of trade and government, the secrets of social relations, every one of which opens doors past which your fathers walked with unseeing eyes.

"Now members of the graduating class, if you are to succeed in your two-fold task of getting higher and helping others higher it will be in obedience to certain great principles, which work as silently and inevitably in human society as the laws that hold the stars in place. The first of these is this: More is accomplished by impulsion than by compulsion. The race has never been whipped to its great achievements. No nation was ever driven into greatness. No man ever achieved fame or wealth by compulsion.

"If you get up yourselves and then help others to rise it will be in obedience to another principle. Let us say it this way. An extensive harvest is obtained only by intensive cultivation. We are learning this lesson over again today from the soil. The time is past in America when we can scratch the surface and drop a seed and reap a harvest. Only the best cultivation pays today. The soil must be plowed deep, it must be pewdered fine, the seed must be drilled beneath the surface where the moisture is, and the soil packed over it. This you know already, I do not come to teach you intensive agriculture. The day is likewise past in America when a man can be a preacher, pedagogue and plow man at the same time, and be much of any one. Every profession today is a jealous mistress. Every line of business that is worth while requires all there is of a man to make it go. The day of loose pulleys is gone. The day of big sprockets and high gears is here. Putterers at many things will putter their lives away. But do not mistake my meaning. The ax that is no thicker than its edge is no ax at all. The keen edge must have solid metal behind it, to make the blow and to stand the blow. Specialization that puts on the edge before the head—the ax head you understand—is heavy with solid metal, is good for little. But solid metal without the keen edge is used only to drive sharper tools. Efficiency is the watchword today.

"If you succeed in your great task it will not be solely because the door of opportunity stood open. 'Opportunity,' some one has said, 'not only knocks once at every man's door, it plays an anvil chorus and lays around the corner with a club.' The only way to get away from opportunity is to lie down and die.

"We behold today the re-barbarism of the world. Passion, brutality, selfishness, hatred. We stand upon our safe retreat and behold the awful game. Every one who gets up must help every one who is down to get up. It is for him to lead whose heart is pure and whose hands are clean. Righteousness does not exalt a nation unless all nations are exalted.

"They say we are in danger from without because we have so little ammunition ready and so few men, but we are in greater danger from within because we have so much ammunition and so many men—of the wrong kind. We walk among these powder piles, the good and the bad alike. Let but some careless fellow drop a match or a cigarette stub and an explosion rocks the earth. It is a time to walk carefully, think carefully, talk carefully, and act carefully."

"Somewhere a Voice Is Calling," by Tate, was given by the orchestra, after which Miss Ellen Agnes Shjarback delivered the valedictory essay and address, which follows:

"As I was sitting by the fire-side, looking into the glowing embers, buried in thought, all at once, I saw in the distance three figures coming toward me. My heart beat fast. At first they seemed like dim outlines, but, as they drew closer, I recognized the witches, my old friends of the Senior year, who led Macbeth on to his life of crime. 'So wild,' were they 'in their attire' they 'looked not like the inhabitants of the earth.' Was I dreaming? They were not far off now. I rubbed my eyes. No, it must be true. On they come, closer—closer—closer.

"'When shall we three meet again
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?'

they murmured.

"'With crime for your purpose?' I asked, almost trembling with fear. 'You have caused nothing but crime. It is time you devoted your energy to good deeds rather than evil.'

"'Tush, tush, never shall we meet again
In thunder, lightning, or in rain.'

This year, the world is celebrating the three hundredth anniversary of our great master, Shakespeare, and we have come to inform you that, in his honor, we are going to do only good hereafter.'

"'What are you doing?' they questioned.

"'I'm trying to write a book entitled 'Lessons I have learned from Shakespeare during my High School Course.' Shakespeare certainly is a safe and wise teacher. All the seniors found this to be true.'

"'We'll help you,' they chorused, and at the same time jumped up and danced around in a grotesque fashion, waving their hands wildly about their heads, as though summoning apparitions from the past.

"I rubbed my eyes again. Who was that walking slowly toward me with a solemn expression on his face? It was the melancholy Jacques, an acquaintance of my junior year.

"'I have come to warn you,' he said, 'before you go out into the world. Don't be as melancholy as I am, but look at the world a little more cheerfully, and you will profit much more from life. My whole occupation has been to amuse my mind with the humors of men and women. I had no sympathy for others, and in order to understand life in the true way, you must have feeling and be able to put yourself in the part each plays, whether it is the schoolboy 'creeping like a snail unwillingly to school,' or the old man with 'spectacles on nose.' But here's a merry wench who'll cheer you with her philosophy and teach you optimism.'

"'Then, as he faded from my view, blithesome Rosalind glided past, with Touchstone trailing close behind. The thought then came to me how Shakespeare loved the joyous as well as the melancholy side of life. The winsome Roselind shows us that no matter how 'weary are our spirits' life is still joyous,' and we should have the 'spirit of the springtime, the only pretty ringtime.'

"'Suddenly, there gleamed a flash of lightning and a thundering crash cut off the words of Rosalind. All became dark and gloomy and depression seized me. Before me, slowly rose a pale, haggard figure, draped in white. It was a sorry sight. Could it be Lady Macbeth? In truth it was Shakespeare's tragic queen. Between her sighs, I caught the lament,

"'Nought's had, all's spent
Where our desire is got without content.'

"'You had to learn those lines in Senior English,' whispered a witch. 'You can never forget their meaning.' Not until then did I notice that Macbeth was standing by her side. 'Yes,' he muttered,

"'I had no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition.'

Then, as he saw the witches, he shuddered and cried, 'Avaunt, quit my sight, you secret, black and midnight hags.' As these two sad figures glided away, I thought no one could fail to remember their tragic lesson—the wages of sin is death.

"The air gradually brightened, 'Here comes Katharine and Petruchio,' exclaimed the witches. 'Have you any message for the Senior class, Katharine?' I inquired, as I welcomed our old friend the Shrew. 'Indeed I have some good advice for the boys and girls alike. I met the Seniors, when I appeared in 'The Taming of the Shrew' in this auditorium and have not forgotten them. Let me impress upon you that a sharp tongue avails nothing for it doesn't pay to 'Heat a furnace for someone else, so hot that it singes yourself.' But she had not time for more, for her masterful husband summoned her to go.

"It seemed as if Katharine and Petruchio had been transformed into Antonio and Shylock for I saw the merchant and the money-lender in the distance, and heard the words, 'If you prick us, do we not bleed? If you tickle us, do we not laugh? If you poison us, do we not die?' 'Could Shylock teach us any lessons?' I asked the witches, 'Wasn't he just a grasping miser?'

"'Well,'" answered a witch, 'we can surely learn from this relationship that perhaps if Antonio had treated Shylock with common decency, the latter would never have taken advantage of him as he did. Even in a narrow age, Shakespeare seemed to realize that every man must be treated with respect no matter of what race.'

"'But who is that?' I questioned. My heart rejoiced for it was no other than the beautiful Portia, whom we all know. As she flitted over the stage, the witches chanted,

"'The quality of mercy is not strain'd
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath.'

"'How far that little candle throws its beams,
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.'

"Then suddenly everything became pitch dark for one brief moment and a great light penetrated the darkness. The witches had disappeared. Through the air fluttered Ariel.

"'Our revels are now ended.
These our actors were all spirits and
Are melted into air, into thin air.'

so spoke the bright spirit, and he vanished. I rubbed my eyes and awoke. Like Puck in Midsummer Night's Dream, I knew

"'I had but slumbered here
While these visions did appear.'"

"Classmates: Tonight, as we are saying goodbye to dear old Plainfield High School and are about to enter a much broader life, there could be no better wish than that some of these visions should stay with us, for surely we could learn no more valuable lessons than to have sympathy for others, to be optimistic, to control our ambitions, to show respect to every man, and to let our good deeds shine out in the world as the beams of a candle gleam forth in the darkness. We are about to leave the schoolboy and schoolgirl part of life and enter into the scenes of manhood and womanhood. Let us, as we go on to the larger stage, play our parts well, and so bring honor, not only to ourselves, but to our Alma Mater."

The exercises were concluded with the presentation of diplomas by Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education, assisted by Dr. H. M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, and the playing of "The Stars and Stripes," by the orchestra.

After the commencement exercises a reception and dance was given to the graduates by the Alumni Association. During the evening refreshments were served under the direction of a committee from the association. Among those who enjoyed the festivities were a number of former graduates.

READY TO MOBILIZE RED CROSS WORKERS

American Organization Will Care For Soldiers' Families.

Washington, June 23.—The possibility of plague and battle wounds for the national guardsmen who are being rushed to the Mexican border has been anticipated by the American Red Cross, which announces it has completed preliminary plans for relief work in connection with the mobilization.

The plan includes a comprehensive scheme to care for national guardsmen's families who may become destitute in the absence of their breadwinners.

Receiving and distributing stations will be established at San Antonio and El Paso, with intermediate depots at important centers to be designated as occasion demands. The chapters of the organization throughout the country have been notified to commence collecting supplies suitable for camp and hospital use.

Supplies for designated regiments or companies will be received, but the agents of the Red Cross have been instructed not to receive articles for designated individuals. The organization's "approved list" of acceptable articles is:

Reading matter, games, comfort bags, pajamas, cotton socks, towels, pipes, smoking tobacco, cigarettes, electric fans (for hospitals), chewing gum, chocolate in tin boxes, hard candies, coffee, evaporated cream, canned fruits and other delicacies in tins.

RICHARD BOARDMAN OF PLAINFIELD WILL OPPOSE JOHN H. CAPSTICK FOR CONGRESS AT THE REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES

THE FOLLOWING CORRESPONDENCE TELLS ITS OWN STORY

Richard Boardman, Esq., Plainfield, New Jersey.

Dear Mr. Boardman—Speaking for a large group of Republican voters of the Fifth Congressional District, I call your attention to these facts:

Public opinion seems to be well nigh unanimous that the present Congress is hopelessly inadequate to the requirements of the situation created by the European war. The conduct of some of the Republican members seems hardly more creditable to the country than that of the Democrats.

There is a popular demand for a sweeping change on both sides of the House of Representatives. That demand extends to this district. Its present representative has won the approval of the German propagandists, who have voted him their approval for his vote in Congress in favor of a surrender of the rights of Americans on the high seas. This approval he has accepted with gratitude, and he appeals to the voters of the district on his record. That challenge should not go unanswered. I believe that the people of Morris and Union counties want an American representative who will maintain the rights of Americans the world over without sacrifice or surrender.

The conditions brought about by the European war require men in public life who can comprehend those conditions in their historical setting, and who have the courage and intelligence to deal with them in a large way.

New conditions have brought with them new demands—demands that will require the highest intelligence that the best trained minds can bring to their country's service. This is true today, but it will be more than true after the war is ended and this country is brought into economic competition with the countries of Europe now at war.

I have known you for many years. I believe that your heredity and training have fitted you pre-eminently for service at this time in Congress. I know that your sympathies are neutral as between the warring nations, but that they are profoundly American.

I write to ask you to stand at the primaries in September for the Republican nomination for Congress. Very truly yours, Plainfield, N. J., June 19, 1916. NATHANIEL NILES.

Hon. Nathaniel Niles,
Madison, New Jersey.

My Dear Mr. Niles—I have given the letter from you, in behalf of yourself and others of my Republican friends in the Fifth Congressional District, very serious consideration.

I realize the great force in what you say of the Congressional situation at the present time. Certainly the proposal to surrender the rights of Americans on the sea cannot be justified. The grateful acceptance of the approval and promised support of the propagandists of a foreign nation by one who has been chosen to represent the district in Congress is, or certainly should be construed to be, equivalent to a resignation. He no longer represents this district. He represents not even the Americans of German birth and ancestry, but only the very small group of German propagandists. He misapprehends the true Republican spirit, for the Republican party is the party of progress, and does not stand for retrogression or surrender.

As you say, new conditions have brought new demands. The situation created by the European war is a challenge to the intelligence of every loyal American. The demand of the present time is for patriotism and preparedness of the broadest sort.

The need for an army, adequate at least to the requirements of the Mexican situation, is obvious.

The need for a navy, sufficient to protect the American continent from "colonization by any European power," is equally obvious.

But there are other needs, though less obvious, that are even more far-reaching.

The President, in one of his speeches, used the phrase, "Since the world is ruled by force," or one of like import. Brute force never ruled the world. The world is ruled by the force of will, the force of brains and the force of character. Even military force, without brains to control it, cannot govern the world or any appreciable part of it.

Military preparedness that does not take into account the recruiting of brains to the country's military service, will be futile. There has been a tendency on the part of our War and Navy Departments to adopt only those things that have been tried and approved in the armies and navies of other countries. England built battleships; we built battleships; England built dreadnaughts; we built dreadnaughts. England built superdreadnaughts; we followed the lead.

The time has come for the employment of "Yankee wit" and "Yankee ingenuity." If there is one thing certain, it is that if we fight English superdreadnaughts and battle cruisers with American imitations, the advantage is not ours. Or if we fight German Zeppelins with American Zeppeline, the advantage is theirs.

But the American continent defended by loyal Americans armed with the best engines of war that American brains can devise, will remain inviolate as long as we maintain the best traditions of our ancestry.

But there is a matter that lies even deeper than the mere enginery of war, or even the recruiting of the brains of the country.

Several months ago an increase in the Army of 20,000 men was authorized. Recruits were sought and 30,000 men responded. Thirty thousand young men of suitable age, ready, willing and anxious to do military service, volunteered. Of them, only 7,000, or less than one-fourth, were found physically fit for the service; 23,000, or more than three-fourths, were rejected. They were rejected and there it ended. They were not up to a high standard set by the recruiting offices, and their country had no use for them and no concern for them. That is radically wrong.

Twenty-three thousand patriotic young men were not only rebuffed, but discouraged and disheartened by the knowledge that they were physically defective, and that the fact was no concern of their country whom they sought to serve. Such treatment is not only wrong to the young men, but as a matter of military preparedness it is fundamentally wrong.

Many of these volunteers had bad teeth. The United States is concerned and should take steps to provide that her young men shall not have bad teeth.

The United States is concerned that its young men shall not have syphilis. The United States is concerned that her young men shall not be drunkards.

If we are to have an army of 250,000 men, it will be good moral, physical and political economy to recruit in temporary regiments of a second class, several thousand young men whose physical condition is imperfect, and to build up their constitutions to perfection, or to that high standard that prevails in the regular army.

If that is not the way it is done in Europe, all the better. It is the way Uncle Sam ought to respond to his boys who wish to serve him.

The demand at the present time, proclaimed by both parties, is Americanism. The way to develop patriotism is to maintain our country as the best under the sun, and by broad humanitarian, progressive government, keep the door of opportunity wide open to our children and to the strangers within our gates.

We should grapple fearlessly with the evils of disease, unemployment and poverty. For whatever concerns the welfare of the citizens of America is of concern to the Government.

I am profoundly in favor of peace. I favor every form of preparedness that makes for the betterment of living conditions of the people. For the welfare of the people should be the final aim of government. Whatever makes for the betterment of pople makes for patriotism and for internal and external peace.

In the months and years that are before us, the Republican party must go forward. Stand-pattism, which was never Republicanism, has in a large measure been weeded out. In Mr. Hughes the party has a leader with a clear mind and noble character, and, best of all, splendid courage, that prime requisite for true political leadership of the highest sort. The reunited party must take up the crying demand for social justice, for social preparedness. That is my creed and my platform, and I will give the Republican voters of the Fifth Congressional District the opportunity to approve it.

With sincere esteem, I am, very truly yours,

RICHARD BOARDMAN.

An army to be fully efficient and successful must go to the front with an adequate commissary and with complete equipment for immediate and future needs.

So with the man going on a vacation—to make it a successful vacation, he must go equipped with the right sort of undergarments, with light weight dressy suits, knockabout garments and rainproof outfittings, prepared for whatever weather that may come. Thus only can a man enjoy a vacation in the mountains, along the streams or at the ocean's edge.

—And, in weather such as we have been having this spring, it is just as well to be outfitted in this way at home!

WILSON AGAINST CONQUEST WAR

President Holds Congress Back For Present.

SEEKS ONLY OWN DEFENSE

Secretary Lansing Reassures South American Diplomats That Our Purpose Is Only to Safeguard Border and That Intervention Will Be Resorted to Only at the Last.

Washington, June 23.—War with Mexico only as the last resort after every honorable means for peace have been exhausted is the administration's reassurance to the diplomatic representatives of Latin-American nations here. They have voiced the fear of their governments that United States intervention in Mexico means the conquest of that nation by the United States.

Formal notice to this effect has been sent by Secretary of State Lansing to the representatives here of all republics of Central and South America. The text of the notice, prepared before information was received here of the clash between American and Carranzista troops at Carrizal, was made public at the state department. It reads in part as follows:

Only For Defense.

Should this situation eventuate into hostilities, which this government would deeply regret and will use every honorable effort to avoid, I take this opportunity to inform you that this government would have for its object not intervention in Mexican affairs, with all the regrettable consequences which might result from such a policy, but the defense of American territory from further invasion by bands of armed Mexicans, the protection of American citizens and property along the boundary from outrages committed by such bandits and the prevention of future depredations by force of arms against the marauders infesting this region and against a government which is encouraging and aiding them in their activities.

Hostilities, in short, would be simply a state of international law without purpose on the part of the United States other than to end the conditions which menace our national peace and the safety of our citizens.

Meantime congress is ready to declare war the moment the president asks it, but President Wilson will not do so until the very last resort to avert it honorably has been tried.

Not a Pledge.

Officials declare that the notice was not to be regarded in the light of a pledge that the United States would not intervene if forced to such an extreme by subsequent eventualities.

Orders have been sent by the war department to Major General J. Franklin Bell, commander of the western department of the army, with headquarters at San Francisco, and to Major General Thomas H. Barry, commander of the central department, with headquarters at Chicago, directing them as soon as possible to dispatch 5,000 national guardsmen to the border from each of the two districts.

Secretary Baker said orders had been issued to all mobilization commanders throughout the country to report as soon as the various militia organizations were ready to go to the border.

Japanese Involved.

New international complications are possible in the Mexican situation as a result of the official report of Commander Arthur G. Kavanaugh of the United States gunboat Annapolis that the Mexicans at Mazatlan fired without provocation on the American bluejackets in the fight on Sunday.

The first shot was fired by a Mexican customs official in uniform while the motor launch with the bluejackets aboard was 100 yards from the dock and returning toward the ship. Mexican soldiers then opened fire, and a party of Japanese joined them in riddling the launch with bullets.

The Americans returned the fire, and the Mexicans and Japanese fled in panic from the dock.

FRICK AIDS SCHOOLS.

Gives $500,000 For Education In Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, June 23.—Henry Clay Frick was announced as the donor of the $500,000 fund for the benefit of the public schools of this city at the annual meeting of the teachers who have been the recipients of scholarships from the educational fund.

The announcement was made by Judge Joseph Buffington, who said the committee had decided to name the fund the Henry Clay Frick educational commission of the city of Pittsburgh.

Several thousand teachers have been able to take courses in summer schools at the large colleges and universities of the country during the last five years as a result of Mr. Frick's gift.

PRISONER GETS $25,000.

Must Serve Term Out Despite Gift From Woman.

Trenton, N. J., June 23.—Ernest Rogers, a forgery prisoner in the Mercer county workhouse, has fallen heir to $25,000. The legacy was left him by Mrs. Martha Dobbs, whose life Rogers saved twenty-five years ago in stopping a runaway horse. Rogers also faces a five year sentence in state prison for breaking parole.

Mrs. Dobbs died in Pittsburgh twelve years ago. Her will provided that at the death of her husband Rogers was to get $25,000. Mr. Dobbs died recently in Switzerland.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

FIELDER CHIEF OF JERSEY GUARD

Governor In Uniform Inspects Brigade In Camp.

QUOTA READY FOR FRONT

General Sadler Will Have to Send Hundreds of Willing Recruits to Their Homes Unless Federal Government Rushes Tentage and Equipment Asked For to Sea Girt.

Sea Girt, June 23.—New Jersey's quota of 3,742 officers and national guardsmen in camp is fully equipped and ready to go to the border on an hour's notice. The strength of the brigade called for by President Wilson is divided as follows:

First regiment, Newark, 46 officers, 842 men.

Fourth regiment, Jersey City, 52 officers, 1,089 men.

Fifth regiment, Paterson, 43 officers, 1,029 men.

Signal corps, Jersey City, 4 officers, 72 men.

Field hospital, Elizabeth, 3 officers, 49 men.

First squadron, cavalry, Newark, 15 officers, 311 men.

Field artillery, Battery A, East Orange, 5 officers, 164 men; Battery B, Camden, 4 officers, 160 men.

Ambulance corps, Red Bank, 2 officers, 44 men.

The New Jersey troops have done their part, and their work of mobilization is complete. The rest lies with the federal government. There are in camp here more than 1,100 untrained civilians—last minute volunteers—who have no uniforms or equipment. They are waiting for the government to send both.

Adjutant General Sadler has telephoned to the war department that unless equipment was forthcoming immediately further recruiting would be halted and the awaiting "rookies" sent home. The regular guardsmen are supplied with all needs, but equipment for the recruits, called for last Monday, has not arrived, and the militia officers have been unable to learn its whereabouts.

A few hours may see the guard lead forty-four states upon which President Wilson called for troops to the Mexican border.

The inquiry by Major General Leonard A. Wood, commanding the department of the east, as to the readiness of the New Jersey organization, linked with the request of Governor Fielder that this state be included in the first forces sent to Mexico, strengthens the belief that it is only a question of hours until the Jersey troops will be under way to the scene of real activity.

New Jersey's record by getting its troops mobilized has never been equaled. Not even in the well oiled machinery of the regular army has such speed and efficiency been displayed. Had it not been for the failure of the federal government to provide supplies and equipment for the recruits there would have been no blotch on the wonderful accomplishment. Supplies were requisitioned last Monday and should have been here the following day.

There was an interesting exchange of communications between high officials of the war department and the New Jersey commanders. Afterward Governor Fielder gave out a statement that the national guard had turned the tables on the regular army and was away head of the regulars in efficiency.

Governor Fielder, wearing for the first time the uniform of the commander in chief of the New Jersey guardsmen, made an unannounced inspection of the camp. Mrs. Fielder accompanied her husband, taking a keen delight in the activities of the men. They were accompanied by Colonel Austen Colgate, senator from Essex, who was forced to abandon his gubernatorial campaign in order to respond to the call here. He is an assistant adjutant general.

BABIES IN PARADE.

Annual Event at Atlantic City Was Big Success.

Atlantic City, June 23.—With the whole country talking war and preparing for the possibility of war with Mexico, solid phalanxes of babies marching in seemingly endless lines down the Boardwalk in the annual baby parade carried messages of peace and good will to 100,000 happy spectators.

Uncle Sams and Columbias easily were the most popular types in the picturesque turnout. Popular also were tiny pairs, Red Cross nurses and internes, each in white duck, with "We Are Prepared" banners. The board of managers had enforced rigidly its rule that decorations or floats suggestive of the war abroad would not be tolerated in Atlantic City's neutrality demonstration.

Brides and grooms were numerous, some of them so small they scarcely could toddle. Some of them were enthroned in state in rolling chairs, go-carts or floats.

Tongues That Kill.

The tongues of some animals are very dangerous weapons. A lion could speedily kill a man by merely licking him with his tongue. The tongues of all the members of the cat family are covered with curious recurving spines formed of tough cartilage. In the common domestic cat these spines are very small, but are sufficiently well developed to give the tongue a feeling of roughness. In the fiercest animals, such as the lion or tiger, these spines are frequently found projecting up for an eighth of an inch or more with very sharp points or edges. While the mouth is relaxed the tongue is soft and smooth, but when the animal is excited the spines become rigid.

DUTCH ARMS BAND GIVEN BIG OVATION

Musical Organization Takes Part in Patriotic Demonstration in New York.

The Dutch Arms Band, of Trinity Reformed church, took part in a patriotic demonstration in New York last night under the auspices of Grace M. E. church, of which Rev. Dr. Reisner is the pastor. The band reached New York at 7 o'clock and took the subway to 72nd street and then marched from that point up Broadway to 104th street, leading a troop of Boy Scouts and a men's organization. Thousands of people gathered along the line of march.

The thirty men comprising the band gave a concert in a stand erected especially for the occasion, playing for an hour and a half. They reached home at 1 o'clock this morning. There were between 12,000 and 15,000 people who enjoyed the concert, it being the band's largest audience.

Co. K of the 71st Regiment, New York, hiked from its armory to 104th street and back, a distance of seven miles, and gave a drill. The company expects to leave for camp in a few days. The police and other New Yorkers complimented the band, saying that it was one of the finest they had seen and the music was the best. The band was given a cordial reception everywhere, being escorted from the subway to the point of destination by an inspector and the musicians were provided with a private car. On the way home the band played on the train. Several pictures of the organization were taken in New York.

White Hats With White Furs Make the Summer Girl Lovelier Than Ever - White Tulle, White Posies and a Wee Bit of Green Accomplish a Summer Chapeau Past Compare - Neckpieces.

"VANITY of vanities," saith the prophet; "all is vanity." Could the prophet have been seeing in some dreamy vision of the future, coming woman swathed in fur in that period of the dog-star's ascension when high temperature logically recommends raiment of the airiest?

The woman who can is buying fascinating new summer neckpieces, scarves and capes, the woman who can't—determined not to be out of the style procession—is keeping her winter furs out of storage. If one must economize on clothes, this is a very unwise proceeding, for the furs will be needed, indubitably, when Thanksgiving season comes around; while they are not absolutely indispensable now, and summer heat, humidity and glaring sunshine are not good for pelts which demands crisp cold with not too direct beams of the sun, if its rich texture and gloss are to be preserved. The summer sojourn in the dark deeps of a cold storage plant does infinite good to furs worn all winter long.

The new summer furs are irresistibly becoming and there are many occasions, even in June and July when a bit of fur about the throat is extremely grateful. With August, of course, one expects cool nights, particularly by the sea or up in the mountains when a fur neckpiece is quite as comfortable as in November—particularly since custom endorses the donning of furs in November, no matter how warm and summery the weather.

White Furs Most Pleasing Now.

Of course the white furs are the favored ones for summer wear. Their delicacy of texture and the snow white color make them most appropriate—if one may use the term—for warm weather wear. And of the white furs, ermine is the exclusive pelt. The softest, most pliable skins are used, and these are lined only with chiffon, so that the weight of neckpiece or scarf is negligible. A scarf of this sort may be wound around the shoulders as readily as so much crepe de chine, and carried over the arm during a dance, has scarcely any weight at all. A very beautiful ermine scarf for summer wear is two yards long—think of six feet of costly ermine—lined with chiffon run with tiny hand tucks. At the ends of the scarf are ermine tails in fringe effect and at its center the scarf is caught together about six inches from the fold with a bow of white silk cord. This makes a sort of burnoose hood which drapes softly at the back of the shoulders when the scarf is adjusted, long, tasseled ends of the cord falling at either side of the hood. A very dainty ermine scarf for summer evenings is pictured. This scarf is about a yard and a half long and is lined with white liberty silk and trimmed with ermine tails.

Fur-trimmed capes are exceedingly smart and are perhaps a trifle more sensible for mid-summer wear than wraps made entirely of fur. Two very charming examples have been photographed for your delectation today. The 'tween-dances cape is of light yellow broadcloth, lined with white meteor and trimmed with natural ermine. This ermine is not pure white in color, but is what is known as summer ermine—the mixed white and pale brown color of the little animal when it lives on the rocks instead of in the snows during the short arctic summer. The collar which is shown in the picture twisted around the throat is really in the form of two long ties, which hang at either side of the front unless wound around the throat as pictured here.

The second cape if for restaurant wear with a black hat. It is made of black taffeta silk, with ermine trimming, and is lined with yellow chiffon. It accompanies a stunning Virot hat of black tulle with a sweeping yellow paradise plume. Cape and hat arrived together in New York last week from the same house in Paris. Many of the milliners are supplying fur-trimmed wraps of this sort with picture hats for mid-summer wear.

White Wraps With White Hats.

With the lovely white summer hats for wear with garden party and restaurant frocks, white fur neckpieces are enchanting, and so becoming is this combination that no woman can resist it—once she has yielded to the temptation to try on a white picture hat and a white fox neckpiece in the milliner's salon she is lost! A few of the fluffy white neck-scarves are of angora, combed out straight and fine to look like white fox. These imitations look very well until they are subjected to dampness; then the fur takes on the crinkly angora look immediately. So, if you are planning to spend the summer at the seashore have a genuine white fox neckpiece, or nothing.

At a wedding, earlier this month, the bridesmaids wore hats like the rose-encircled model pictured, and the bride's gift to each maid was a summer cape-collar of ermine. These capes were merely short scarves which fastened at the front by the upper corners—a type of summer neckpiece very fashionable. There is no semblance of a fit, the upper edge of the cape standing away from the throat and the spreading front edges, leaving the chest exposed; but assuredly such a fur cape is cooler for July wear than a winter model whose first reason for being is protection from the cold. The bridesmaids who received the capes did not wear them at the wedding, but cape and hat will make a charming combination for later wear. The hats were of fine pink chip, bound at the edge with pale pink ribbon. Pink satin roses are massed in a close wreath around the crown, and pink ribbon is banded over the crown and drawn over and under the niniche brim at the back to form long streamers.

A most lovely example of the pure white hat so fashionable this season is the drooping-brimmed model by Carlier which, with its floating tulle streamers, has a bride-like suggestion. This hat is made of flexible white chip and the brim, faced with white chiffon, is weighted at front and back by clusters of white cape jasmine—or gardenia, as this flower is called in the north. White tulle is swathed around the crown, making a soft background for the waxen white flowers, and yards of the tulle stray downward to form long streamers that float about the wearer. The pale green leaves of the jasmine in hat and corsage mark the only color note in an exquisite white costume. The frock accompanying the hat is of chalk-white taffeta with a round, 1830 decolletage edged with net frills. These frills are piped at the edge with white silk, and featherbone tubing, run through the piping, distends the frills quaintly. On the skirt are nine piped featherboned frills of the net. White silk stockings and dancing slippers of white glazed kid accompany the frock. These slippers are liked better now than satin ones for dancing wear as the glazed kid clings to the supple lines of the foot and the slippers do not become marred and scuffed as a satin slipper does.

White Hats With Darker Furs.

Ermine and white fox are not the only summer furs, though they are the favorites. Mole, beaver and rose fox are shown in various cape-collars suitable for summer wear—which means collars that leave the throat more exposed than a fur collar designed for use in cold weather. Rose fox seems peculiarly appropriate for the month of roses and oddly enough much of this lovely fur is noted, these days, on board-walks by the sea and at roof-garden and other open-air restaurants. The hat with a white bow and a cluster of mauve flowers on the brim was designed for wear with a rose fox neckpiece, the bit of purplish-pink color on the hatbrim echoing most delicately the rosy lilac tone of the fur.

Some of the new mid-summer hats, lately from Paris are quaintly named—every exclusive frock, hat, wrap or negligee, now must have its name when introduced at an opening. The Watteau hat is a tip-tilted affair covered with pink rosebuds and massed with Nattier blue ribbon under the brim at the back. The Pierrot hat has two tall, peaked side-sections of black satin, and attenuated ostrich whips towering even higher. The Hottentot is of thatch-like unfinished leghorn, with a scarlet velvet streamer that falls in a long loop to the hip, and Beauty thrusts her arm through the ribbon loop. The Peace Chapeau has two milk-white doves posed against a background of gray tulle. The Flapjack is a big cart-wheel sailor of lisere straw trimmed with a band of white glazed kid. The Query has a high Directoire crown of black Milan with burnt orange ribbon tied around its top and a long, curved quill of orange and black ostrich, rising in a veritable question mark at one side. The Jockey Cap, 1830 Poke and Directoire, explain themselves by their names.

For motoring there are admirable little hats of satin. Small straw hats for the automobile are in gray or tan Milan with band and buckle made of red glazed kid.

For Vacation Knitting Needles

SOON the gossip corner of every summer hotel porch will be full of cosy groups of matrons. Tongues will fly, needles, too, and the morning hours will fly fastest of all. The unmarried girl, full of busy plans for tennis, sailing, swimming, canoeing and what not, has a secret pity and contempt for this rocking-chair brigade on the veranda; but sooner or later she will join the ranks of the matrons and join the gossip corner—and bring her knitting with her.

Mufflers and sweaters are as popular as ever for vacation knitting, but this year heavier sweaters seem to be the fad. Every other woman last summer was knitting a Shetland sweater, using medium bone needles so that the stitch was soft and loose. This year quite heavy yarn and the same needles produce a much thicker sweater in closer stitch, and the vogue seems to run toward darker colors; the sea-green, sky-blue and coral-pink sweaters of last season have been abandoned in favor of heavier coats in dark-green, navy-blue, coffee-brown and so on. There is a special weave of Germantown yarn in combination tones, brown-green, blue-black, gray-blue, and the like, which makes very handsome sweaters, especially when border bands, cuffs and worsted. These heavy sweaters fit more closely than did the loosely-knit Shetland wool ones, and they have a suggestion of the boyish athletic sweater sold at sporting goods places for a high price. Indeed such a sweater is worth a fair price; the a good deal of time is required to do the knitting. Last summer there were records of speed in the gossip corner. One woman, proud holder of the record at one hotel on Long Island, could finish a sweater, complete to belt and pockets, in four days; but of course she was knitting every minute of the day—while the plates were being changed at meals, while she was dummy at bridge, and while her daughter was dancing in the evening. She neither saw, heard or thought anything but sweater during the strenuous four days. About three or four weeks, working from two to three hours a day, should finish a sweater very comfortably, and since this is such easy work—not demanding the concentrated attention that must be given to articles in which the stitch is constantly changed—a sweater is a very delightful companion for the gossip corner.

This cat-a-cornered afghan stitch will appeal to the woman who is tired of straight-across knitting.

For a woman's sweater of average size, made of Germantown wool, cast on about sixty stitches for the back, knitting about sixty ribs before widening for the sleeve. Cast on forty-five stitches at each side for sleeves; knit twenty-two ribs. Binds off twenty stitches at the center for back of neck. Knit two ribs on shoulder. Cast on twenty stitches for front of neck (is full-busted) and knit the twenty-two ribs to complete sleeve. Bind off the forty-five stitches that make the sleeve and then continue down front until front is as long as back. The sweater is sewed up with an over-and-over stitch done with the worsted under the sleeve and down the side seam. The two fronts of course are knitted separately, and collar, pockets and cuffs are also knitted separately and sewed to the sweater. A straight strip, about forty stitches cast on, and twenty ribs in depth, will make the collar. When sewed to the neck opening it will turn back in correct shape.

The directions given above are approximate. After making one sweater you will be able to judge pretty accurately how many stitches to cast on and how many ribs to knit, whatever the size of the friend for whom you are making the coat. Baby sweaters are made in the same way, in much smaller proportion of course.

Mufflers are very easy to knit and the work goes rapidly. Take care not to get your muffler too narrow at the start; fifty inches, with Germantown wool, is a good proportion. Use rather large needles so that the stitch may be soft and rather loose; a muffler should be pliable and soft, not stiff and harsh on the neck.

Afghans for the baby are charming to knit because the colors are so dainty. A very pretty afghan is in two layers, pale pink on one side, white on the other, each separate afghan knit with Germantown on large needles, and the pink and white strips joined together around the edge with a scalloped, crocheted border. Such an afghan is newer and prettier—and much warmer—than the old-fashioned kind of pink with white stripes or border. For the woman who dotes on something new and absorbing in a knitting or crocheting stitch, the afghan pictured will be a splendid piece of summer work for the gossip corner. Instead of beginning at one end and working across and back to the opposite end one starts at a corner, continually casting on stitches until the greatest width is reached. This width is marked by an oblique line about three-quarters of the distance down one side to the upper corner diagonally opposite. Were the afghan square, this oblique line would extend from the lower corner to the one diagonally opposite; but since the afghan is oblong, one must continue to add stitches below the three-quarter point just referred to—casting off stitches at the opposite side of the afghan—until the left-hand side is completed to the corner. Then the narrowing continues on both sides until one finishes in a single stitch at the corner diagonally opposite the starting point. At the same time the dots, heavy stripes and ribs in the pattern must be accomplished; so this is truly a summer task for the expert worker.

The crocheted caps should not offer any particular difficulties to an accomplished wielder of the crochet hook. The larger cap has a very pretty trimming of roses made of colored silk and also crocheted. Bedroom slippers are always an acceptable gift, and two very dainty styles are pictured; one pair is of pink worsted with pink ribbon trimming; the other pair—sleeping boots for cold feet—of white silk. Pink rosebuds are embroidered on both these slippers, adding much to their daintiness.

PONGEE PARASOLS FOR SPORTS USE.

PARASOLS as well as gloves have become companions of the sports costume which daily seems to grow more formal and daintily picturesque, from its alluring picture hat to its equally alluring picture boots—tall buttoned affairs of washable kid or sturdier tennis shoes with strappings of colored glazed kid. Pongee parasols, ostensibly for sport use, are very practical affairs. They are large enough to lend sufficient shade; they will not fade, and in case of a summer shower may be used temporarily as an umbrella without disastrous result.

Fortunately Christmas Slippers wear out, for somebody is always knitting

EXPECT DECLARATION OF WAR AT ANY HOUR; WILSON WAITING FOR DETAILED REPORT OF PERSHING

TWO TROOPS OF U. S. CAVALRY WIPED OUT IN CARRIZAL ATTACK—SEVEN SURVIVORS GET BACK TO ARMY.

STORY NOT YET HEARD FROM A PARTICIPANT

If Gen. Gomez Was Guilty of Treachery in Trapping American Soldiers Apology of Carranza Will Not Be Accepted—Funston's Troops Are Ready for Any Order—More Aeroplanes Must Be Sent to Border for Scouting Duty.

Washington, June 24.—A declaration of war on the part of the United States now hangs over Mexico by a thread—a slender, ragged thread, warn weak by the constant atrocious acts of Carranba and his soldiers. It may break at any moment.

It is now fully established that two troops of the Tenth United States Cavalry were wiped out in the treacherous attack at Carrizal, and while official reports of the fighting have not been received by Secretary Baker, the administration is not disposed to accept excuses or apologies for this slaughter of American soldiers. Nothing but an abject apology from Carranza, followed by immediate punishment of the troops responsible, will be considered, and even that may not be accepted. No demand will be made on the Mexican government until Gen. Pershing sends an official report. So far, only the statements of a few stragglers who were not in the fighting have been received.

Seven of the survivors of the two troops have found their way back to headquarters, and it is feared that all others were killed, excepting the 22 prisoners that Gen. Trevino claims to have taken. These prisoners have been mistreated and insulted.

The latest despatches from Mexico were placed before President Wilson this morning by Secretary of State Lansing, who hurried from the State Department for a conference with the Chief Executive. They were reports from Special Agent Rodgers. Their contents were not made public but it is believed that important news is contained in the despatches on the situation regarding the American refugees who are attempting to leave the city for Vera Cruz.

After a conference between President Wilson, Secretary Lansing and Secretary Baker it was made clear that the Administration is still waiting for a full report on the Carrizal affair. Secretary Baker stated that the accounts given by the seven survivors were from men who were detailed to hold the horses during the fighting and were not in a position to give first hand information of what actually occurred. Secretary Baker stated that no military orders are to be issued as the result of the conference.

The War Department is anxiously awaiting a despatch from General Pershing giving details of the massacre at Carrizal. Nothing has come in since last night, when General Pershing telegraphed that only seven men of the two troops of cavalry ambushed by the Carranzistas had come back in safety. Secretary of War Baker refused to comment on the situation, but it is clear that peace between the United States and Mexico is now hanging by a thread. Hundreds of telegrams were received at the White House today urging immediate action. From Mexico City come reports that the de facto military authorities give full approval and sanction to the action of their troops at Carrizal. This leaves the American Government with practically no alternative but war. The Mexicans now claim they have 24 prisoners at Chihuahua. The survivors tell a story which shows that 70 or more American troopers were attacked by an overwhemingly superior force and were almost wiped out during their retreat. The number of dead is not known. It is expected that the first militia troops will be entrained for the border by tonight. Others will follow in rapid succession during the next 48 hours. It is understood that orders have been issued for the purchase of 14 additional aeroplanes. It is reported that Pershing had not a single aeroplane at his disposal during the period following Trevino's threat. For this reason he had to throw his scouting detachments farther from the American lines of communication than prudence dictated.

Fear for Relief Squad.

San Antonio, Texas, June 24.—Gen. Pershing reported today that nothing had been heard from the two squadrons of the Eleventh Cavalry which he had sent out to search for survivors. It is not clear to army men why the squadrons have not sent back couriers or returned.

In a report to General Funston today it is said that General Bell declared that General Pershing fears for the fate of the two squadrons of the Eleventh Cavalry, from which no word has been received.

General Funston accounts for the long silence of the relief squadrons by the assumption that they are scouring the plains and hills and canyons west of the Carrizal field in search of survivors, or that, having satisfied themselves that they have found all who escaped death or capture, they are returning slowly, of necessity, with the dead and wounded.

Wounded men in considerable number, General Funston hopes, may have been picked up by the squadrons. But even that is but a faint hope in the mind of the general. With the American horses running wild over the hills the troopers had little chance to escape the deluge of the enemy numbers. Wounded men, in particular, must have had infinitely small chance to hide in the scant brush of the plain and escape the Mexicans after the troopers' lines were broken and flung aside.

GERMANS WITHIN 3 MILES OF VERDUN

Fierce Fight on for Fleury Village—New Yorker is Killed.

Paris, June 24.—A violent struggle is in progress between the Germans and the French for possession of Fleury, a shell wrecked village scarcely three and one-half miles northeast of Verdun. The Germans penetrated the village on Friday but were dislodged and now says, the War Office in its communique today, a furious combat is raging in the outskirts. Great masses of Germans were hurled against the French positions time after time despite tremendous losses resulting from the concentrated artillery and machine gun fire of the French. All night fighting raged between Fumin and Chenios Woods, where the Germans were finally driven from the trenches they had won from the French forty-eight hours earlier. To the west of the Meuse the Germans are shelling the French positions.

GRADUATES URGED TO BE PATRIOTIC

Dr. W. L. Saunders, Addresses Seniors of Borough High School.

MUST SOLVE PROBLEMS

Thirty-eight Young Men and Women Receive Diplomas—Oscar Dilts Wins Yale Cup—Reception at Park Club.

Recalling the time of his own graduation in 1876, when each member of the class was imbued with "the spirit of '76," Dr. W. L. Saunders in his address to the North Plainfield High School graduates in the Plainfield High School last night, particularly urged that each one of them should receive just such an impression under existing conditions, inasmuch as they are receiving their diplomas under the most extraordinary circumstances in international history, and at a time when the whole world is at war and at a time when even this country is on the brink of a conflict. "Present events must of a necessity instill in each mind thoughts that must prove helpful in the future in avoiding such a disaster as that threatening the country at present, and in solving such problems of national significance as confront the country at this time," said Dr. Saunders. "These problems are not impossible of accomplishment if each person would think beyond himself and cultivate a wholesome civic pride, go to meetings, attend ward and city sessions and take an active interest in public affairs.

"I believe that the one weakness of the United States and that which has resulted in our getting into this trouble is that we have been too careless in preparing ourselves to resist aggression," said Mr. Saunders. "If the people of the country had taken an interest in preparing themselves," the speaker said, "no ignorant peon of Mexico would ever dare to attack America." Concluding his address to them, Mr. Saunders appealed to each graduate to take a civic pride and interest in the affairs of his community and country, not in a perfunctory manner, but in a manner that will help to solve the problems that will come up for solution. A peace loving country like America should have the power to arm forces sufficient to enforce peace and should advocate peace by its own example. In beginning their life work at the conclusion of their school days he urged them to build high, that they have that knowledge that does things and thinks with imaginative skill above the ordinary things that lie before them. To cultivate a spirit of honesty and character in the world so that the public in their respective communities will look upon each as a credit to humanity itself.

The large auditorium where the exercises took place last night was filled to its capacity with relatives and friends of the graduates. This year's class numbered thirty-eight students, the largest yet graduated from the borough High School. In presenting the diplomas to the young men and young women, Dr. Justus H. Cooley announced that eighteen of this number would enter high institutions of learning and that ten members of the class had attained the enviable percentage of over ninety during their four-year course. Miss Marion Woolley, the valedictorian of the class, had received the highest percentage during her High School course, that of ninety-five plus. The following graduates received diplomas: LeRoy Adams, Sherman Chandler, John Dawe, Oscar Dilts, Harry Kirch, Martin McDonough, Ernest Pruden, Lawrence Robinson, Clarence Roddy, Alfred Seidel, Warren Townley, Charles Roll, the Misses Marion Avery, Marion Bartels, Marjorie Burtis, Marielle Dunham, Margaret Ewart, Ethel Hall, Letha Hoagland, May Hoagland, Carol Hughes, Lucy Hughes, Bertha Keller, Magdalen Layton, Dorothy Martin, Mary O'Connor, Amelia Brizzie, Emilie Pleydell, Elizabeth Schroeder, Louise Seader, Katherine Sill, Laura Smith, Edna Stewart, Grace Townley, Naomi Wisch, Marion Woolley and Helen Yates.

During the program the annual presentation of the Yale cup was made to the young man of the graduating class who stood highest in his class in athletics and scholarship. The award was made by former Mayor Percy H. Stewart, of Plainfield, and the cup was given to Oscar Dilts, one of the most popular young men in the school.

The program of the exercises in the High School was as follows:

Invocation, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey; chorus, (a) Happy Days, Anton Strilezski, (a) My Dream, Emilie Waldteufel, High School Glee Club; salutatory address, Miranda, Carol Hughes; selection, orchestra; essay, Shakespeare's Heroines, Lucy Hughes; chorus, (a) Good Night, Good Night, Beloved, Ciro Pinsuti, (b) Venetian Summer Night, Moritz Moszkowski, High School Glee Club; valedictory essay, Shakespeare, the Great Creator of Tragedy, Marion Woolley; awarding of diplomas, Dr. Jutus H. NO BORDER ORDERS FOR LOCAL CAVALRY BEFORE THE MIDDLE OR LAST PART OF NEXT WEEK

TROOP D AND OTHER GUARDSMEN "ON EDGE" FOR STRIKE AT CARRANZA BUT RUMORED SUMMONS IS WITHOUT FOUNDATION.

MAJOR CORBUSIER MUSTERED INTO SERVICE

Plainfield Physician Now a Full Fledged Government Examiner—Troops in Fine Physical Shape—Local Men at Brigade Headquarters Assignments—Insurance Agents Pester Cavalrymen.

State Mobilization Camp, Sea Girt, Saturday Afternoon—Definite assurance that Troop D, First Squadron, New Jersey Cavalry, made up largely of Plainfield men, would not be called to the border before the middle of next week was received today. Rumor had it yesterday and this morning that plans were underway to send a detachment of cavalry, including Troop D, to the aid of Pershing's forces at once, but a Daily Press reporter at the camp here this morning learned on responsible authority that no such instructions would be issued to Captain Borden's men and that if any did come, it would be impossible to send the troop away from here before the middle of the week.

Hundreds of visitors are expected here tomorrow, the rumored announcement that preparations are being made to quit the camp having caused many relatives and friends to arrange hasty trips. Nearly every man in the camp is anticipating a visit from relatives and the officers realize that they have a big day before them tomorrow.

Troop D has been honored with the assignment for detail at the brigade headquarters the following having been on duty since yesterday: Last night, Trooper Edward W. Cook and Trooper D. Ogden Rogers; this morning, Troper DeWitt C. Ivins and Trooper J. Rex Shoemaker; this afternoon, Troopers Cady and Rogers. Troopers Harris D. Rush, Frederick Stevenson, Joseph N. VanDeventer and Frederick W. Goddard have also received assignments for detail.

Rookies in Troop D were put through their first drill on horseback this morning. All of the men took to the saddle well and made an excellent appearance. First Sergeant Brown Rolston took the older men of the troop for a practice march to the parade grounds and back this morning, covering a two mile strip in fine shape.

Every one of the Plainfield men is enjoying good health and all are in the best of spirits this morning. They were being pestered to death by insurance agents who have been flocking to the camp in large numbers ever since it opened. Several put in appearance this morning and cornered a number of the Plainfielders.

The Field Hospital Corps was among the four units of Jersey militiamen mustered into Federal service yesterday afternoon, Dr. Harold D. Corbusier, of Plainfield, major of the corps, being one of the twenty-three physicians who will conduct government medical tests for the troops and infantry, preparatory to mustering these detachments into Federal service.

The medical officers were given a physical examination by Capt. Gateman of the United States Medical Corps, and then were mustered in by Colonel Styer, assisted by Captain Gouverneur Packer and Lieutenant Charles B. Elliott, both of the regular service.

The troops are getting the hang of field life. They are "getting their feet under them," and even the recruits, many of whom are former service men, but some of whom are green youngsters, are beginning to perk up. Although they have been short on blankets and have had to stay in crowded quarters and are still without uniform or equipment, these boys are making a brave front, drilling in their civilian clothes and "keeping their heads up and mouths closed," as the unwritten law of the field calls for. Of course, they have been given their first initiation, such as being sent to the adjutant general for ten yards of skirmish line or sent to wind the wind clock.

STILL RECRUITING FOR THE CAVALRY

Local Headquarters Will Probably Be Opened Tomorrow All Day.

Lieut. Daniel Runkle, Corporal Charles D. Wardlaw and Trooper Donald C. Fullerton are still being kept at the Putnam avenue headquarters of Troop D endeavoring to enlist new recruits. These three men are anxious to join the other troopers at Sea Girt and although the number is increasing each day there is still room for several new men.

The Newark recruiting headquarters was this morning instructed to remain open tomorrow and the Plainfield officers are expecting a like order this afternoon. Since the troop left they have signed more than a dozen guardsmen, all of whom with the exception of N. A. Kopia, N. A. Black and E. J. Kleiner have left for the mobilization camp. The following left this morning for Sea Girt: J. J. A. Winzenreid, John James Noonan, of Bayonne; R. O. Currier, J. B. Hoffman and R. W. Bird.

The recruiting officers are beseiged day and night by relatives and friends of troopers now at the camp for "inside" information concerning the possible moves of the troops. When informed by a Daily Press reporter this afternoon that there would be no order to push on to the border before the middle of next week the recruiting officers were elated. They are anxious to be with their companions when the call comes and it now looks as though their business here would not be finished up before Monday morning.

That Fourth of July Trip.

Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The whole week end you've planned it every second—but have you decided just the things you will wear?

A Gay Sweater—you couldn't do without that. Either the silk or woolen ones add dash to any dress—shimmery jerseys are alluring over simple dresses. Then if you're off to the Beach—Bathing Things. Many of the serviceable suits are of mohair and silk poplin in simple slipon styles—gay ones have blazer stripes in all sorts of color combinations.

There are caps of every shape—some new rubber ones with butterflies on them—others plain which don't look so at all—if the striking satin rims (for shade) are worn with them. Really there are several things you must have and more that you would like awfully—but—vacation and all its expenses—and clothes too—

The Way to Solve This Is to Visit Hearn's, West 14th St., New York.

You are certain to find the things you need. The rush of this economy sale hasn't depleted our stock—we are always adding new goods—but remember this is the very last week of our Great June Sale.

PLEASING CLASS DAY EXERCISES

Graduates of St. Mary's Parochial School Enjoy Annual Affair.

PRIZE AWARDS MADE

Valedictory Addresses Given by Misses Catherine Lynch and Norena Dunny—Father B. M. Bogan Makes Address to School.

In St. Mary's School Hall last evening, the annual Class Day exercises of the graduating classes were held, a large assemblage of parents and friends enjoying the unusually appropriate and interesting program. The graduates of the Grammar School and Commercial were assembled on the stage, which was beautifully decorated with climbing roses, the color scheme being blue and white, the class colors.

The opening chorus, "Summer Flowers," sung by the members of both classes, was well rendered and was followed by an interesting recitation by Miss Catherine Brennan, entitled "Sandalphon." Margaret Disken gave a piano selection and the valedictory address followed. This farewell to Father Bogan, the Sisters and classmates, was given by Miss Catherine Lynch, and brought to the minds of the many Alumni present their graduating days. The chorus, "St. Mary's Bell," brought to a conclusion the Grammar School portion of the program, and a piano selection by Miss Marie Brandt ushered in the farewell to the Commercial Class. The class prophecy, optimistic as all class prophecies are, was given by Miss Norah Regan and the Class Will was read by Edward McEvoy. The valedictory address was delivered by Miss Norena Dunny and piano selections by Robert Reynold, Margaret McCarthy, Mary McCauley and Nora Regan, the last three composing a trio, preceded an address of farewell by Father Bogan. In this address the pastor emphasized the fact that the graduates were not going to depart from the school never to return, but would return to their Alma Mater very frequently and would always receive a warm welcome. Father Bogan also praised Washingtonian Americanism and exhorted the graduates to be ever loyal to their country. The fact that graduates of the eighth grade of St. Mary's are admitted to Plainfield High School without examination testifies to the faith held by State educational authorities in the ability of the Sisters to impart to those under their charge just as good an education as can be obtained in public or private schools. Father Bogan concluded his address by stating that he would not say farewell, because he hoped and believed that those who graduate tomorrow evening will always be glad to return to the scene of their schooldays—the best days they will ever have. Following this address, the honors were bestowed on the graduates. Prizes for creditable work during the past year were awarded to Catherine O'Connor and Nora Regan, of the Commercial, and Mary Petrucione and George Ward, of the eighth grade. Gold medals will be awarded tomorrow evening, when the Commencement exercises will be held in the church. A song, "Graduates' Farewell," concluded the exercises.

In the afternoon the closing exercises of the school were held and various prizes for efficient work done during the past year were awarded. SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MEN ASK AID FOR DEFENDERS OF VERDUN

Prominent Bankers, Diplomatist and Educator Appeal for Funds in the Name of the Suffering Soldiers of France--

The National Allied Relief Committee, co-operating with the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, is sending out what perhaps will be the most broadcast appeal yet issued on behalf of the war sufferers of Europe.

This appeal is for funds for the relief of the soldiers of France wounded in the fighting around Verdun.

What lends additional interest to this appeal is the fact that it is signed by six of the most prominent men in America: Those who signed it are: August Belmont of the banking firm bearing his name; Hon. Jos. H. Choate, Ex-Ambassador to England; Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank; Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, and Henry L. Higginson of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Company, Boston.

It is anticipated that the contributions received from this wide-spread appeal will be devoted also to relief work among a large number of wounded resulting from the greatly increased activities of the contending armies.

The appeal is reproduced herewith.

GUARD DRAFT BILL PASSED BY CONGRESS

House Votes Really War Declaration.

ALL SUPPORT WILSON

Million Voted For Families of Guardsmen.

PRESIDENT CAN USE MILITIA

Partisanship Disappears In Vote After Brief Debate When Military Committee Head Tells Members How Serious Mexican Situation Is—Guard Now Becomes Real Federal Body.

Washington, June 24.—The United States is practically at war with Mexico by the vote of the house in adopting practically unanimously the joint resolution which says that in the opinion of congress an emergency exists which demands the use by the president of the national guard and authorizes him to draft into the service of the United States the state militia. The vote was 332 to 2.

The same resolution appropriates $1,000,000 for the support of dependent families of national guard members who have been called out because of the Mexican crisis.

Representatives London of New York, a Socialist, and Huddleston of Alabama, a Democrat, were the only members voting against the resolution on the roll call. Mr. Huddleston is the successor in the house of the former majority leader, Oscar W. Underwood of the Birmingham district.

Calls It Conscription.

Mr. Huddleston asserted that the resolution amounted to conscription and drafted for a possible service of three years on foreign soil national guardsmen who had enlisted for service within the United States.

A stirring debate of three hours preceded the adoption of the resolution, which was changed so that congress and not the president expresses the opinion that the present emergency demands the use of troops auxiliary to the regular army.

Republicans generally criticised the lack of information regarding the Mexican situation. They suggested that the president should more fully inform congress of conditions; but, following a plea by Mr. Mann, the minority leader, the vote was nonpartisan and unanimous on the Republican side.

The administration resolution, introduced by Representative James Hay of Virginia, chairman of the military committee, provided that "whenever in the opinion of the president an emergency exists" the national guard should be drafted into service.

In offering the resolution Mr. Hay after consultation with Secretary Baker proposed an amendment changing the resolution to read that "in the opinion of the congress of the United States an emergency now exists," etc.

It was contended frequently during the debate that a resolution so worded was practically a declaration of war against Mexico. Mr. Hay said it was not so intended, but that he was authorized to inform the house that the president regarded "the emergency as existing."

Ask Information.

At the outset Representative Mann said he was not inclined to oppose the resolution, but he desired to remind the house of the gravity of the step about to be taken.

"The resolution declares that congress believes an emergency exists which requires the use of the national guard," said Mr. Mann. "We should know that the emergency exists before we act. I am not insisting that the president shall inform us by message of the situation, but I do think we are entitled to information under the circumstances."

Representative Butler, Republican, asserted that congress had full information from President McKinley when it voted $50,000,000 at the outbreak of the Spanish war.

After this point had been emphasized by other speakers Chairman Hay informed the house that he had conferred with Secretary Baker. He added:

"I am authorized and expected to say to the house that the executive believes this emergency does exist at this time and that the adoption of this resolution is absolutely necessary."

"We are glad to have that statement," said Mr. Mann, who subsequently reminded the house that when trouble with Spain was imminent the question was considered without partisanship and he hoped no vote would be cast against the Hay resolution.

Although there was no debate in actual opposition to the action about to be taken, the effect of the decision was that congress was assuming responsibility for a virtual declaration of war.

To Support Families.

General applause greeted the reading of Mr. Hay's amendmen to appropriate $1,000,000 for the support of the dependent families of enlisted men of the national guard during the period of their service. Mr. Hay first planned an appropriation of $500,000 in the army appropriation bill, but this figure was changed to $1,000,000, and a decision was reached to include it in the emergency draft resolution. The allowance for each dependent family is not to exceed $50 a month, disbursements to be made by the secretary of war.

Dependent fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers (the latter to be under fourteen years of age) are included in the meaning of the word family.

Representative Gardner of Massachusetts offered an amendment to include the families of enlisted men of the regular army. Mr. Hay promptly made a point of order against this, and it was conceded by Mr. Gardner.

"But this is exactly what is the matter with the regular army," said Mr. Gardner. "It is constantly the object of discrimination of this sort, and no wonder enlistments are slow. This is rank discrimination in favor of the national guard. The regular army should be included. Its men will do the fighting in Mexico. The guardsmen will go down to summer training camps and guard the lines of communication. That is about all. The guard will be safe on the border, but the regulars will have to fight."

Representative Hay hotly retorted that this statement was in error. "The national guard members are just as likely to fight as the regular soldiers," said Mr. Hay, "and they are ready to fight. Their case is different. A man enters the regular army as a business or profession. The national guardsmen have been called from the civil pursuits and are volunteers in the military service. Their families occupy a different status."

GERMANS DRIVE NEARER VERDUN

Within Three Miles From Center of Fortress.

London, June 24.—With tremendous blows the German wedge at Verdun has been driven further, until its point was but three miles from the heart of the fortress.

Before one of the most violent assaults since the attack began four months ago, the Germans carried the French first line trenches between hills 320 and 321, east of the Meuse, captured the fort at Thiamont and penetrated to the village of Fleury. A French counter attack drove them out of the latter places.

Coincident with this assault, delivered over a front of more than three miles, the artillery bombardments of Hill 304 and Le Mort Homme, west of the Meuse, were renewed with fresh violence. In the Champagne also three assaults followed intense shellings, but broke down before the French curtain of fire.

On the eastern front the Russian left or southern wing continued to sweep on in Bukowina, but was halted on the center and right by German counter attacks.

The Italian offensive drove the Austrians back on the Aisago plateau. In Asia the Turks announce a victory over a Russian detachment.

RECALLS GENERAL APPLETON

Veteran of Seventh Regiment to Command Home Guard.

New York, June 24.—Brevet Major General Daniel Appleton, for many years commander of the famous Seventh regiment, but now on reserve, has returned to the service. General O'Ryan announced that General Appleton would command the reserve brigade. Under the law 10,000 men must be left in this state when the militia is called out for purposes of home defense.

The home unit will be under General Appleton. Its personnel is not yet decided, but it will probably be made up of the three regiments called for by President Wilson and the depot units being formed for home defense in each state armory.

Lock Cashier In Safe.

Wytheville, Va., June 24.—The Bank of Crocketts at Crocketts, seven miles west of Wytheville, was robbed by two men of $4,400 in currency. The cashier and a patron of the bank were forced into the vaults.

RICE AND OLD SHOES

Roses and moonlight are supposed to be June's most glorious products. But what poet shall sing of Rice and Old Shoes, without which June is merely an ordinary summer month?

We are doing the largest business of our history in outfitting bridegrooms and their attendants—either because marriages are becoming more fashionable or because our stock has never been so magnificent as it is now.

We incline toward the latter belief. We shall be glad to be of service to you with the proper "things" for the occasion or in advice as to what is correct for the big event.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendations.

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No. 1, Plainfield, says: "I had such distressing pain in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventative of any serious trouble."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wahl had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Protect the Hair and Skin in Hot Weather

The temptation to neglect the hair and skin during the summer season seems to be greater than at any other time. Apparently the theory is that the sun and air will offset any ill effects brought about by continuous sea bathing, boating, motoring and other sports.

Remove Sea Water.

A certain quantity of sun and of sea water will not seriously mar the hair or the complexion. Nevertheless it is a mistake not to rinse the hair and to give strict attention to the skin after the daily emersion.

Once a week is sufficient for the soaking of hair and scalp with sea water. Ordinarily the hair should be very carefully rinsed and the scalp rubbed with some reputable hair tonic. If the bathing cap is regularly worn there is less after-trouble with the hair.

Constant exposure to the sun is not to be encouraged. It is bad for both hair and the complexion. Fortunately the sport hats for the summer are delightfully airy affairs that not only add to the picturesque ensemble of the costume, but supply enough ventilation through their open meshes to keep the hair in fairly good condition.

Practical Veils.

It is recommended that a good cold cream be rubbed into the face every night following a day in the open. This may be washed off with a soft cloth and cold water. On the following morning first tepid water and then cold water should precede a sparing application of some good powder.

Women are paying more attention to the highly important matter of hair and face protection during the hottest period of the year. This fact is proven by the new veils which are specially designed, both as regards mesh and color, for the purpose of adding an attractive feature to the wardrobe, which partly disguises its practical mission.

To Pack a Hat

Packing a hat for travel is an art unless one owns a well made hat box built to withstand rough usage.

In packing a hat in the regular trunk or ordinary box care should be taken that the brim edges are not curled up and that the crown is filled with soft paper to form a substantial resistance against hard knocks and continued pressure to which one's luggage is subject during the vacation season.

It is easier to pack fine straws and soft felts than those of satin or coarse straws. Of course if the crowns or brims are cracked nothing can be done to restore them to their pristine beauty. If, however, there are mere dents in the hats these will sometimes respond to the application of a damp cloth and a hot iron.

After all the best way—after owning a real hat box—is to provide one's self with large paper bags into which the extra chapeaux may be put and carried along by the traveller herself.

In Europe one does not object to the carrying of the immense hat boxes, particularly if they bear the insignia of some famous milliner; but in this country there seems something too conspicuous and almost ostentatious in thus burdening one's self with great boxes that serve as much to advertise the maker as the owner.

Removing Spots

When one starts to attempt to remove spots from delicate fabrics there is doubt whether an improvement will be the result. The fault is not with the cleansing fluid, or the intention of the cleanser, but the fabrics are an unknown matter until experience has shown what may or may not be done with them.

Certain of the voiles, crepes and silks of delicate colors are susceptible of being cleaned with gasoline or other well-known fluids. Frequently the objectionable grease spot is removed, but its erstwhile presence is perpetuated in the ring which marks the limit to which the cleaning fluid has spread.

One way to eliminate this danger is to place a good-sized piece of white blotting paper directly under the spot. Both paper and fabric are then placed over a folded Turkish towel or several thicknesses of linen and the cleaning fluid applied with a thick piece of cotton batting.

Distinctive Colors for Girls and Boys

Some confusion exists in the minds of parents, lingerie designers and the exploiters of infants' layettes regarding the distinctive color to be used for a baby girl and baby boy.

Blue is the color for girls, and pink for boys. The color designation was decided by Paris. As everyone knows, France is a Catholic country, and blue and white are worn by the girls up to the time of their twelfth year, those being the colors of the Virgin.

All baby girls have their garments trimmed with blue, and the layettes prepared by prospective mothers, when they wish daughters, are blue trimmed.

Covered Clothes Hanger

It is a good idea to have the dress and coat hangers which are to support the summer clothes in out-of-town wardrobes covered with some sort of protective wadding that will prevent any chance of rust coming in contact with a frock or suit.

Sometimes the latter are hung up while they are moist from perspiration or from mist. If the hanger is wound about with strips of cheesecloth, ribbon or other likely fabrics both hanger and dress have their lease of life increased thereby.

Semi-Annual Silk Packet Sale

Offering Savings of $26,684 on 37,226 Yards of Wanamaker Silks

For the information of old and new customers of the Silk Rotunda, it is well to recall the reason for our semi-annual Silk Packet Sale.

Regardless of silk market conditions this sale is presented regularly in order to eliminate all odds and ends of silks which have accumulated.

Five years of packet sales have proved their worth as a Wanamaker institution for the customers' benefit.

Facts and Figures of the Sale

78 per cent. up silk prices have gone in the wholesale market during the last six or seven months.

34 per cent. down is the average that silk prices have dropped from the old regular rates in this Packet Sale. In individual cases the savings sometimes amount to two, three and four times the price that is paid—a $15 silk at $2.50 yard, a $1 silk at 38c yard, and so on.

There are 13,329 packets—all open—we sell no "pigs in a poke." They contain lengths of silks for everything from a bit of fancy work to a ball gown.

Silk Packets
38c to $1 Yard
At least 5,000 yards of the Packet Silks are specially marked at these low prices.

185 tables are filled with these packets, but the focusing point will be the Silk Rotunda and adjacent aisles on the Main floor, Old Building. Wherever there is a sign, "Packet Sale," it is worth stopping a minute to investigate.

Almost every silk that has been in our silk stocks during the past six months is represented in this Packet Sale. Black silks, white silks, colored silks, evening silks, day silks, sport silks. Silks for men's shirts and women's blouses, for children's coats and women's hats, for linings and underclothes, for dresses and petticoats, even for suits.

Among the Thousands of Silk Packets Are Quantities of Taffeta in All Colors

1916 BUILDING SHOWING UP BIG

Passing of $50,000 Factory Permit Makes Total of $485,220 Since January.

PROSPECTS ARE GOOD

Numerous Plans Being Figured and Other Jobs in Contemplation—Valuations for June Up-to-date Are Now $126,376.

The passing this week by Inspector Doane of the complete plans for the American Motor Company's new plant on West Front street and the granting of the necessary permits makes it plain that 1916 will be a banner year in local building operations. The total estimated value of new work during 1915 was approximately $600,000 and the valuations for 1916 with six months not yet completed are already $485,220. If numerous jobs now under way on paper or being talked of reach the contracting climax, there is strong probability that 1916 will show building figures of close to $1,000,000.

According to the permit as granted by Inspector T. O. Doane, the cost of the American Motor Plant will be $50,000 divided between three structures. The most important of these is an assembling building which is to measure 60 by 200 feet, one story in height, and costing $40,000. Beside this there will be an administration building measuring 24 by 30 and two stories in height. The cost of this will be $7,000. The daughting department will be housed in one part of the administration structure. The third building described in the plans will be a power house measuring 30 by 50 and costing $3,600. Concrete, brick and steel will be the materials used and up to date methods will be adopted to make everything strictly fireproof. Lee Manning has the general contract for all the work. John E. Dunn, who sold the ground to the company, will exercise general supervision of the construction, and is now awarding the other contracts. The three structures described above are to be the forerunner of other buildings planned by the company to be erected some time after September first. When these are completed it will enable the concern to do all its own work in the manufacture of American cars, beginning with the raw material and ending up with the finished vehicle ready for the purchaser.

In addition to the permit for the factory, three others were passed by Inspector Doane this week. The total estimated valuation of the four is $62,200, making a total for the month to the present time of $126,376, one of the best showings of any June on record. The other three permits were granted as follows:

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., erection of frame residence at 600 East Front street at a cost of $11,000. It will be two and a half stories in height and will measure 35 by 30. A full description of this structure together with all contractors on the job was given on this page of the Daily Press two weeks ago.

Michael Dellipaota, 768 St. Mary avenue, alteration of a two story frame building, at that address at a cost of $400. Joseph Indaco is the contractor.

W. F. Austin, 715 Ravine road, alteration of two story building at that address at a cost of $800.

WYMAN AND SON BUSY ON SEVERAL CONTRACTS

John N. Wyman & Son, who have been awarded the carpentering contract for the Cochran residence on Prospect avenue, have just completed the erection of a handsome garage for C. L. Wilson at 90 Myrtle avenue, the borough. It measures twenty-four by thirty-six feet and presents an attractive exterior appearance. The building is of frame construction and costs about $800.

Wyman & Son also have the contract for the new residence to be erected on Kensington avenue for H. A. Robinson at a cost of about $12,000 and also the contract for the building of a new porch and vestibule to the T. S. Hunn residence on Prospect avenue.

EXCELLENT PROGRESS ON TWO BIG JOBS

New Postoffice and State Trust Co. Building Beginning to Assume Proportions.

Although the weather has not been any too favorable, the contractors on two big local jobs have been making rapid progress the past week. One of these is the State Trust Company building at Park and North avenues, the walls of which are now close to the second floor heighth while the other is the new postoffice on Watchung avenue. The latter building is up to the eaves and will shortly be ready for the roof. A number of the big pillars at the front entrance have been placed in position since Monday, while the front is now in such shape that Plainfielders can realize more than ever what an imposing structure the building will be. The time of completion cannot be determined at this time but the foreman in charge believes the work will be rushed from now on without any of the vexing delays that have occurred during the early stages of the construction.

The State Trust Company building has been going ahead in a manner as to please both the company officials and the firm of Thomas J. Steen & Company, of New York, which has the contract. The force of men now employed is the largest than at any time since the work was commenced and there is no doubt but what the building will be absolutely ready on the contract time limit of September 1. A few delays have been occasioned by the non-arrival of stone and iron materials although the increased force has off-set this. Massive columns will also grace the front of the State Trust building and these are now being placed in position. What has been done up to the present time is about half of what remains to be completed but as in the case of the postoffice job those who look at the job can get a good idea of how attractive and ornate the new structure will be. It can readily be noticed by passengers on the Jersey Central Railroad train and will stand as an example of the excellent architecture in some of Plainfield's business houses.

IN THE SUBURBS

Carey Carroll and family, of Dunellen, who have been living for some little time in the dwelling house on the Gabrielle & Schall factory property, have moved into the house on Edwards avenue occupied by Adam Leyh.

The contract for erecting another new house for Dr. Thomas H. Platt on Madison avenue, Dunellen, has been awarded to the Apgar Construction Company.

Another sale of local real estate was concluded this week when the new house just completed by Contractor Alberne H. Burdick, of Dunellen, on Washington avenue, near Walnut street, that place, was sold to Mrs. Eliza Harriman, of Plainfield. Mr. and Mrs. Harriman will take possession of their new home about July 1. The house is the white stucco one which has been much admired since its completion.

THE BROAD FRONT HOUSE

DESIGNED BY CHAS S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

A BROAD frontage is always to be preferred where the size of ground will admit of it. The house we are illustrating has a frontage of 37 ft. 6 in., exclusive of the sun parlor on the right, which is 10 ft., and the depth of the main part is 26 ft. There is a liberality of look and an inviting appearance that cannot be had with the narrow front.

This is not an expensive house but it has good-sized rooms a central hall and stairway typical of the Old Colonial, with the living room on the right 14 ft. by 24 ft. and the dining room 14 ft. by 13 ft. on the left. The kitchen is in the rear of dining room, 14 ft. by 11 ft. 6 in. The entrance is in the center and recessed with a projected portico roof covering and supported on large timber brackets. The windows are grouped and a projected bay or oriel window is shown on the front of living room and extended over these front windows is an overhanging roof or canopy. The house is frame construction with cement stucco up to the top of first story windows and wide shingles above, or the whole surface may be finished in stucco. The roof is low-pitched, shingled and stained. The outside trimmings painted white and the shingles stained green.

The living room is well arranged for light and wall space and the central projected chimney with its broad fireplace completes a very beautiful room. At the right is a wide French window, opening into the sun parlor. This plan is best suited to a west front. The first story is 9 ft. and the second story 8 ft. 6 in. There is a good full basement complete in its appointments. The second story has three large bedrooms, a sleeping porch, bathroom, sewing room, and ample clothes closets. The estimated cost, exclusive of heating and plumbing, is $4,500 to $5,500. The floors throughout are hardwood and the finish of first story oak, the second story pine in white enamel. There are no rooms finished in the attic, but there is ample space if desired.

Whether property in Dunellen is in demand or not may be ascertained by just looking around the borough and finding out how many houses are to rent there. During the past two weeks our several real estate operators have had numerous inquiries in regard to rentable properties, but there has been very little encouragement that they could give their prospective clients. And this in spite of the drawback supposed to be caused by the process of sewerage construction.

REDMOND WARNS HIS PARTY

Threatens to Resign if Lloyd George Plan Is Not Accepted.

London, June 24.—A conference of Ulster Nationalists, attended by 1,000 delegates and presided over by John Redmond, the Irish leader, considered the proposal of David Lloyd George for home rule for all of Ireland except six counties of Ulster.

The delegates were from Ulster counties, and the bishops of these counties also attended. John Redmond threatened that if the conference did not accept the proposal to exclude six Ulster counties he would resign as leader of the Nationalists. This statement resulted in the winning over of many of the delegates who were previously opposed to excluding any part of Ireland from the benefits of home rule.

THE VIRGIN BIRTH OF OUR LORD.

We read frequently in the newspapers these days of the sensation that is caused in Presbyterian circles whenever graduates of Union Theological Seminary come before the New York Presbytery for examination for license to preach. The sensation is caused by their denial of many of the fundamental doctrines of the Gospel, and by the fact that the Presbytery either openly approves of their unbelief, or connives at it by admitting them to preach. Among the miracles which they claim to be unable to accept, one finds invariably the Virgin Birth of our Lord. Those who defend the Union Seminary and its graduates say that it is of small consequence whether or not we believe that Christ was born of a virgin by the power of the Holy Spirit, as recorded in the first chapters of Matthew and Luke, provided we love Him and seek to serve Him. But a careful consideration of this doctrine will show the transcendent importance of it, and the pernicious shallowness of those who seek to deny it.

Did natural generation ever produce a sinless human being? Let history and human experience answer. Christ's unique sinlessness can be accounted for only by a miracle in His origin which prevented the inheritance of evil. If there was no miracle in Christ's birth setting aside the law of heredity whereby sin is transmitted, then He inherited sin and was a sinner, and was consequently not a Saviour. It is conceivable that He could have been born sinless without a virgin birth, conceivable that He could have had a sinless origin from two parents instead of only one; but a sinless birth from both father and mother would have been as truly a miracle as a sinless birth from mother alone. If a sinless life, a sinlesss nature is conceded to Him, a sinless birth must be allowed. If His life was lived without sin, it was begun without sin; a miraculous birth cannot be denied.

I am assuming here that it is believed that our Lord was without sin. If one is not prepared to admit this, the discussion with him closes at once; the discussion, not only of the Virgin Birth, but of Christianity itself. For if Jesus of Nazareth was a sinning man, He was not the Saviour. One cannot be too dogmatic in regard to this. No matter how good and pure Jesus Christ may have been, if He was a sinner, He was Himself in need of a Saviour. If He was stained with the blot of sin, He was Himself in need of cleansing. If He was burdened with a sense of guilt, He was Himself in direst need of pardoning grace. If He was only a weak, frail man struggling upward toward lofty heights, and not One who had the sinless and eternal nature of God upon Him, stooping downward to redeem the fallen, He could not lift up poor, prostrate humanity, of which He was Himself a struggling part, beyond the heights to which He had Himself attained in His more or less successful effort to reach a God who was, in the very nature of the case, infinitely beyond Him.

The moment the concession is made that, whatever else our Lord may or may not have been, He was at least perfect in thought, word and deed, Christians see the door opened to all they are contending for. They have the admission of the possibility of miracle. To say that Christ was sinless is to say that miracle is possible, for a man without sin in this sinning world is a miracle. For a man to come forth alone from the grave of death is not more mighty a miracle than for a man to come forth sinless from the body of a sinner. Admit sinlessness—you admit miracle. The region of the miraculous has been entered. You have passed from naturalism to supernaturalism. You have separated the Sinless One from all mankind; you have marked Him out and designated Him as the Great Exception. He is not the product of human development, nor the resultant of natural heredity, nor the climax of fallen humanity. He is an emphatic denial of heredity, a shining contrast to humanity, and a glorious protest against human evolution. He is all this in so far as His sinlessness is concerned. A sinless being is a miracle. Christ being the only sinless man who ever trod the earth, He was the Great Exception; He was the Great Miracle.

It may be objected that this is only a moral miracle. But a miracle in the realm of the moral is as much a miracle as one in the realm of the physical, for nature's laws operate in both spheres with equal certainty and infallibility. To set aside a moral law seems as truly contrary to nature as to set aside a physical law. For the law of heredity to cease to operate in a human birth is as great a miracle as for the law of gravitation to cease to operate in the case of a falling body. A miracle is a miracle wherever you find it. The birth of the sinless Christ from His sinning mother set aside the law of heredity as truly as the ascension of the Risen Christ from Mt. Olivet set aside the law of gravitation. "A sinless Christ is as great a mircle as a Christ who can walk on the water," says A. B. Bruce.

Thus the birth of our Lord, being a sinless birth, was a miraculous birth. Sin is transmitted through the body as well as through the soul; if the flow of sin from the body of the parent is checked by a miracle annulling heredity's law, the miracle must affect the body of the offspring; it must be a physical miracle. Thus our Lord's perfection involved both a moral and a physical miracle. or His body inherited not only no sin to stain it morally, but no disease to corrupt it physically. There being no sin and no disease in His blood, His perfection was as truly material as spiritual. His humanity was perfect in every way, free from evil in all its forms; and therefore the law had no claim upon Him, death and the grave had no right to Him. The sin that He assumed and the death that He underwent were voluntarily and gladly assumed and undergone for the sake of those whom, in His mercy, He came to save. There was no sin of His seen in Him, for He was a miracle of holiness; but there was sin of others upon Him for He was a miracle of grace.

Thus having gone so far as to admit a sinless birth and a sinless life, it is not going much farther if we allow a virgin birth. The Bible which declares that He "knew no sin," and was conceived by the Holy Ghost, with equal clearness records that He was born of His mother Mary without a human father; that God in heaven was His Father, and the virgin on earth His mother. If in our hearts we believe the one truth, we are prepared for the other. The light that illumines for us the mystery of our Lord's stainless character shines upon the pure virgin girl as she bends with wondering eyes over her new born babe "wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger." If we listen believingly when the Scripture says that He was born without sin and lived without sin and is the Saviour from sin, we will not turn an unbelieving ear when with the same authority it teaches that no man begat Him, that God alone was His Father, and that therefore He was the Son of the Highest. Having entered the realm of the supernatural, we will not draw back when we encounter an example of it. When we open the door for one miracle, we open it for others. If Jesus could be born without sin, He could be born without a human father. If one miracle is possible, the other is possible likewise.

One who sincerely and intelligently believes in Christ's sinlessness will, if he is logical, come surely to believe in His virgin birth. He who believes in the Sinless Life must believe in the Virgin Birth. He who admits that Christ Himself in His whole nature, in His whole being, was a miracle, will inevitably and unerringly come to see that He was a miracle in His entering into the world. But once deny His sublime perfection, "once admit a tincture of moral failure in Christ, and Christianity as a religion of redemption is in ruins," says Sir Robertson Nicoll. One offence in Christ would have tained His whole character. "Sin does not come and disappear, like a passing cloud. Sin is never a microscopic taint. Sin is self-propagating. Its first step is a fall, and the beginning of a habit. Once say our Lord was a sinner, and with one fell swoop you overthrow Him as the incarnate God, and shatter Him as the Sinless One who calls sinners to Himself, that they may receive from Him deliverance from their sin, and participation in His holiness.

Where belief in the full essential Godhead of the Man Jesus is held there can be no questioning of the Scriptural record of His nativity; but when that record is impugned, the first step is taken in the denial of His deity, and in the direction of scoffing at His empty grace, for with no Sinless Saviour there is no Incarnate God and no Risen Christ.

- Proctor's Theatre -

A story with a "new twist" is offered by the Metro Company today at Proctor's. It is entitled "Her Great Price," and features Mabel Taliaferro, who is an excellent type for the part in which she is cast. The whole story is cleverly presented and the element of surprise is strong enough to make the subject something off the beaten track of photoplays. Miss Taliaferro assumes the part of a young writer, who has become discouraged and despondent through failure to place her manuscripts. Three artists and writers, "pals" of hers, try to cheer her up on New Year's eve, and tell her she must write a story with a "new twist." In the absence of the artists, Leighton, a wealthy young friend, calls; he finds Agnes about to commit suicide and gets her story from her. He proposes that she defer the suicide for one year, meantime insuring her life in his favor for $50,000. He is to give her $30,000 and she will live in luxury for the year. She accepts and the bargain is closed. Agnes has a great year of it. She falls in love with Leighton, only to find that he is engaged to another girl. She is broken hearted until Leighton discovers he is in love with her and breaks with his fiance. This makes it all the harder for her to carry out her contract to commit suicide at the end of the year. She faces her duty bravely, however, and returns to the old studio to end her life by poison. Then come the three artists and Leighton, the scene fades away, and it devlops that the experiences of the last year are only the story with a "new twist" that Agnes has been writing on her typewriter while her "pals" were out celebrating the advent of the New Year. Added features today consists of a stirring drama entitled "The Oath of Hate" and a roaring comedy "The Landlubber." On Monday Fritzi Brunette, the well known Selig star, will appear in a remarkable V. I. S. E. production, "At Piney Ridge," adapted from the play of the same name, and the 8th episode of "The Mysteries of Myra" will also be shown. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday arrangements have been made to present "Where Are My Children," the film creation that has set the whole country agog, and in the very near future Anna Pavlowa, the famous dancer, will be seen in "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

--Astor Theatre--

If you were a woman, and had left your husband to gratify a passion for the gambling table, and finally became owner of a gambling house. If you discovered that one of the victims was your own son; that he was engaged to the daughter of the town's biggest financial giant. The "Easterner" is a handsome, manly boy who is being ruined through his inherited instinct for gambling. "Moll," owner of the town gambling house, saves him from a lynching instigated by the owner of the mine adjoining the one owned by the "Easterner," who covets his claim. Then she finds the boy is her own son and attempts to save him from himself without betraying her secret. Henry King, the "Easterner," is a type splendidly chosen to represent the eastern lad and the cast supporting him is equally well chosen. The picture, entitled "Pay Dirt," is one of the strong Knickerbocker star features and is in five reels of swift-moving action. This will be the big attraction at the Astor Theatre today, with "The Girl and the Game," ninth episode, as the added feature, and other photoplays. The big attraction on Monday will be Margaret Gibson and William Clifford in "The Hidden Law," featuring the Bostock animals in five acts, an elaborate dramatization of the remarkable story by Theodosia Harris. The famous Bostock animals furnish excitement for some of the most thrilling scenes of this unusual production, which is excellently presented by a cast of well-known players. With the ninth episode of "The Girl and the Game," and other photoplays, this will make a great bill for Saturday. The plot is intensely interesting with one thrilling plot following another until the climax, tremendous in its dramatic power, brings the story to a spectacular close. Always a good bill at the Astor Theatre, the place for children to find good clean amusement. During the summer months a matinee at 3 p. m., excepting Saturdays and holidays, when matinee starts at 2 p. m.

"I'M READY, UNCLE."

TO CO-OPERATE WITH STATE DEPARTMENT

County Mosquito Commission Inspectors Will Report Outbreak of Forest Fires.

Announcement has just been made of the maturing of plans for closer co-operation between the employes of the County Mosquito Extermination Commission and the New Jersey State Department of Conservation and Development, by which the inspectors of the County Mosquito Extermination Commission are to report the outbreak of any forest fires in their districts to forest fire wardens of the State department.

The State forest firefighters have been handicapped in their work in preventing forest fires, which were responsible for thousands of dollars of loss of trees and forest products last year, not only in this county, but in practically all counties in New Jersey, because of inability to get quick reports of the outbreak of fires. In each district of the wooded section of the county, a forest fire warden is retained, but it is obviously impossible for him to patrol every portion of his district each day. These men are only paid for the use of part of their time moreover, so that it is thought that the volunteer aid of the inspectors of the Misquito Commissions, not only in this county, but all over the State, will be of considerable help in wiping out forest fires before they have really well started.

Russell W. Gies, chief inspector of the Union County Mosquito Extermination Commission, wrote last week to the forest fire warden of New Jersey, Charles P. Wilber, of New Brunswick, offering in behalf of the Commission the services of the inspectors of the Mosquito Commission, who are likely to find fires breaking out when engaged in their duties in the wilder sections of the county. Mr. Wilber has quickly accepted the co-operation offered and will endeavor to gain the aid of the other Mosquita Extermination Commissions throughout the State as quickly as possible. He has already forwarded to Frank Putnam and H. A. Stine, the local inspectors of the Union County Mosquito Extermination Commission, all information necessary to aid them in co-operating with the State forest fire warden for this district, Charles Myers, of Scotch Plains.

The Conservation Department of the State is also working at present in close co-operation with the Mosquito Commissions on a general educational campaign concerning the value of the elimination of mosquitoes, for the department realizes that the elimination of the mosquito nuisance from New Jersey will be one of the means of developing the State's resources just as much as the conservation of the woodlands and other natural features of the State, which attract so many people to take up their homes in Northern New Jersey.

1915—United States renewed demands in Frye case.

1915—New York City celebrated the raising of its first municipal flag, celebrating at the same time the 250th anniversary of the organization of the first New York municipal government under English rule in 1665. The flag, which bore the Dutch colors in remembrance of New York's origin, was the gift of the City of Amsterdam, Holland.

EVILS OF WORRY.

Most worries are by anticipation. It is a sin because it means a waste of life. It is just as controllable as the drink and drug habit. It has the same effect on life and character that dissipation has. It is no more sinful to drink yourself into the gutter than to worry yourself into the grave. You won't be asked how you wasted your life, but why you wasted your life.—Bishop Woodcock.

URGED TO BE PATRIOTIC

was "Shakespeare, the Great Creator of Tragedy." Her essay follows:

To analyze Shakespeare's writings is to analyze life. He was not merely a writer of dramatic poetry, he was more. He was a creator of living characters. His mind may be compared to a photographic plate which needs only to be exposed a few seconds to leave imprinted on it forever the form of some picture. The sight of a burly, good-natured fellow in an ale-house was sufficient material for the creation of Falstaff. A bit of idle gossip and flash! there was the whole act of a play. Who can dispute his greatness? His name ranks with that of Sophocles, Eschylus and Euripides. Goethe's "Faust" is the only thing that can compare with the tragedies of this mighty man as a drama of any eminence whatever.

At his time in history there were very few books, and the stage was the chief source of amusement. What was more natural in this period of bloody executions and murders than that Shakespeare should utilize the thoughts and impressions of the people for creating such characters as Macbeth, who kills the old King Duncan to further his own ends; Hamlet, whose farther's ghost returns to tell him of the terrible deed of his uncle; and Othello, whose jealousy puts out the sparks of his fair wife's life. Moreover, since there was nothing but the theatre, the histories of King John, Richard III, Henry VIII, and the rest of them could be depicted in no other way.

Who can conceive of the might and power of that brain behind the most facile pen of the centuries. True, he had a foundation for many of his great tragedies, but the creative power lay within his head and no one else could have made such thrilling, terrifying dramas from dry, uninteresting tales as Belleforest's "Hamlet" or Holinshed's "Macbeth."

Hamlet! What a character! Was he mad or did he feign to hide his thoughts? We do not know, but whichever it was it was the cause of Ophelia's real insanity. We are almost lost in following the trend of Macbeth's mind, and Lady Macbeth, a superb creation of Shakespeare's great intellect, ambitious for her husband, and inspired by love of him, commits the terrible deed. Imagine Ben Jonson putting life into such a character!

And the sweet, sad, tragedy of Romeo and Juliet. The pity of Juliet falling in love with the son of her father's worst enemy and going to the old priest for help. What a remarkable plan Shakespeare's brain has put into that of the old man. It is ideal perfect; but alas! like many other perfect plans, it sounds all right, but doesn't "work" quite so well, and Juliet awakens only to find her lover dead at her feet.

The great poet's tragedy is seldom felt in the beginning of his plot, but it falls suddenly in the midst of sunshine and gaiety or comes so gradually as to be almost indiscernible. Old King Lear has many burdens to bear. It seems as if the more he sinks under them, the more are added unto him. His older daughters are unfaithful and he is driven into the storm of the world to fight his way alone. But Cordelia still loves him, and with love and smiles wins her father from madness to a quiet contentment. Surely, we think, this isn't going to be a tragedy, but behold the great Shakespeare! When everything seems to be going along splendidly, poor Lear's only prop and support falls from under him, and he goes down with Cordelia, a sad example of the tragedy of life.

Hamlet is considered by some to be the poet's greatest work, but truly Shakespeare's greatest work is "all Shakespeare." How can we ever expect to really know him, unless we study all his writings, all the phases of his life? The comedies, tragedies, historical plays and sonnets. All are great alone, but together they furnish the proof that he was that most admirable of human beings—a man whose mind was broadened in all directions; a keen observer of human life; a creator of living men and women, and a writer whom all people of all ages and all centuries could love, admire and understand.

Victor Hugo says, "Have you never gazed on a beclouded headland running out beyond eyeshot into the deep sea? Each of its hills contribute to its makeup. No one of its undulations is lost upon it. Its bold outline is sharply marked upon the sky and juts far out amid the waves, and there is not a useless rock. Thanks to this cape you can go amidst the boundless waters, walk among the winds; see closely the eagles soar and the monsters swim; let your humanity wander in the eternal uproar, penetrate the impenetrable. A genius is a headland into the infinite."

Where could we find a better or more befitting description of the incomparable Shakespeare than this great writer's paragraph?

And now, dear classmates, the time has come when we must bid our alma mater farewell. After the galeties of the commencement season are over we will all embark on the journey of life's great sea. Some of our members will go to higher institutions of learning, others will enter the commercial world; and, who knows, perhaps some day we may read that Jack Somebody, a graduate of the 1916 class of N. P. H. S., has just discovered a wonderful new animal in the jungles of Africa or that the great article written by Miss So-and-So, a member of the '16 class of North Plainfield High on "Why Aeroplanes are Superior to Automobiles," has moved all the prominent tourists of the country to sell their cars and invest in aeriel machines. Wonders never cease, and as our class throughout its career has caused wonders, never to cease, you may readily look for a Shakespeare, a Vanderbilt or a Teddy Roosevelt from our midst. But whatever fate has destined for us we all agree that our success, whatever it may be, is due to the untiring efforts of our principals, our teachers, both those who are here now and those who have gone to other fields of work, the Board of Education and the taxpayers of the borough. We shall always remember with fondest delight N. P. H. S. and shall endeavor to be a credit to our Alma Mater.

The salutatorian address was given by Miss Carol Hughes, who following the salutation, delivered her essay on the subject of "Miranda," as follows:

"Members of the Board, Teachers, Parents, Friends:

"In behalf of the class of 1916, I cordialy welcome you to our commenceemnt exercises. For us this evening is n ending and a beginnig. We have finished the happy days of school, free from care, and now we enter upon life's responsibilities, for which our teachers have tried so hard to perpare us. We feel that we owe them and you many thanks for our education; our teachers for so patiently instructing us; you for making the instruction possible. So we wish the exercises of this evening to be a token of our appreciation to you as well as a commencement for us."

"MIRANDA."

Among all of Shakespeare's women characters, Miranda stands out as the ideal of innocent and lovable womanhood. Miranda's environment is unique. She lived on a desert island, alone, except for her father, the learned Prospero; the half-demon, half brute, Caliban; the sprightly Ariel, spirit of the air, and Ariel's spirit comrades.

In Miranda's own words, as she describes herself to Ferdinand in the most beautiful love scene in all Shakespeare:

"I do not know one of my sex; no
woman's face remember,
Save, from my glass, mine own;
nor have I seen
More that I may call men than you,
good friend,
And my dear father; how features are abroad,
I am skilless of."

Miranda is talking to her newfound lover. Ferdinand, it will be remembered, had been brought to the island by the magic of Miranda's father, and through the help of Ariel, the young prince and the beautiful maiden are brought together. Then follows the courtship in which the sweet and wholesome qualities of Miranda are brought out as only Shakespeare can portray them.

She is innocence personified. Her confession of love is winning in its simplicity.

"But, by my modesty,
The jewel in my dower, I would not wish
Any companion in the world but you,
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides yourself the like of,"

she tells Ferdinand, and when he assures her that it is for her sake alone that he endures the unprincely task which Prospero has set him she half-delighted, half-astonished, asks: "Do you love me?"

Revealing also are her conscience-stricken exclamations when she finds that in the frankness of her emotion, she twice forgets her father's commands, once when she tells her name, and again when she fears that she has gone too far in admitting to Ferdinand her innocent passion.

Then, too, as Mrs. Kemble, most discerning of Shakespearean critics, says, "the simple emotion of bashfulness which cause her to 'weep at what she's glad of,' is so little comprehensible to herself that she shakes it off with something like self-reproach."

And the climax to this wonderful scene is Miranda's exquisite offer of herself. When Ferdinand inquires the cause of her tears, she says:

"At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
What I desire to give; and much less take What I shall die to want. But this is trifling;
And all the more it seeks to hide
itself,
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence,
bashful cunning!
And prompt me plain and holy innocence.
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid, to be your fellow
You may deny me; but I'll be your servant
Whether you will or no."

Even a casual study of Miranda's character suggests a comparison with Juilet, that other masterpiece of Shakespearean skill in revealing the heart of woman. Juliet was passionate and emotional. When she loved, she was so overcome by the depths of her emotion, she had to express it, even though it were only to the warm, summer air. She little dreamed that Romeo was listening, and when she found he was near, she was overcome with mortification, because she had been so immodest.

But Miranda, suddenly awakened to the realization of love, freely acknowledges her affection and with charming naivette, offers her love, her life, to Ferdinand.

At the conclusion of the P. H. S. exercises the graduates and alumni enjoyed a reception in the Park Club.

Grade Crossing Act Upheld.

Trenton, June 24.—The Fielder grade crossing act of 1913, under which the Erie railroad was ordered to eliminate fifteen grade crossings in Paterson, estimated to cost $3,000,000, was held to be constitutional by the supreme court.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Los Angeles, Calif.—Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, of this city, who has been elected president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs for the next two years, is a native of Indiana and was educated at Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., a college established and managed by Quakers. Her experience in the women's club movement may be inferred from the fact that, after conspicuous service in the California Federation, she was a director in the General Federation in 1904-06; was its treasurer, 1906-08; first vice-president, 1908-12; member of the executive committee and chairman of the fiannce committee for the same period and chairman of the peace committee from 1912 to the present time. Mrs. Cowles is a suffragist. She has well represented in the past the point of view of the women of the Far West, and her election was due in part to her coming from a region which it was felt, deserved more recognition in shaping the federation's national policy.

New York.—The examination, by commission, as witnesses, of two women living at a great distance from this city and at widely divergent points of the country will be a feature of the fight to break the will of Lambert Suydam, millionaire real estate operator and descendant of one of the old knickerbocker families. The bulk of the estate of $2,000,000 was left to a nephew, Lambert Suydam, and Mrs. Esther Alice Bertine, another realtive, is the contestant, charging undue influence. The witnesses to be examined by commission are her sisters, Mrs. V. T. Hurxthal, of El Paso, Tex., and Mrs. Van Leer, wife of Capt. Samuel W. Van Leer, of Fort McKeogh, Mont.

Cincinnati, O.—It seems hardly possible to the many friends of the Duchess of Manchester, formerly Miss Helen Zimmerman, famous Cincinnati heiress and beauty and daughter of the late financier of that name, that sixteen years have gone by since her marriage to the English peer. Her friends here were reminded of the passing of the years by recently receiving from her news that her son, Lord Mandeville, had passed his qualifying examination for cadetship in the British navy and had entered the Royal Naval College at Osborne, on the Isle of Wight.

Boston, Mass.—Miss Frances R. Burnham, treasurer of the Workingmen's Co-operative Bank of Boston, has the distinction of being the only bank treasurer of her sex in the State. Two months ago the Massachusetts legislature passed an act making it possible for women to hold such a position. Immediately, the treasurer of the Workingmen's Bank recommended a change in the by-laws so that an assistant treasurer might be employed, and Miss Burnham was unanimously elected. She began at the bottom of clerical work. "Men used to be jealous of women in business and once hesitated to advance them," says Miss Burnham, "but that is passing. Am I not myself an example? Our directors approve of women."

London.—Miss Estelle Stead, daughter of William T. Stead, the famous journalist, who was lost in the Titanic disaster, has become editor of the Review of Reviews in place of her brother, who has gone to the front.

Winona, Minn.—To encourage interest in the history of the Catholic church in the United States, the College of St. Theresa of this city has offered fourteen scholarships to girls, to be named after the first bishop in each of the fourteen ecclesiastical provinces of the church in the country, namely: Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Dubuque, Milwaukee, New Orleans, New York, Oregon City, Philadelphia, St. Louis, St. Paul, San Francisco and Santa Fe. Each candidate must present an essay of 1,000 words of the life of the first bishop of her province.

WEDDING SECRET 3 YEARS.

Orange Girl Refutes Old Saying About Women.

Orange, June 24.—Mrs. Caroline Streit of East Orange had the surprise of her life today when she discovered in rummaging through some of her daughter's effects a marriage certificate three years old. There was no mistaking the fact that her daughter's name appeared on the certificate, and just above was that of Lewis E. Mills who has been a boarder in the Streit home for more than two years.

Mrs. Mills said she had kept the wedding secret for three years because "it was her own business" and seemed proud of the way in which she and her husband, living for two years under the same roof, had managed to reveal the news of their marriage to no one.

LOSES LIQUOR EVIDENCE.

Burglar Drinks Beer Kept In Vineland City Hall.

Vineland, June 24.—While the police have been searching day and night for three bold boy burglars who robbed four stores and fine residences and tried to smother an aged woman, a burglar entered the city hall and stole nine cases of beer.

It has been the custom of Andrew H. Willson, president of the Law and Order league, to store beer taken in speak easy raids in the city hall. It was in a concrete cell, and the door was locked with a new Yale lock. Receiving an anonymous letter intimating something was wrong he hurried to his private vault to find the lock picked and nine of the thirty cases of beer gone.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Little Tuk Has A Dream on Horseback.

They Came to the Old Town.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

SOON as daddy had finished reading his paper he began the bedtime story. "Years and years ago there was a little boy who used to help his mother take care of his baby sister every day after school. This took so much time that he had to manage about getting his geography lesson. Then there was a poor old woman that he used to help carry water. When he went to bed he had to put his geography under his pillow, so that when he slept he might get some of the lesson. But that night something went 'Cribble, crabble, bang!' and a popinjay sat right down on the edge of his bed.

"Then little Tuk no longer lay in bed. He was on horseback. Gallop-a-gallop he went. He was sitting in front of a splendidly dressed knight with a shining helmet and a nodding plume. Through the woods they galloped till they came to the old town of Vordingborg, a big place in those days. The king used to live there, and over the city towered his castle. Lights shone from its windows as little Tuk galloped into the town. Through the windows he could see people dancing and singing, and King Waldemar himself led out beautiful court ladies to the dance.

"Morning came, and as the sun rose the town sank away, and one after another the towers of the king's palace faded out of little Tuk's sight. At last on the hill where the castle once stood there was only one tower left.

"Along the streets strolled schoolboys with their geographies under their arms. 'Two thousand inhabitants,' little Tuk heard them keep saying. But he knew that was not true. He could see that not nearly so many people lived in the old town of Vordingborg.

"Then little Tuk thought he was lying in his bed. First he thought he was dreaming, but soon he knew he was not dreaming, because there was some one right there close beside him.

"A sailor, a tiny little sailor so small he might have been a cadet, only he was not a cadet, kept saying to him: 'Little Tuk, little Tuk, I came to greet you warmly from Korsoer, which is a rising town. It has many steamers and coaches. Once it used to be called a sleepy, dull town, but that was an old fashioned idea. "I lie close to the sea," says Korsoer, "and I have good roads and pleasure gardens. I once gave birth to a poet who was amusing, and that is more than most poets are. I wanted to send a ship around the world, but I never did, and there is always the most delicious fragrance about me, because close by my gates there are beautiful rose gardens."'"

"Oh, daddy, what a nice way to study geography!" cried the children.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Gets a New Maid, Who Learns at Once How Easy It Is to Impose Upon Her Mistress.

"Mrs. Gordon, you have not forgotten that I am to be married soon. Have you found another maid?" Julia stood with her tray resting on the edge of the table while she spoke.

"No, Julia, I have not, worse luck. My mother has been trying to find me a maid in Milwaukee, but none of them are willing to come so far from friends." Ethel's tone was full of grievance.

"The reason I asked is that Tim's cousin is looking for a place."

"Where is she? Can you bring her to me?" Ethel's interest was aroused at once. "If she has satisfactory references I shall be glad to get her. Of course you understand she must know how to cook."

"She did the cooking in her last place," said Julia, taking up the tray and starting for the kitchen.

"Did you hear the good news, Ralph?" asked Ethel, strolling into the living room. "Julia has a girl in mind for me."

"What will you have to pay her?" asked Ralph, looking up from his paper.

"I did not ask Julia, of course," replied Ethel. In fact, she had never thought of the matter, but when Ralph spoke of it it occurred to her at once that there was a chance to get a little ahead. "I can make Ralph think I have to pay her the same that I pay Julia, and the difference I can send to apply on my suit." Since Ralph had given her such explicit instructions about avoiding debt she had become more panicky than ever about her bill in Kansas City.

"You should be able to get her at lower wage, at least for the first few months," urged Ralph.

"I'll try, of course. One thing I am fearful about is that she will have a houseful of friends all the time," continued Ethel. "That was one thing in Julia's favor. She came here a stranger."

"Humph! She did not stay a stranger long, or she would not be marrying so soon," replied Ralph, returning to his paper.

Ethel succeeded in getting the girl to come for four dollars less a month than she had been paying Julia, and was quite jubilant over the prospect of having four dollars a month to apply on her bill. She had not thought far enough to realize that it would take considerably over a year to pay for her suit at that rate, and she might not be able to keep the knowledge of her debt from her husband so long.

"Now I will begin right with this maid and watch her. She shall not waste food if I can help it. I'll keep the grocery bill down and save the faster for my debt," she thought, flattering herself that she was becoming very thrifty. If she could have heard the conversation that was going on between Julia and the new maid she would have been undeceived.

"You will never have any trouble hiding anything from her," Julia was saying. "She is a perfect child about how much stuff will be needed than a baby. I gave Tim a big basket of groceries to take home every week."

"Wouldn't they see him carrying the basket?" asked Clara.

"Yes, but he brought a basket with him and on the top were some of his own things to show if anybody got inquisitive. But they never did. They are dead easy."

"I thought I could afford to work for a dollar less a week for awhile" Julia smiled knowingly.

"Yes, indeed, and if you can cook to suit Mr. Gordon and keep the house clean looking on the outside that is all you will have to do. You can ask your own price after a month or so," counseled Julia.

"Yes, and I'll get it, too. Watch me," prophesied the astute Clara.

DOUBLE HEADER AT AVON OVAL TOMORROW

Kearny Eries vs. T. A. B. S. and East End vs. West End.

If Jupiter Pluvius puts forth no strenuous objections the Tabs will get busy on Avon Oval tomorrow afternoon and will do their utmost to disturb the Erie A. C., of Kearny. The Erie lads are fast and can play the national game in a way that has heretofore demanded attention and assured competition. The local lads, on the other hand, have promised Manager Jim Scott that they have no desire to allow the Eries to walk off with a victory in the style adopted by the Nationals, last Sunday's visitors. Either Jack Denny or his brother Tone will be on the mound for the locals, while Kearny fighters have not announced their list of battlers.

There will be a "prelim." The West End contingent of the Tabs has agreed to cross bats with the lads from the East End of the city. This game is the second of a series of five, the East Enders having won the first argument, 8 to 2. Alexander MacDonald is handling the reins of the West End organization and Alec is some driver. Mike Montferrant is looking after the destinies of the Easterners and Mike has been ever on the alert for good material with which to build up a machine that will run. The batteries for this "prelim" attraction have been announced as Stebor and Gleason for the East End and Mahoney and Winters for the West End.

GYPSIES CAUSE STIR.

Rumors that the Mexicans had arrived prevailed in 'Squan village, a hamlet not far distant from the Troop D camp, all day yesterday, following the arrival of several bands of gypsies. The town is made up largely of the farmer element and the prevalence of gypsy beggars and fortune tellers making a house to house canvas gave rise to the rumor that Carranza had a delegation of spies wrapping themselves around the camps. Newspaper men and army officers were approached by the homesters and considerable trouble was experienced in allaying their fears.

NEWARK ABSTAINERS MAY PLAY ON AVON OVAL

Inasmuch as Manager Jim Scott, of the Tabs, has been anxious to secure a game with the Newark Tabs the following items will be of interest, not only to him but to the many fans and fannies who follow the Iron Trail that leads to Avon Oval.

"Although the Newark T. A. B. S. team will be unable to play tomorrow, because four players have gone with the National Guard, the Tabs will play their Sunday game, scheduled with the Bloomfield Catholic Lyceum at Bloomfield. Manager Kinney has secured four clever players to take the places of Pitcher McMahon, First Baseman Schwartz, Shortstop Burnett and Third Baseman Brown. Jerry Mande, who has pitched several one-hit games for the Montclair A. A. this year, has been signed to pitch for the remainder of the season.

"Reilly and Thompson, recently with Utica, the former a pitcher and the latter a catcher, will be in the Newark Tabs' lineup Sunday when the locals go to Rahway for a game with the Ramblers. The Tabs have a few open dates. Chick Kinney, manager, can be reached at 320 Warren street."

JERSEY TITLE GOES TO THROCKMORTON

After playing wretched tennis for several weeks, Harold Throckmorton surprised tennis devotees in the vicinity of Morristown yesterday by emerging from mediocre play and ascending the real heights of the court game. The event was the final of the New Jersey State championship in singles. Every one except those who claim allegiance to the Morristown section had forgotten that the Jersey title was still in abeyance. When rain caused postponement and then re-postponement the committee in charge of the tournament told the finalists that they might select their own time for playing the contest. They agreed on Bronxville during the metropolitan championships, and then there was more rain and another postponement.

Yesterday, however, a fair sky beckoned, and Throckmorton and Cedric Major, accompanied by a referee, embarked for the Morristown Field Club courts. Basing the conclusion on the woeful performances of Throckmorton recently, Major had more than a fighting chance. One of those unforeseen occurrences, however, upset all calculation, and Throckmorton won his second straight championship of the year, taking the measure of Major in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5, in a contest that teemed with interest from the first stroke over the barrier.

JACK MARTIN RETAINS POSITION WITH BREWERS

Although the owners of the Milwaukee baseball club have, during the past week disposed of many of the players on their team and have secured in their places many promising stars and not a few "has-beens," Jack Martin is still a regular member of the Brewers. The Milwaukee team has been going very poorly for months and President Timme, the man at the helm, had decided that his team simply must brace up. However, he realized that he was carrying some "deadwood" and that realization prompted the unusual deal consummated last Thursday.

Jay Kirke was traded to the Louisville club for Dee Walsh, an outfielder; Clarence Kraft, a first baseman, and Harry Moran, a pitcher. Each of the men secured by the Brewers is a player of note. Walsh has seen service with the St. Louis Americans, while Kraft is the first sacker over whom many league magnates fought not long ago. Moran is the former Newark Fed flinger and is a southpaw. His work with the outlaw organization earned for him considerable favorable comment. Jack Martin will be retained at short as his playing has been of high caliber.

MRS. L. C. STOCKTON WINS MONTCLAIR MEDAL PLAY

Mrs. Leila C. Stockton, of this city, medalist in the recent women's metropolitan championship at Baltusrol, put forth some of her best efforts yesterday in the women's one day tournament at Montclair and turned in the low gross score of the medal play handicap event with a 92. Mrs. C. J. S. Fraser, of Baltursol, was treading close behind her with a 95, followed by another Baltusrol player, Mrs. Frederick Pruyn, with a 96. Forty-six women started and as no casualties were reported it is presumed that forty-six women finished, but the number of cards entered on the scoreboard would seem to indicate that some of lies were lost, strayed or stolen.

SPORT NOTES

How can the St. Louis Browns expect to win out with only one Plank in their platform?

And speaking of whiskers, there was a time in the early days of baseball when big leaguers performed on the diamond adorned with facial fringe and got away with it.

If big league teams were given traveling accommodations according to their standing, the Athletics would be sent around the circuit by parcel post.

"Waddy" Busk, of the Harvard second crew, has picked on a pleasant occupation for Summer vacation work. He is going to drive an ambulance.

It is hinted that fraternities at the University of Maine have been paying the expenses of athletes. Only a question of time until the college athlete will not be able to make even a living at "atheiteing."

Outside of possessing the women's national grass, clay court and indoor tennis championships and a half interest in a couple of dozen doubles and mixed doubles championships, Miss Molla Bjurstedt holds very few tennis titles.

Just to show Omaha that it has no patent on exciting contests, Lincoln has scheduled a championship croquet tournament for July 12.

We are beginning to lose faith in those critics who have predicted right along that the Brooklyn Superbas and Cleveland Indians were about to crack.

Then, again, perhaps Jim Corbett has forgotten all about making a champion out of Tom Cowler, the English heavyweight.

The Bainbridge team in the Dixie League has a pitcher named Glass. Opposing batsmen should find it easy to "see through" his pitching.

Boston fans might profitably lay off betting on ball games and turn to the race tracks in other parts of the country. For instance, the weather furnishes a sure hunch in "Raincoat."

Bob McAllister, the San Francisco battler, doesn't care how far he goes to get a walloping. He has sailed for Australia to meet Les Darcy.

Great preparations are being made for the championship wrestling bout between Joe Stecher and "Strangler" Lewis at Omaha, July 4. But no matter who wins the bout, the circus will continue to bill Frank Gotch as the champ.

The indefinite suspension of Manager Joe McGinnity, of the Butte Northwestern League team, for alleged rowdyism on the field, came as a surprise to his old major league friends. When in the big yard the "Iron Man" was about as big a rowdy as "Silent John" Titus.

The declaration of St. Paul and Minneapolis boxing promoters that they are prepared to part with $100,000 in order to stage a Willard-Fulton bout must have been sad news to Tom Jones, the champion's pilot.

Trying to pick a winning college crew with the aid of dope on their practice spins is just as easy as picking a loser. One day a crew will row a couple of miles in nothing flat and the next time out the same crew will have to stop for lunch before finishing the distance.

NETHERWOODS EXPECT TO TRIM KNIGHTS

The Netherwoods, leaders in the City League race, will take a little trip to the banks of the old Raritan tomorrow afternoon and while in the city of New Brunswick will do battle with the Knights of St. Peter baseball outfit. The Knights expect to encounter real opposition in the locals and will present their best array of talent while the Coughlans will have Lou Slocum as their standby. The Saints have great respect for Lou inasmuch as the local flinger has had previous dealings with the Middlesex lads.

While the manager or managers of the Netherwood club could not be reached last evening, at which time official information regarding tomorrow's lineup was sought, it is believed that the club will consist of the same lads that perform in the local league. If such be the case, the Knights will find Lou Slocum on the hillock with Johnson behind the bat with Eddie Hannon, Mattay Coughlan, Bill Dodd, Venezia, Terry, and others to help him out.

RALPH RUNYON ENTERS MIDDLESEX CONTESTS

Ralph Runyon, the local pole vaulter, will make his annual visit to New Brunswick on July 4th, to compete in the pole vault and other events at the athletic meet in the afternoon on Neilson Field. Ralph has been making a practice of going to New Brunswick for July 4th competitions and generally brings home with him some prizes. Runyon has been at Penn State for the last year, and has been doing some great work in the pole vault. One of the best school boy vaulters while at Plainfield High School, he has developed wonderfully under coaching at college and now does twelve feet and over.

Fred Murray, Leland Stanford University's all around athlete, is a prominent entrant. Besides competing in the special hurdle race, he is also entered in the sprints and the high jump.

Entries close tomorrow with Fred W. Richardson, secretary of the committee. A partial list of the entrants follows:

John Leppert, Second Reformed church; Albert Seiffert, Second Reformed church; Eugene Gruenbeag, unattached; Ralph Runyon, Penn State; Richard Mackay, Ozanam A. A.; U. Winsjansen, Norweigan Turn A. C.; R. Cloughen, unattached; Herbert Hoagland, Manhattan A. C.; Cornelius W. Ivy, Manhattan A. C.; John Russo, Knights of St. Peter; G. McDonald, unattached; G. C. Benish, Bald Eagles.

NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM AT AHERN'S RESTAURANT

M. J. Ahern, who recently purchased the MacDonald Restaurant on North avenue, has had an up-to-date electric lighting and fan system installed throughout the entire building, making a very noticeable improvement. One of the features of the change is the introduction of brascolite fixtures in the restaurant taking the place of the gas fixtures which have done service for many years. The brascolites are the last word in electric illumination and not only give a splendid lighting effect but aid in making the room cool in the summer time. Mr. Ahern came to this city from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and has already shown to the local trade that he fully understands the restaurant business and is determined to make his place one of the most popular eating houses in town.

The new system at the Ahern restaurant was designed by Messrs. Ryder & Graves, the local contractors, who also did the work. This firm has just completed another fine electric job at the Fass store, where they have just installed a modern ventilating system, similar to those adopted by the largest department stores in the country to insure absolute fresh aid throughout the various floors.

TAFT MAY TALK ON MEXICAN WAR

Ex-President's Subject is "Our World Relationships."

WILL SPEAK TONIGHT

Ole Theobaldi at Chautauqua Tent This Afternoon in Violin Recital —No Sunday Program—Season Tickets Still on Sale.

All profits from the Community Chautauqua now being conducted on Watchung avenue will go to the relief of women and children in Plainfield dependent upon those who have answered the call of their country and gone to the Mexican border, according to an announcement made last night.

Attendance at the two entertainments of yesterday was fairly good, but not up to the expectations of the local committee of which H. W. Marshall is chairman. It is believed that the tent will be crowded at both programs today. This afternoon Ole Theobaldi will appear and tonight ex-President William Howard Taft.

The American Quartet was heard in songs and instrumental offerings yesterday afternoon and again last night, with Clayton Conrad in "chalk talks." These entertainers proved highly pleasing to Plainfield people and won much applause. In the afternoon the junior chautauqua was organized and many of the young boys and girls of the city became interested in the work. At night Lee Francis Lybarger, of Philadelphia, made an address on "The Community Conscience." He told of the purpose of the Chautauqua movement, and of its growth within the past few years. More than 8,000,000 people a year make up Chautauqua audiences, he said, and through the educational and entertaining lectures they are developing a community conscience as keen and as sensative as the individual conscience.

Ole Theobaldi, one of the world's master violinists, will give a recital this afternoon at 2:30, assisted by Florence Alice Sitizel, operatic soprano and Mlle. Helen Kelere, piano virtuoso.

As a prelude to the address tonight O'Hara and Wetmore will be heard in songs and impersonations. These two entertainers are among the best on the chautauqua or lyceum platform. William Howard Taft will speak on "Our World Relationships," and will likely have something to say on the Mexican situation. Plainfield is especially fortunate in that the address of tonight will be Mr. Taft's first public speech since the Mexican situation became acute and local people will hear his opinions as they are given to the country.

The tent will be closed all day Sunday, and the entire third day program will be presented Monday forenoon, beginning at 9 o'clock. Monday will be one of the greatest program days ever presented from any platform, with the entire third day program presented in the morning and the regular fourth day program coming at 2:30 in the afternoon and at 7:30 in the evening.

Victor's Florentine Band and The Neapolitan Trombadours constitute one of the greatest instrumental attractions on the chautauqua platform today. Dr. Euclid B. Rogers appearing with the band, and presenting his great lecture on "A Living or a Life," Monday.

If you buy your season tickets from the Quaker Club at their stand near tent entrance you can still enjoy seven of the greatest entertainments ever brought to Plainfield, all for $2.

EAGLE SCOUT TO RUN LOCAL CAMP

Richmond Man Will Be Here Monday to Prepare Boys for Summer Work.

The Boy Scout Camp Committee yesterday closed with Eagle Scout, Frank J. Parater, Jr., of Richmond, to take charge of the local camp this summer. He will be here on Monday and get the camp ready for the boys by July 1.

The tenting equipment has been purchased and will be delivered here next week. The committee bought one 7x9 director's tent with fly, one 7x7 cook's tent with fly, one 12x18 tent with fly, and three 10x12 tents. All this is in addition to the permanent scout camp erected last year.

Morristown and New Brunswick have raised $1,000 each to defray the cost of the Boy Scout camp this year, and Plainfield is appealing for $700, of which only $249.49 has been subscribed.

William D. Murray will be one of the speakers at the Boy Scout Fourth of July celebration at the camp grounds on Terril road. The camp at that time will be open for public inspection. Applications from scouts desiring to enter camp during the first week are now being received by Scoutmasters.

$10,000 RESIDENCE.

Contractor Samuel Titus, of Watchung, is making rapid progress with the handsome new home to be erected on Hillcrest road, Watchung, for William H. Campbell, president of the American Chemical Company. Mr. Campbell has been a resident of Plainfield's northern suburb for several years and is one of the greatest boosters for the place. The home he is having built will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000.

VESPER SERVICE

An outdoor Vesper service will be held in the garden of Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, 537 East Front street, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. This will be a Silver Bay service, and all young women and girls are cordially invited to attend.

WORK TROOPERS HARD TO KEEP THEIR MINDS OFF WAR ISSUE

Big Question at Plainfield Headquarters is: "What Do You Hear From the Border?"—Many Tearful Farewells Said Yesterday—Tented City Full of Activity.

Evidently working on a plan to keep the minds of the men occupied Captain Albert Borden and his fellow officers of Troop D, First Squadron, New Jersey Cavalry, forced a busy day's program on the guardsmen yesterday. There were few idle moments from the rising call until after supper and many of the men were ready to "turn in" at 6:30.

The men have come to realize that they are up against a serious proposition. Feigned cheerfulness could be detected on almost every countenance yesterday and the big question was "What do you hear from the border?" Others expressed their anxiety to get started toward the border and some were grumbling because sufficient equipment had not yet arrived.

A carload of horses, many of them unbroken and wild, will arrive at the Troop D camp today and the guardsmen who are without mounts were laying their plans last night to "pick a winner." The "rookies" spent much of their leisure time last night in getting pointers on horse flesh, being advised earlier in the day by the wiseacres that a good horse would be one of their greatest assets in actual warfare.

Visitors flocked to the camp in big numbers all day yesterday, both sides of the street in front of the tents being lined with automobiles and motorcycles. Tearful greetings and still sadder partings were prominent in every nook and corner of the big tented city. Conspicuous among the visitors seeking Plainfielders were many wives, mothers and sweethearts, as well as children.

Several of the Plainfielders have sore and swollen arms following the third innoculation by Camp Physician Quimby yesterday as a precautionary measure against typhoid. Two innoculations were administered in Plainfield and the third was put off until yesterday. Many cases of sore backs and aching feet were reported at the sick call yesterday. On Thursday the men got their first taste of horseback riding and several of them suffered bad spills. It is expected that the first soreness will soon wear off, however, and that the men will be well hardened by the first of the week.

The air was cold and damp again last night. Unlike the battery, which carries its own cots, the cavalry men sleep on the ground, using army blankets for underneath and top coverings. All of the troopers have experienced trouble in keeping warm and last night was no exception. The mornings are just as l and the men suffer considerably until the sun warms things up. This is one of the most uncomfortable features of the camp life.

Since arriving at Sea Girt the men have received numerous treasured articles from home and are now beginning to wonder what they are going to do with these when the order to push to the border comes, as it inevitably will. Each tent is stocked with articles that will certainly not be lugged along to the front by the men and the visitors at the camp yesterday were appointed "guardians" for many of the trinkets "until the war is over."

"GRUB" IS FINE THEY SAY

Cooks Eugene Johnston and Charles Irby are without a doubt the most popular men in Troop D. They are handing out a menu each day that would do credit to many a home culinary department. As an example of what the boys are eating at Sea Girt yesterday's menu is given below:

BREAKFAST

Rice
Steak and Onions
Coffee—Bread and Butter

DINNER

Roast Spring Lamb
Baked Potatoes
Bread and Butter and Coffee

SUPPER

Hamburger Steak and Onions
Potato Salad
Bread and Butter and Tea
Bread Pudding

Yesterday's rations brought up from Sea Girt for Troop D included the following: One side of beef, two barrels of potatoes, two crates of onions, 150 pounds of ice, twenty-five pounds of butter and eighty-five loaves of bread.

Assisting Cooks Johnston and Irby in the kitchen are Troopers William Daniels and Leslie Kingslow, the latter also being Captain Albert Borden's special messenger.

BOY SCOUTS OFFER AID TO FAMILIES

Proud to Serve Those Who Are Entrusted Under Stars and Stripes.

Responding to the suggestion of Ernest R. Ackerman and George P. Mellick looking toward the formation of a Plainfield Home Guard to see that no family or dependent of those of our citizenry who have gone forth to defend the colors shall suffer from such sacrifice the Boy Scout Council has authorized the following letter sent to Mr. Ackerman:

"Noting with a thrill of pride the splendid appeal to the patriotism of those of our city, not only who have promptly obeyed the call to the colors, but of those who have been equally heroic in giving their sons and husbands to the country's service, the Boy Scout Council, echoing the sentiment of every scoutmaster, leader and boy scout in the vicinity of Plainfield herewith offer to any organization that may be formed as a result of your suggestion, the gratuitous services of both officers and scouts in carrying out the work of relief.

"In England the work of the Boy Scouts in war times has been important. The boys have served as convoys to the wounded being brought in from the front, they have been invaluable as home helpers 'doing their good turn daily' for those whose fathers, husbands and sons have been called from home. Such duties have consisted in carrying provisions to those who need them, services as light cooks, as day guardians for small children while the mothers go forth to help eke out the means of a livelihood above the bare necessities provided for by the government, as fuel gatherers, as helpers to local health boards in making inspections regarding especial needs of families, as beach patrols, as couriers, and in many other ways.

"These are a few of the things that the Boy Scouts of Plainfield stand ready to perform. There are doubtless many other ways that the Boy Scouts can be helpful and they would esteem it not only a privilege, but an honor to be designated to perfor many duty that in the judgment of the organization you propose they can perform.

"A perfected organization of trained juvenile helpers is at your instant service, divided into troops or patrols or as individual patrols. The Boy Scout Council itself, the executive branch of the local Boy Scout movement also offers its co-operation in this worthy endeavor.

"The ranking field officer is Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., 235 East Sixth street, telephone 758-J, through whom commissions for service may be issued to the various scout troops.

"With kind regards, sir, we are,
"Yours to command,
"THE BOY SCOUT COUNCIL,
"Plainfield, N. J. Division.
"THEODORE G. DAVIS, President."

CALL CITIZENS TO PLAN RELIEF

"Not a Man Who Goes From Plainfield, Nor His Family, Shall Suffer."

MAYOR HAS A PLAN

Mass Meeting of Tuesday, June 27, to Name Permanent Committee—North Plainfield Will Have Part in the Patriotic Work.

A mass meeting of citizens, the purpose of which is to appoint a permanent committee to see that not a man who has gone or shall go to the front from Plainfield ,nor wife, nor children, nor others dependant upon him, shall suffer, has been called for Tuesday evening, June 27. The meeting will be held in the Council Chamber, and citizens of both Plainfield and North Palinfield have been asked to attend. Mayor Calkins has sent out letters to a number of prominent local people, but all who want to have a part in the patriotic work are invited to attend. The letter of the mayor follows:

"The departure of Troop D and of the members of the New Jersey State Hospital Relief Corps on Wednesday last in immediate response to the call of the Government has brought home to the people of Plainfield as nothing else could have done what is really meant when we speak of self-sacrifice, patriotism and active service for one's country. Some of the best of our young men have already gone, without thought of the cost to themselves and others dependent upon them, because there has been no shadow of doubt in their minds as to where lies their paramount duty. Others of them, members of Company K, may at any moment be called; and we know that they, too, are not only ready, but eager to go. There are still others not now enlisted who will instantly step forward if their services are needed, also without thought of the consequences.

"In these circumstances and at such a solemn moment in the life of the community, we are of one mind as to what we purpose to do. We, the people of Plainfield, purpose to get together in the regular Plainfield way, except that it will be with enthusiasm and unanimity such as we have never known before, and see to it that not a man who has gone or shall go to the front, nor wife, children or others dependent upon him, shall suffer. Plainfield does not look upon this as other than an obligation—an obligation the fulfillment of which the people will hold and cherish as an honor. In caring for her sons, Plainfield is acting only from a sense of love and duty.

"I invite you to be present at a ureliminary meeting which I am calling to be held in the Council Chamber, 149 North avenue, on Tuesday evening, June 27, 1916, at 8 o'clock p. m. This meeting is to arrange for a permanent citizens' organization, if that shall be the wish of those whom I am asking to attend, such organization to represent the entire community in whatever it shall be our great privilege as citizens to do.

"Yours very truly,
"LEIGHTON CALKINS,
"Mayor."

COLIS CASE TO JOIN.

Health Inspector Colis H. Case, of the Plainfield Board of Health, was sent for yesterday by Major Harold D. Corbusier, of the First New Jersey Field Hospital Corps, to come immediately to Sea Girt to enlist in the corps of which he was formerly an active member. Case found it necessary to decline the invitation, but offered his services after July 6. Major Corbusier communicated with the Elizabeth headquarters and the offer was accepted.

ENCOURAGING LETTER FROM FATHER BOGAN

Eloquent Missile Read by Every Man in Troop D. Yesterday.

One of the bright spots of encouragement came yesterday morning in the form of a letter from Rev. B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church, this city, to Trooper Jack Caulfield. This missive was taken possession of by the corporal of Caulfield's tent and every member of the troop read its words of encouragement during the day. It follows, in part:

"Just a word to wish you well in the generous offering you are making of yourself in the service of your country. In this you are the equal of your fellow soldiers, no matter how exclusive they might otherwise be. As you all wear the same uniform to designate the service you are offering, so the uniformity of purpose—that you are all willing to die if needed to uphold the honor of the nation—brings down the most pretentious and elevates the humblest to the honored plane of "Americans." You have been taught from childhood that patriotism is a virtue, ranking with religion in the purity of its purpose and drawing God's blessing on its honest, fearless followers. Be true to the principles of your religious belief and you will never give your commander any reason to doubt your loyalty to the flag. God bless you and your company and protect you all to the day when, 'mustered out of service,' will bring the right of honthe tallies were lost, strayed or stolen.

MANY TROOPERS HAVE NOT RECEIVED THEIR SUPPLIES

Nearly a dozen of the members of Troop D have not received their full equipment to date and several are working in their civilian clothes. The shortage is due to the holdup on the Federal government's part and Quartermaster Sherman B. Joost is hopeful of having all material at hond by tomorrow night at the latest. Blouses, shirts, leggins, hats, shoes and trousers are needed.

However, the Plainfielders are not wanting for anything to insure comfort. Plenty of blankets are available and working material is plentiful. Cooking and eating utensils are to be had in plentiful numbers and Uncle Sam up to the present time has rovided an appetizing menu three times each day. In the words of one youth: "As long as the 'eats' hold out we're satisfied."

MARTINE PROMISES TO SEE THAT SUPPLIES ARE SENT TO INFANTRY

Plainfield Senator Wires Wilbur F. Sadler Inquiring About the Delay in Shipping Equipment—Expect Company K at Sea Girt Range in a Few Days.

Those in command of the infantry forces on the Sea Girt range are firm in their belief that the Second and Third Regiments will be under canvas in a few hours. The situation is getting desperate, they say, and there is absolutely no reasons why every militiaman in the State should not be summoned to the mobilization camp.

Major Corbusier's men made an excellent showing at the inspection yesterday afternoon and inasmuch as they have completed preliminary arrangements for a move to the border they would probably prove valuable assistants for Company K and the remainder of the Second Regiment if it were called out. Major Corbusier yesterday expressed a wish that Company K and the Elizabeth companies, in particular, be ordered to Sea Girt.

At least four units of command are slated to move today, according to those claiming to have the "inside track" at Sea Girt. These are the hospital corps with its Plainfield men, the field batteries, the medical corps and the ambulance corps.

Lieut. Col. William Gray Schauffler, of Lakewood, Surgeon General of the National Guard, and twenty-three members of his corps were mustered into service yesterday. The hospital and ambulance corps and the field batteries deployed on the parade ground yesterday afternoon and underwent inspection by Lieut. Col. Henry D. Spyer, U. S. A., senior mustering officer, and his assistants, Captain Gouvenor Pecker and First Lieutenant Charles B. Elliott. Medical inspection blanks had not arrived from Washington yesterday and the examination of the troops could not go forward. Captain Nelson Gapen, U. S. A., who will direct the medical examination, has arrived from Sandy Hook.

Another incident in the controversy over the failure of the Washington officials to provide equipment as quickly as the Jersey officers desired it was the telegram received yesterday afternoon by Adtj. Gen. Wilbur F. Sadler from Senator James E. Martine, of New Jersey, in reply to a request for information concerning the delay in shipping the equipment. Senator Martine wired that officials in Washington admitted there had been delay, expressed regret that the Jersey unit had been inconvenienced and promised speedy reparation.

Even before a press association dispatch announcing the order to move all mobile troops to the border was received at Sea Girt the camp sensed action. When the order became known throughout the camp, the liveliest sort of demonstrations followed.

CORBUSIER EXPECTS IMMEDIATE ORDERS

Plainfielders in Corps "Working Their Heads Off" to Get on Border.

When a Daily Press reporter called on Major Harold D. Corbusier, active head of the First New Jersey Field Hospital Corps, on the Sea Girt range, last night, he was informed that the corps is ready to move at a moment's notice and Major Corbusier is anticipating orders to transfer his men and equipment to San Antonio, Tex., today. "In fact," said Major Corbusier, "if we don't get orders at once to push on to the border we will call upon the Federal authorites and insist that we be allowed to join the Guardsmen now at the front.

Every member of the force is well and in good spirits. Alfred Seal, of Plainfield, has been appointed permanent aide to the major and when seen last night every one of the men were busily engaged putting on the finishing touches.

Recruits were cheerful last night despite a grueling day of drilling and litle comfort in the way of equipment. Washington, it was announced, can provide for the present only shoes, socks, and under-clothing. General Sadler asked permission to purchase equipment in the State, and he was permitted to order 5,000 blankets. The order was quickly placed.

To organize the recruits it has therefore been necessary to strip the Second and Third Regiments of their equipment. Jersey officials are bitter at what they term the "falldown" of the Washington authorities to provide equipment for war strength. The conference on the question of equipment was not concluded until early yesterday morning. General Sadler awakened Governor Fielder to announce his intention of commandeering the outfits of the Second and Third troops. Officers of these commands in camp today ruefully learned of this action, for they saw in it further delay in their call to the colors.

Late yesterday afternoon details of soldiers cleared the parade grounds of the thousands of spectators, forcing them back to the roads that encircle the Governor's residence on the extreme northwest corner of the reservation. Everywhere the discipline was tightened, and only those with official passes were allowed to enter the camp. Guards were mounted over every foot of the camp, and several exuberant rookies found themselves in the guard tent for their failure to obey the new orders.

Just as the field batteries were leaving the parade ground for their quarters about 5:30 o'clock a squad of recruits, 200 or more strong, filed from a train and marched toward camp. The men of the batteries were still under the eyes of the United States Army officers, but there was no such restraint from the rookies, who tossed their hats in the air and shouted out greetings.

Lee W. Berry, of Asbury Park, superintendent of the New York & Long Island Railroad, was in camp yesterday afternon in consultation with officers. He would not say what arrangements had been made for transportation of the troops.

MANY PLAINFIELD AUOTISTS IN CAMP

Scores Planning to Make Trip to Sea Girt Tomorrow to Spend the Day.

Scores of Plainfielders are planning to make the trip to Sea Girt tomorrow and the Daily Press office was besieged this morning for information relative of the best routes and time necessary. There will be someone at the Press office until late tonight and any further information requested will be gladly furnished.

Among those seen at the Troop D headquarters yesterday were: Mrs. William L. Righter, Mrs. John J. O'Donohue and daughter, Mrs. Helen Shoemaker; Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, Mrs. Maxwell Perkins, Miss Smith, Mrs. W. B. Tyler, Mrs. George McGrew and Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick.

Among those who will go from here tomorow are Mrs. Story Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. Mellick, Joseph Van Boskerck, Miss Ruth Timpson, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk and Mrs. Brown Ralston.

DRINKING WATER EXAMINED.

Troopers at the cavalry camp were assured yesterday by a State inspector that the water being used for cooking and drinking at the camp was of high grade. It is practically imposible for the Plainfielders to get cold fluid for drinking purposes and this gave rise to the rumor that the water was not fit to drink. The tests yeserday set aside this belief.

—An inefficient office helper may try to turn the tide against you in many a possible business transaction.

CO. K EQUIPMENT SENT TO INFANTRY IN CAMP

Tentage and other equipment belonging to Company K in this city was confiscated by the State department yesterday for use at the Sea Girt camp. This was forced by the fact that the infantry already at the range is poorly supplied and the Federal government has so far neglected to fulfill the demand made upon it by General Sadler. A quantity of material from the Elizabeth armory and the Trenton armory was also transferred to Sea Girt. This will leave the Plainfield company short in the event that it is called to Sea Girt.

AFTER NEW SUPPLIES.

Efforts are being made this afternoon by General Wilbur F. Sadler to secure new supplies for Company K and the Second Regiment to replace those taken last Monday night to Sea Girt to supply the recruits already on the range. If a call should come at this time the Second and Third Regiments would be entirely unprepared, and recognizing this, General Sadler wired to Washington for permission to purchase everything that is needed to supply the small army of recruits already at Sea Girt and restore to the Second and Third Regiments the equipment which was forwarded from their respective headquarters last Monday night when nothing was known of the demoralization of the United States Quartermaster's Department.

TWO PARTIES IN CAMP.

An automobile party consisting of Clarence L. Thorn, Walter Weber, Arthur Perrin, Charles Lee, Joseph Bebout, James Bebout and Al Utsinger visited the Troop D camp yesterday. Another auto containing Edward Harding, Daniel McDonald and Dr. Chalmers L. Crist arrived early in the morning and spent the day in camp.

COMPILING STATISTICS.

Joseph G. Carty, an employe in the local commercial office of the New York Telephone Company, is at Sea Girt making a record of the names, addresses and telephone numbers of the troopers and militiamen for his concern. He will probably remain there until the troops leave for the border.

CAPTAIN PETERSON AFTER RECRUITS FOR COMPANY K

Captain Charles Peterson, of Company K, announced this morning that his company would recruit up to full war strength immediately. This number is 150 and men of good character are wanted. Two cooks are especially needed and one man who can talk Spanish will be an invaluable necessity.

The armory will be open every evening, except Sundays, and Captain Peterson will be present to supply any further information. Men wishing to enlist should apply at once for the roster will be filled up rapidly and no more than 150 can be taken.

COMMENDS SUGGESTION.

Captain Charles Peterson, of Company K, last night sent a letter to George P. Mellick, commending the suggestion urging the formation of a strong local organization to undertake carefully the immediate work of looking after any family of an enlisted man which may need help, financially or otherwise. In speaking of the movement this morning, Captain Peterson classed it as a most worthy one and declared that he hoped all would unite in helping it along.

TELEGRAM FROM MOTHER.

Trooper John C. Mickle received a telegram from a physician in San Francisco yesterday bringing the news that his mother had been prostrated since receiving the news of his enlistment, and that if he went to the border it would in all likelihood result in her death. This news cast a gloom over Mickle and his tent associates, and he was the recipient of many sympathetic words last night.

BUT ONE MAN ILL.

Every man in Troop D was examined by Major Quimby, the camp physician, yesterday, and only one was reported ailing. He is John Logan, of Dunellen, and was given sick leave all day yesterday. He is better today, however, and able to resume his usual duties. All of the other men are in the finest possible condition.

TROOPER TAPS

One of the first things a person notices on entering the Troop D camp is a cemetery on the hillside. This is within a stone's throw of the tents and is located in such a position that it may be seen from any part of the tented city.

According to some of his fellow troopers, Arthur T. Goodenough has been "white meat" for a score or more of insurance agents since coming to camp. He has interviewed them all and the guardsmen are wondering just how many thousands of dollars worth of insurance he is carrying.

An unruly Ford crashed through the camp fence and landed in a ditch late yesterday afternoon. Trooper John Rinehart, who was doing sentry duty, rendered "first aid" to the Ford, this being the first time Johnny has had an opportunity to pet one of these gasoline eating insects since he quit chauffeuring for Chief of Police Kiely to work for Uncle Sam.

One trooper received a box from some admiring friends in Plainfield yesterday containing among other things a cap pistol, some poker chips, a novel on "How to Fight the Indians," and various other significant articles.

Such communications as the following have been received in letters by the recruits:

"Take my order for a bushel of Carranza's whiskers."

"Haven't weakened. Save that place for me."

"We trust that no greaser's bullets get nearer to you than they are now."

Lewis Alberts, of Hoboken, has been voted the most popular man in camp; Johnny Rinehart is the hardest worker, Captain Bordon is the best horseman, "Ned" Stevenson is the most happy-go-lucky, Austin Andrews makes the most fuss about the work he does, Lieut. Charles best looks the part of a real soldier, Jack Caulfield is the expert on new horses, "Stump" Burr writes more letters than all the rest put together, Warren Ackerman is the most unpopular because of the "habit" he has fallen into of waking the men up with the chickens, Reginald Rowland is the troop card fiend, Johnny Logan is the official gloom chaser, Hartley Mellick and Fred Stevenson have appointed themselves a reception committee of two to receive the fair sex at the gate, Aaron Higgins is the most homesick, and "Turk" Righter and Roy Cox have been voted the best corporals.

Roger Mellick is mourning over the fact that his horse was put temporarily out of commission yesterday by W. B. Tyler, who tried to mount it. Trooper Tyler got his foot tangled up and before he unloosed himself from the animal he had scratched the horse's stomach considerably. Tyler was thrown but was only slightly injured.

Johnny Logan nearly froze to death last night. He was caught prowling around the horse enclosure by a sentry with a bundle of hay under his arm. Logan was gathering the hay to make himself a warmer bed but informed the sentry that he was delegated to carry it to the horses and got away with it.

An ice cream and frankfurter man appeared at the camp yesterday afternoon and was striped of his wares before he had been there ten minutes. The troopers have cultivated a wonderful ice cream appetite.

Instructions for Plainfield Visitors

Although the best time to see the Plainfield troopers at the camp is after 6 o'clock at night when all but the sentries are off duty, odd moments during the day are available and visitors are always welcome at the camp. Many Plainfielders who made the trip yesterday went under the impression that Troop D was located on the Sea Girt range with the infantry. The local troopers are camping with Battery A, of East Orange, and other troops on the Buckalew farm, about three-quarters of a mile from the range. This may be reached by crossing the railroad tracks coming out of the main entrance to the Sea Girt range and proceeding inland two blocks, then turning to the left for one block and turning to the right again at the next corner, this road leading right into the troop headquarters. All of the roads to the shore are in excellent condition and the run to Sea Girt should be made in less than three hours under normal conditions. Those persons bringing eatables and wearing apparel of any description to the troops should first report to Quarter Master Sergeant Sherman B. Joost, who will see that they are admitted all right.

Hundreds of visitors are expected at Sea Girt tomorrow and owing to the limited parking facilities for automobiles it would be better to leave machines in Spring Lake, Manasquan or in Sea Girt proper, as the roads will be chokeed nearby the Buckalew farm. The thoroughfare is narrow and many narrow escapes from seious accidents occured yesterday.

Mails Are Slow, No Word From Home

Up to yesterday afternoon the Plainfield troopers had received none of the mail sent them by relatives at home. So heavy has been the inrush of mail matter at the Sea Girt postoffice since the troops arrived that considerable difficulty has been experienced in handling it. The main question passed among the men yesterday was: "What has become of the Daily Press?" This was answered in the early evening when a bundle of papers containing copies of every issue of the Press since the troopers left home arrived. These were literally devoured by the men during the evening, it being the first news many of them had received from Plainfield. The Daily Press was forwarded to the camp the same day the guardsmen left Plainfield and has been tied up at the postoffice with other mail matter.

According to Postmaster Hoagland mail left at the local postoffice at any time up to closing time should reach Sea Girt the first thing in the morning. Mail sent out by the troopers before 5 o'clock at night should reach here on the first mail the following morning. It would be better for those persons who have packages to send to either ship them by special messenger or make a trip to the headquarters themselves. There is no telling how long the cavalry will be at Sea Girt and the mail may be held up until after they leave for the border.

LONG years ago a gentleman of the old school, complimented on a keen interest in sporting affairs, despite his years, made this undying epigram: "There's no age in the kingdom of sport, my lad!" At that time the gentler sex was as little concerned with sports as it is today with prize fighting; but modern woman has taken the epigram of the fine old sportsman of that long gone generation as her particular slogan. Maid, matron and dowager, they all look alike in the kingdom of sport—this enchanting kingdom of sport in which all ages may meet on a plane of fetchingly youthful raiment!

Daughter, mother and grandmother may all wear the same sort of sport hat, the same short sport skirt and rubber-soled sport shoes, the same bright colored silk sport coat, the selfsame golfing rig or boating rig. The only distinction is made in the sport blouse. Here, at least, years must be conceded to; the young girl's middy with open neck and loose lines would be too cruel to a middle-aged face and figure. So the older woman, with her natty sport costume in grass green, orange or any other gay hue she fancies, wears a sheer, becoming blouse of exquisitely fine batiste or handkerchief lawn—or even of Georgette if she chooses—with a collar designed to give the greatest effect of becomingness. The older woman, also, very sensibly drapes her smart, severe sport sailor with a floating veil—a white or a green one if her tresses have turned gray.

The daintier type of sport shoe, of glazed kid as soft and pliable as glove kid, is delightfully easy on the foot, while some of the sturdier styles, of canvas or buckskin, with much stitching and overlapped seams are a bit trying on the feet until the newness has worn off. There are, however, very pliable, comfortable sport shoes of glove-soft kid with rubber sole and heel, if one is willing to pay a good price for such luxurious sport footwear. There are laced shoes and oxfords of snowy white washable kid which can be kept clean with a dampened sponge, and delectable styles with colored glazed kid strappings and trimmings on white kid. A very fashionable sport combination in footwear this year is white and tabasco brown—a fiery, reddish brown shade. One may also have white and green, white and blue and white and black sport shoes, to match various costumes.

Velvet in the Sport Kingdom.

The arrival of velvet in sportland, about June first, was rather a surprise to everybody—except of course the manufacturers, to whose prophetic vision are revealed sartorial secrets so long ahead that they must always feel somehow that they are living in the future. First arrived the velvet-banded hats, then hats with velvet tam crowns; followed velvet sport coats—jaunty little jackets cut open at the front and lined with colored silk, and handsome hip-length coats of brocaded panne velvet in lovely shades of pale pink, mauve and Nattier blue. A coat of this type, with heliotrope and rose flowers scattered over a pale blue ground was noted at a fashionable country club in Westchester last Saturday. The coat had soft, loose lines, confined under a broad belt of the material. Big patch pockets were faced at the top with white silk and the cuffs and wide sailor collar were of white silk also. The coat accompanied a sport frock of white washable satin, made very simply—to show it was a sport frock and not a more dressy, formal costume—but the combination of satin frock and pale blue, heliotrope and rose coat was the last word in daintiness. This maid wore a big, shady sport hat of white straw and pale blue satin, and her buttoned boots of white washable kid had high tops and high, curved heels. Beside her at the tea-table sat a pretty girl, glowing after an afternoon of tennis. She, too, was correctly garbed in sport raiment, in short skirt of white pique, middy of crash, rubber-soled tennis shoes of white kid with brown glazed kid trimmings and sweater of brown worsted. The two costumes illustrated very well the wide gamut of correctness in sport attire this summer.

The velvet crowned sport hat is a particularly smart feature of the season. It is usually in broad-brimmed sailor shape, of straw, and velvet is draped closely over the crown, or puffed loosely over it in tam fashion, a grosgrain ribbon tied in a careless bow covering the joining of velvet to hat around the base of the crown. One may tie the ribbon bow anywhere—at the center front, or back, or toward one side, according to fancy or becomingness. And by the by, when trimming your own sport hat, do not purchase narrow grosgrain ribbon for the crown band, the ribbon should be wide enough to double in half for both band and bow, and if you secure picot-edged ribbon the effect will be smarter.

Three Good Sport Coats.

Of the three sport coats pictured on today's page, the striped silk model is the most formal; but any of these coats will "fit the picture" in the outdoor life of summer. The silk coat is of heavy pongee in cream shade with orange stripes; collar, belt and trimming band are in plain orange.

This coat is lined with orange satin of a lighter shade than the collar and fastens easily with one fastening at the waistline. The model may be had also in other color combinations.

The coat of rose-colored wool jersey is loose and informal in line and the pouch pockets, carelessly tied sash and deep, soft cuffs and collar increase the suggestion of easy comfort. The skirt of wool jersey matches the coat and the roll-brim sport hat of rose-colored straw has a crown of rose and white-striped silk. Very correct sport shoes of white glazed kid, with white rubber soles and heels complete this excellent tennis costume. The knitted sport coat has a style all its own, partly due to its extreme length and partly to the dainty collar and cuffs which are of white and black worsted, the coat itself being in a soft, sage green tone. Another distinctive touch is the very broad trimming band which runs down the front edges and around the bottom of the coat. This band is knitted with two threads of the green Shetland wool; collar and cuffs are knitted with black and white Germantown wool. A particularly smart velvet-trimmed sport hat accompanies this green sweater-coat. The hat is of cream milan with a broad black velvet band and bow and several large pearl-headed pins thrust through the black velvet. Below the green coat is a skirt of green and white striped panama cloth, cut in bias gores so that the stripes meet obliquely at the seams. A skirt of this sort should be about three and a half yards wide at the foot—four if one wishes a very good flare. This skirt is shown more plainly on another figure, in combination with a white washable satin sport blouse, white straw hat trimmed with folded white grosgrain ribbon and buttoned boots of tabasco brown glazed kid with white washable kid tops.

Pantalets With the Bathing Suit.

The full bloomers which accompanied last season's short bathing tunic have retired in favor of frilled pantalettes which are the newest coquetry of the coquettish bathing costume. Pictured is a very modish little bathing suit of white taffeta, slashed and piped in various captivating ways on skirt and bodice and worn over pantalettes of rose and white striped taffeta. The circular flounce of the skirt is lined with the same striped silk and the white satin bathing slippers are laced up with pink ribbons over white silk stockings. To match this engaging bathing costume there is a Coolie hat of white rubber with a fitted headpiece to protect the hair and trimming of pink rubber. White or flesh-colored stockings are very much "the thing" with bathing suits this season and one has become so used to them that the eye is no longer startled by the obvious suggestion of bare legs between dark bathing skirt and slippers.

For the Horsewoman.

For summer days, naturally, is the cool riding suit of biscuit-toned crash, trim and correct to the last detail and accompanied by irreproachably correct accessories. The cross-saddle riding habit is no longer stared at askance; it has been adopted for town wear in the park as well as for informal country wear and the percentage of women riders who cling to the old, dangerous side-saddle costume grows smaller and smaller. This riding rig of biscuit crash comes from an undisputed authority on riding garb for women and the cut of the coat, giving a long, lithe waist and trim shoulders, is faultless. Below the coat are perfectly fitting riding breeches, tucked into boots of tan glazed kid, the tops stiff and substantial to help control the horse, the foot part soft and supple for free action in the stirrup. Top-coats of lightweight wool mixture are left at the riding club, ready to don immediately over the crash costume when the rider dismounts after her active exercise and prepares to stroll or motor home through the public street.

Taking Summer Comfortably

PERHAPS nothing in the world gives a greater proportion of contentment for the money expended than a couch hammock. Until one has experienced the luxurious laziness of an afternoon with a book in one of these restful affairs, either on a shady veranda or out under the trees, it is impossible to imagine the solid comfort of a modern couch hammock. The firm, flat mattress supports the body restfully. There is none of that sinking sensation that is so disagreeable in an ordinary hammock; and one can move about at will without getting completely out of the hammock to adjust one's skirts. These delightful couch hammocks cost only a trifle over five dollars and may be swung between two trees that are not much more than the length of the couch apart. If no trees are available, a strong stand may be secured for about half the cost of the hammock. One may even have a luxurious awning for a little more. For less than it would cost to board for a week at a seaside resort one may own a complete hammock outfit that on the home porch or in the yard will be a source of restful content all summer long.

KERCHIEFS DRAPE SPORT HATS.

THE very latest trick of fashion is to draw a huge silk kerchief across the crown of the sport sailor, the knotted corners at either side reposing on the hat brim. At back and front the corners are tucked underneath the folds of the drawn-across kerchief. These sport kerchiefs are of cotton in gay bandana patterns, and in crepe de chine in brilliant Bakst and Japanese effects. There are orange grounds with Japanese border designs in black that are particularly stunning. One of these orange and black kerchiefs adorns a bangkok sport hat that accompanies an orange silk sport coat, worn with black and white awning striped silk jersey skirt and sport shoes of white washable kid with the new tabasco brown glazed kid trimming.

Summer Lingerie

FIFTY years ago woman changed from wool to muslin when warm weather arrived; nowadays the change is from silk to chiffon. Bulky underwear has gone out of vogue and the softer and finer lingerie garments are, the more is milady entranced by them.

The very latest underwear fabric is chiffon — perishable enough surely to suit the most extravagant taste, but ah, how lovely are these floating, filmy "undies"—and how irresistible! Chiffon sets for the June bride include nightgown, chemise and pantalon; or nightgown and envelop chemise, the latter combines two undergarments in one. More and more women each year, say the shops, are taking to envelope chemises. They solve a problem in the eliminating of bulk under the frock; they simplify dressing in a hurry, and they are delightfully cool and comfortable for summer. The envelope chemise is donned under the corset, taking the place of chemise and drawer. Over the corset go brassiere and petticoat; making, in addition to the corset, only three articles of underwear to be donned. Could anything be simpler?

Chiffon lingerie in rainbow effect is the last word in luxurious underwear. Two layers of chiffon are used and the combinations are enchanting; rose over pale daffodil, mauve over pink, flesh over ciel blue and even black over white. The garments are made with extreme simplicity for of course the color combination is the first [illegible] for they must be dry-cleaned; an ordinary tubbing would ruin their texture. For the June bride is a set of white chiffon lingerie—chemise, pantalon and nightgown. The chiffon is accordion plaited, the chemise and gown having shallow yokes and the pantalon a ribbon belt. The accordion plaited chiffon is hemstitched to the yoke, the chemise being supported on the shoulder by white ribbons while the nightgown is more elaborate, with short sleeves edged with plaited chiffon frills.

Shell pink batiste lingerie floods the market this season and these once luxurious garments may now be worn by anybody for prices are extremely reasonable. The delicate pink tint washes out after a while but a little rose-colored crepe paper in the rinsing water will restore it—this a hint for the laundress. A pink batiste nightgown with pink satin ribbon run between groups of pin tucks to define an Empire yoke, may be had for a dollar; a dainty pink batiste chemise for the same price. For a pink crepe de chine gown or chemise one must pay from two or three dollars upward.

New this year are nightgowns of very sheer striped batiste, a material almost as transparent as chiffon. The satiny striping on the gauzy ground gives a charming effect of coolness.

One nightgown, an example of the best type of exclusive French lingerie, is of soft, fine batiste, white, with a yoke of dotted net vandyked with [illegible] charm. Rainbow lingerie of fine batiste is also very dainty. In these garments two fabrics are not used together, the batiste itself being in soft, blended pastel tints to give the rainbow effect. A nightgown of this type, sleeveless and finished with picot edging, may be had for about a dollar. The rainbow chiffon garments are of course rather expensive and [illegible] is entirely made by hand, even to the buttonholed slashes through which the pale pink ribbons are run in yoke and sleeve.

The petticoat takes on a new lease of life, this summer, with the increased fullness of skirts. Even the cheaper models at a dollar and under are considerably fuller than last year, and one may obtain nainsook and embroidery petticoats in five and six-yard width—paying a substantial price of course for so many yards of embroidery trimming. One very pretty, moderately priced petticoat has a bias flounce of nainsook inset with lace and embroidery medallions and three rows of lace trimming; another model has an embroidery flounce set on over rows of lace. There are very wide nainsook petticoats distended with one or two hoops of featherbone tubing run through casings; other wide petticoats distend the frock by ruffles alone, sometimes five or six overlapping ruffles of embroidery being set on from hem to knee. Color is a feature of the summer petticoat which does not depend on a bow of ribbon for its coquetry. Very charming models have flounces scalloped and embroidered in color, the embroideries taking the form of bees, butterflies and even birds, as well as flowers. Then there are petticoats of white silk—taffeta or washable satin—and even of white sateen, with featherbone cordings or facings to make them set out crisply from the ankles. All these petticoats are beautifully fitted over the hips with a snap-fastened closing rather than the bulky, old-style drawstrings.

An elaborate dancing petticoat of net and lace is distended with featherbone tubing over the hips. The trimming of pink ribbon in bands and festoons is very coquettish and under the distended lace petticoat is another of accordion plaited net with a smoothly fitting satin yoke over the hips.

PERSHING WILL BE ORDERED TO "TAKE" U. S. PRISONERS IF THEY ARE NOT RELEASED BY CARRANZA

WILSON TO ASK CONGRESS FOR AUTHORITY TO USE ARMY IN FORCING DEMANDS ON MEXICAN GOVERNMENT.

CAPT. MOREY REPORTS ON CARRIZAL FIGHTING

New York and Massachusetts Militiamen Off to Border—Mediation Proposal Will Not Be Considered by Wilson Until Answer is Heard From Carranza—He Must Give up U. S. Soldiers Or Fight for Them—N. J. Will Be Called on Soon.

Washington, June 25.—President Wilson will go before Congress soon—probably tomorrow—to present facts concerning the Mexican situation and ask for authority to use American troops in the threatened conflict with that country. This authority will be given immediately, and unless Carranza has released the eighteen troopers of the 10th U. S. cavalry now being held prisoners by that time, Gen. Pershing will be ordered to "take" them.

A demand for the release of these prisoners has been made. It allows of no diplomatic "squibbling," but states that if the soldiers are not turned over to their regiment at once American troops will take steps to recapture them. Efforts of South American diplomats to delay action by proposing friendly mediation will fail, because no step was taken until the demand of Carranza for the release of the prisoners was made and the United States will carry out the threat made in this note if it is not complied with at once. If the prisoners are released mediation may be accepted but not until then.

Feverish haste is being shown in completing mobilization of militiamen to be sent to the border. These men are needed to protect American soil from invasion while the seasoned regulars are released for fighting in Mexico. New York and Massachusetts troops go tonight. New Jersey will follow soon.

Previous stories of the massacre at Carrizal as told by horse holders have been verified in detail by the report of Capt. Morey, who was found by a rescue detachment of the 11th cavalry. Morey was wounded and ordered his men to leave him on the desert that they might make their way to safety. While dying, as he thought, on the sands of Mexico, he wrote a report of the fighting and this has reached Gen. Pershing.

His report follows:

"Mexico.

"June 21, 1916, 9:15 a. m.

"To Commanding Officer at Ojo Frederico: My troop reached Ojo Santo Domingo at 5:30 p. m. June 20. Met C Troop under Capt. Boyd. I came under Capt. Boyd's command and marched my troop in rear for Carrizal at 2:15 a. m., reaching open field to southeast of town at 6:30 a. m.

"Capt. Boyd sent in a note requesting permission to pass through the town. This was refused; state we could go to the north, but not east. Capt. Boyd said he was going to Ahumada at this time.

"He was talking with Carranza commander. Gen. Gomez sent a written message that Capt. Boyd could bring his force in town and have a conference. Capt. Boyd feared an ambush. He was under the impression that the Mexicans would run as soon as we fired.

"We formed for attack, his intention being to move up to the line of about 120 Mexicans on the edge of the town. We formed, C troop on the left in line of skirmishers, one platoon of K troop on right of line and another K troop platoon on the extreme right, echeloned a little to the rear.

"When we were within 300 yards the Mexicans opened fire, and a strong one, before we fired a shot. Then we opened up. They did not run. To make a long account short, after about an hour's fire, in which both troops had advanced, C troop to position of Mexican machine gun and K troop closing in slightly to the left, we were very busy on the right keeping off a flank attack. A group of Mexicans left town, went around our rear and led our horses off at a gallop.

"At about 9 o'clock one platoon of K troop, which was on our right, fell back. Sergeant said he could not stay there. Both platoons fell back about 1,000 yards to the west, and then together with some men of C troop who were there these men scattered.

Boyd Killed Early and Adair Was Missing.

"I was slightly wounded. Capt. Boyd, a man told me, was killed. Nothing was seen of Lieut. Adair after fight started, so man I saw stated.

"I am hiding in a hole two thousand yards from the field and have one other wounded man and three men with me.

"MOREY, Captain."

Mediation Offer Not Popular.

Washington, June 26.—The conference between Secretary Lansing and Senor Calderon, Bolivian minister in Washington, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Minister, it is believed, will urge Mr. Lansing to accept in principle a plan of mediation which several of the Latin-American republic are formulating. It is reported that Carranza has signified his acceptance of the principle. Administration officials, however, do not think there is the slighest hope in the mediation proposals since Carranza already has received an ultimatum from the American government which he must accept or otherwise be prepared to meet the gravest consequences.

Massachusetts Troops Off Today.

New York, June 26.—Word was received by Col. Bellinger, quartermaster general of the U. S. Army, in charge of transportation at Governor's Island, that the New York, New Haven and Hudson River Railroad would have trains ready for the first regiments of the Massachusetts troops that are to go to El Paso, Texas. Entrainment of the New York State troops that are to go to Brownsville, Texas, had not yet been arranged early this afternoon.

No More Wireless to Europe.

New York June 26—.The Postal Telegraph and Cable Company advises that no more traffic for Europe to go by wireless via Sayville will be accepted until further notice. Wireless communcation has been temporarily interrupted.

Report New Battle

El Paso, Texas, June 26.—Mexican troops are marching toward Villa Ahumada to meet 3,000 American troops reported to be in that vicinity. Already there have come unconfirmed reports that the two forces have come in conflict.

First Chief Carranza's attitude is forecast in El Paso del Norde, the official journalistic mouthpiece of the de factor Government in Juarez.

The hint given by the Mexican newspaper is taken by American officials here as making it practically certain that war will be declared and the long expected move through Juarez will begin.

TAFT SEES WAR AHEAD FOR U. S.

This Country Has Gone Too Far in Mexico to Turn Back, He Says.

WILL TAKE THREE YEARS

Preparedness Would Have Prevented Present Trouble—He Urges Big Army and League to Enforce Peace.

War with Mexico will last two or possibly three years, if it comes, according to former President William Howard Taft, who spoke at the Community Chautauqua Saturday evening, and the distinguished guest was of the opinion that intervention is the only way out of the present trouble with our Southern neighbor.

He called Mexico "an international nuisance," and, while refusing to discuss acts of the Wilson administration that have led up to the crisis now existing, said that the United States had gone too far to turn back.

"We must protect the honor of our country," said Mr. Taft. "We must protect our border and our citizens. We must go on now."

President Wilson will need 250,000 troops when he goes to Mexico, said the ex-President, and the figures are those of the Taft chief-of-staff, who studied the problem, and the first duty of these troops will be to occupy every city and every port in the country. The warfare that will follow will result in a great drain on American manhood, he believes, and many men will be lost through ambush and guerilla warfare, but "we must do our duty. That duty requires, however, that hereafter we shall not be caught where we haven't enough troops to guard our border."

Mr. Taft's subject was 'Our World's Relationships," and his ad-

Paris, June 25.—German troops continued their tremendous efforts against the French positions on the Verdun front last night, but the attacks broke down before the stubborn resistance of the defenders. The French War Office in its communique today stated that the German assaults were not only repulsed, but that French counter-attacks won back part of the ground which the Germans had captured the eastern side of the Meuse. The struggle around the fortified village of Fleury is still in progress. There has been no let up in the intensity of the bombardment. A great artillery duel is raging on both sides of the Meuse river.

At one wedding, Miss Katherine Dobbe, of Bayonne, became the bride of Range Burch, a member of Co. I, of that place, and at the other wedding, K. T. Shannon, of Battery A, East Orange, took Miss Dorothy Bird, of East Orange, for his bride. The ceremonies were performed in the presence of the soldier boys, and of course, the couples were showered with congratulations. The honeymoon trips were postponed to a future time.

SCHOOL TEACHER'S GRIEVANCE SETTLED

Verdict "Satisfactory to Both Parties Concerned" is Announced at Hearing.

A settlement that was "satisfactory to both parties concerned" was the way the final hearing at Scotch Plains this morning ended before Assistant State Commissioner of Education John C. Enright, in which the Fanwood Township Board of Education was made defendant in a complaint lodged by Miss Mary Tucker Merrill, was termed by the attorneys for Miss Merrill and the Board. Miss Merrill, upon the strength of a contract that has not yet expired, asked for back pay from the time the kindergarten in School No. 1, which she taught, was abolished.

A half hour after the hearing, which hard been adjourned from June 15, was resumed, Frank Blatz and R. C. Nichols, attorneys for the Board of Education and Miss Merrill, respectively, together with the members of the Board of Education, had a consultation and at the end of that time the commissioner announced that the matter had been satisfactorily settled.

When questioned as to the terms of the settlement it was said that the Board of Education had agreed to pay Miss Merrill her salary up until the end of the present school year on the condition that she send in her resignation and relieve the Board from the terms of her contract.

SUSTAINS INJURY TO KNEE IN PECULIAR ACCIDENT

George Meyers, of 720 West Third street, is lying in Muhlenberg Hospital, following a peculiar accident which befell him late Saturday afternoon on Grant avenue. Meyers was walking along the street when a baseball with which some young lads were playing came his way. While throwing the sphere back he made a misstep and wrenched his kneecap so badly that it was found necessary to remove him to the institution. At the hospital it was said that it was deemed best to have an X-ray taken of the knee to determine the extent of the injury. This will be done in the course of a day or two.

WERE EQUIPPED AND TRAINED.

John C. Osborn, of this city, who was sergeant of Co. C, First Regiment, Volunteer Infantry, of Newark, during the Spanish-American War, takes exception to a published statement that during that war New Jersey sent out thousands of poorly-trained and poorly-equipped Guardsmen. He says his company averaged 80 men there being about 1,000 in the regiment, and that they were all fully equipped and thoroughly trained for service.

Mrs. William F. Coe and daughter of Summit avenue, have returned home after spending a week at Chester, Pa.

TWENTY PLAINFIELD TROOPERS WILL LEAVE FOR BORDER WITH NEW JERSEY MILITIA TONIGHT

IDENTITY OF TROOP D MEMBERS WHO WILL BE TRANSFERRED TO NEWARK DETACHMENT NOT NOT KNOWN THIS AFTERNOON.

PART OF LOCAL EQUIPMENT WILL BE TAKEN

Cavalrymen Await Call to Muster into Government Service—One-half Will Probably Leave Sea Girt Tonight on Special Central Railroad Trains for Texas—Officers Will Be Left at Mobilization Camp.

(By Staff Correspondent)

STATE MOBILIZATION CAMP, SEA GIRT, Monday Afternoon.—Approximately one-half of the New Jersey forces mobilized here are preparing to move to the border witnin a few hours. Twenty of the best men in the Troop D, First Squadron, New Jersey Cavalry, a majority of whom are Plainfielders, will this afternoon become members of Troops A and C, of Newark, and a big portion of the equipment carried by Troop D will also be turned over to the Newarkers preparatory to entraining on the border specials. Forty-nine Central Railroad day coaches are "sided" at Sea Girt and the work of loading the train is now progressing rapidly.

Sixteen thousand National Guard troops, including a New Jersey infantry regiment, two troops of cavalry, two batteries of field artillery, an ambulance corps and a field hospital, will in all likelihood depart tonight. The infantry from New Jersey is the First, of Newark, commanded by Colonel Frazer. Major Harold D. Corbusier, of Plainfield, heads the Field Hospital Corps; the two troops are under command of Major Bryant; Battery A, of East Orange, is under Captain Landerman; Battery B, of Camden, is led by Captain Barnard, and the ambulance corps from Red Bank has Captain P. P. Rafferty as its leader.

Just what Plainfielders will be mustered into government service when the oaths are taken this afternoon remains to be seen but every man is anxious to be among those transferred to the Newark troops as they will be thus assured of going to Texas. This city is represented by several boys in the Field Hospital Corps and these are certain of making the trip with the first detachment.

It is practically certain that none of the Troop D officers will be included in the lot turned over to the Newark group and the portion of Troop D left behind tonight will almost certainly remain at Sea Girt for a week or ten days at the least. Recruiting will be continued and the men will be sent immediately to the troop camp, where there routine of work now in force will be continued until further orders are issued.

From an authoritative source this afternoon it was learned that the special trains will depart from Sea Girt at about 5 o'clock this afternoon over the Pennsylvania Railroad by way of Philadelphia. This puts an end to the hope of the Plainfield guardsmen that they might proceed through Plainfield en route to the border.

Confusion prevailed in the camp all morning, the last minute hustle and bustle being in evidence on every side. About thirty-five per cent. of the Plainfielders' equipment was turned over to the Newark troops and this to some extent dampened the spirits of the local boys. On the other hand relatives and friends of the Plainfield troopers who are stopping at Sea Girt, Spring Lake and other nearby places, were rejoicing over the possibility of dear ones being left behind and hoping against hope that their relatives would not be among those picked for departure this evening.

All of the officers, as well as Governor Fielder, this morning expressed pleasure at having New Jersey represented in the first movement, this being in accordance with Governor Fielder's recent request that the good standing of the Jersey troops be given consideration in sending out the first batch to Texas.

The men in Troop D were given a thorough talking to by superior officers this morning and are all well qualified for duty. The natural rivalry for places among the first detachment exists but the rumor of hard feeling and dissension among the cavalry is absolutely without foundation.

The following troops have been ordered out:

New York—Four regiments of infantry, one squadron of cavalry, one battalion of field artillery, the Twenty-second Corps of Engineers, one signal corps battalion, one field hospital company and an ambulance company. The infantry regiments will be the Seventh, Seventy-first, Fourteenth and probably the twelfth. The cavalry command probably will be Squadron A.

Massachusetts—Four regiments of infantry, one squadron of cavalry, one battalion of field artillery, one signal corps battalion, one ambulance corps and one field hospital.

New Jersey—One regiment of infantry, two troops of cavalry, two batteries of field artillery, one ambulance corps and one field hospital.

Connecticut—Two regiments of infantry, two troops of cavalry, one field hospital, one ambulance corps campany.

In all there will be eleven regiments of infantry, one complete regiment of cavalry and one complete regiment of field artillery, with the usual hospital and ambulance units and signal corps for such a force.

The crack commands of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and Florida will be started for the border Tuesday or Wednesday.

STABBED IN FIGHT OVER A CARD GAME

Russian Party at 703 West Third Street Ends at Police Station.

As a result of a fight over a dispute arising out of a game of cards Frank Nickolnk, of 703 West Third street, was last night stabbed in the left side over the heart. George Delmont, of the same address, is under arrest charged with the stabbing and four other Russians living in the house are being held, one for running a disorderly house and the others as material witnesses. The knife blade struck a rib when it entered the breast of Nickolnk. He will be able to be in court this afternoon, it is believed. John Roman is being held for running a disorderly house, gambling and as a witness. Peter Dambrouski, Frank Delic and Adam Slinkiin are held as witnesses. The fight ocurred early last night. Patrolmen Hendershot, Nolan and Messler responded and arrested all the men in the house. They will be tried before Judge De Meza at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, of West Seventh street, will leave the early part of July for a western trip, which will include a stop with their daughter in Chicago.

"HOLY JUMPERS" DEFY LAW AGAIN

Women Try to Hold Street Meeting and Are Sent to Jail.

Another attempt on the part of the "Holy Jumpers" to hold a street meeting in Plainfield in defiance of the law was made last night and it resulted in the arrest of two women, Miss Lavina L. Leach and Mrs. Laura Wilson were the two women arrested.

They appeared on the corner of Madison and Front street, in front of the postoffice shortly after 7:30 last night and started to a public meeting. Within a few minutes Patrolman Muir, stationed at Park and Front, saw the crowd gathering and investigated. He asked the women if they had a permit from the Mayor to hold a meeting. They said they did not. The officer then ordered them to stop, and on their refusal he arrested them.

Both women were arraigned in police court this morning but Judge DeMeza continued the cases until 4 o'clock this afternoon. They have suspended sentences over them

William Barlow and family, of Prospect avenue, are spending the summer at Alfred, Maine.

MISS HELEN SAVITZ BRIDE OF F. W. CONLIN

Rev. W. I. Steans Officiates at Attractive Home Wedding in Westfield.

A wedding of local interest took place in the Presbyterian church of Westfield Saturday night at 8 o'clock when Miss Helen Elizabeth Savitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Savitz, of that place, became the bride of Fred W. Conlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Conlin, former residents of Kensington avenue, this city. The ceremony was performed in the presence of several hundred relatives and friends of the couple by the pastor of the church, Rev. W. I. Steans.

The bride wore a charming gown of white satin and tulle, with a satin court train trimmed with real lace. She wore a tulle veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. Her matron of honor, Mrs. Thomson, wore a gown of blue taffeta and tulle trimmed with silver lace. The maid of honor was Miss Elizabeth Fowler. The latter wore a pink taffeta gown trimmed with tulle and silver lace and both she and Mrs. Thomson carried arm bouquets of pink roses. The best man was Charles G. Barth, a classmate of the groom in Lehigh University. The ushers were the Messrs. Harry H. Conlin, Bruce Conlin, William E. Wales, Philip Satitta, of Westfield; Charles Satitta, of Brooklyn and Julius Saenz, of Bogota, Columbia, South America.

The reception followed the wedding at the home of the bride's parents to which about forty guests were invited. Following the wedding trip the couple will reside in Westfield. The bride was graduated from Barnard in 1910, while Mr. Conlin is a graduate of Lehigh University, '07. At present he is vice-president of Conlin & Company, New York.

BIRDS HIGH IN THE AIR.

Out of Human Sight They Can Hear Calls From the Earth.

On Sept. 30, 1894, an astronomer at Shere, England, was studying the sun through a telescope. Every few seconds during the ten minutes he watched a bird was seen to pass slowly through his field, flying in a southerly direction, but with the naked eye not a bird could be seen.

Our ears really tell us more than our unaided eyes about the day fliers which are traveling far up in the sky. With nothing to turn them from their course sound waves carry surprising distances either up from the earth or down to it.

Balloonists tell us how clearly they can hear voices of people who are scarcely visible to them. So we may hear the notes of passing birds which are traveling at too great a height to be seen. The mellow whistles of certain snipe and plover tell us that they are passing along the birds' air line when it is impossible for us to see them. But if we answer we may in time see a black speck in the sky which responds to our call and finally circles close overhead.

On one occasion in Central park, New York city, I heard the flutelike call of a yellow leg snipe which was migrating high over the city. Perhaps he was calling to some companion in the sky. Certainly there was nothing on the earth to attract him. But, putting my fingers to my lips, I whistled a loud imitation of his notes. Quickly he answered. I whistled again and soon could see a black dot circling high above me. Larger and larger it grew, louder and more frequent became his cry, and within a minute, much to the surprise of passersby, the bird was flying anxiously back and forth just over my head. But, unable to find the bird which had called to him, he soon mounted high in the air and continued his journey.—Frank M. Chapman in St. Nicholas.

THE PASS TO THE NORTH.

El Paso Was Given Its Name In 1598 by Juan de Onate.

As you near El Paso you catch a glimpse at Ysleta of the venerable church, now hopelessly "restored," that was built away back in 1682 after the Pueblo uprising. Does this sound like a remote date in American history? One is constantly surprised down here by the antiquity of the settlements.

El Paso is certainly no exception to the rule, for it was given its name in 1598 by Juan de Onate, one of the earliest explorers of New Mexico, who, having forded the Rio Grande at this point, called it El Paso del Norte—the pass to the north. Fifty years later the old church and mission at Juarez were built. But from that time until the Mexican war period the site of El Paso itself remained a ranch belonging to the Ponce de Leon family. After the American occupation it became a terminal point on the old overland trail from St. Louis to San Francisco, and the rumbling stagecoaches brought life and glitter to the saloons and gambling joints of the Calle El Paso.

The last half century has again vastly changed all this, and the border town has been completely submerged in the steady march of modern improvement.

Pioneer Plaza remains the center of the city's activities, to be sure, but upon it, instead of humble adobe homes and tawdry shops front two great hotels, several large department stores which display the very latest fashions, and the "largest all concrete building in the world."—Ernest Peixotto in Scribner's Magazine.

Scotch Plains, Fanwood

ADDITION TO BE BUILT; NO SCHOOL IN FANWOOD

A special election of the voters of this school district has been called by the Board of Education for July 5, at which time they will be asked to consent to the raising by bond issue a sum not to exceed $50,000 for the purpose of building an eight room addition to School No. 1, and furnishing it with desks and other necessities.

The announcement comes as a keen disappointment to residents of Fanwood who have been working for several months to get the Board to ask for a sufficient appropriation at the meeting to erect a four room school in the borough besides. A number of mass meetings were held and as a last resort a committee of five residents met the Board of Education in special session last week to present their views on the question.

The congested conditions in the schools has forced the Board to take drastic measures to relieve them and as the arguments advanced by the borough committee were evidently not strong enough to convince the Board that a school in that place would relieve the situation it was decided to ask the voters to appropriate money for the addition. At the the same time alterations will be made to the main structure so as to make it conform with the State laws.

OFFICERS PLEASED AS MOBILIZATION IS ACCOMPLISHED WITHOUT ONE HITCH

Militia of Every State Is Now Ready to Embark For Mexico on Moment's Notice—Some Interesting Side Lights.

Men Answered Call With Marked Enthusiasm and All Appeared Anxious to Leave For the Border.

BUGLES are sounding in every state in the Union. Bands are playing, and khaki clad men are drilling. The mobilization of the national guard is complete. The men are ready to entrain for the Mexican border at a moment's notice.

The mobilization call found the national guard of the United States prepared. The concentrations were accomplished with speed and dispatch. A few of the companies were lacking in guns and munitions.

The men answered the call with marked enthusiasm. While there were a few sad farewells between mothers, wives and sweethearts, optimism was general. Little did one realize that the soldiers were going away for a real war. The majority of the men rather looked upon the activity as a vacation and were anxious to see actual service.

War department officials who had charge of the mobilization were plainly pleased. They expressed satisfaction at the perfect manner in which all members of the guard gathered at the various concentration camps. No hitches occurred, and every precaution was taken to rush supplies and equipment to the different units.

Several of the regiments were lacking in certain articles. It was also necessary to examine the physical condition of the men as fast as they reached the different points of concentration.

The militia was organized on the twelve division plan prepared by the department and sent forward in properly organized units of brigades and divisions whenever circumstances demanded re-enforcement of the border patrol.

Approximately 100,000 men are at the disposal of the department under the twelve division plan, with their own field and brigade commanders properly attached. This plan, which has been the scheme on which the national guard has been constructed during the last few years, provides for assembling of the various units from the several states in twelve regular divisions. Under it it is possible to expand the strength of the militia to nearly 250,000 men on a war footing, and this may be done.

Army Reorganization.

The scheme of reorganization for the regular army under the new army bill has also been announced. It provides for the addition of seven regiments of infantry, two of cavalry, three of field and heavy artillery and two of engineers. The act takes effect July 1, and by the plan announced the new regiments composing the first annual increment of increase will be created on that date, giving General Funston twelve new regimental units.

Officers say the reorganization can take place on the border without impairing the efficiency of the force. All the officers necessary for the new regiments will be drawn from the existing organization, and promotions all along the line will follow. The effect will be to leave the army virtually without second lieutenants, and it is here that the additional officers provided for under the bill will be added.

There will be many promotions also among the enlisted men. New noncommissioned officers will have to be selected in both the old and new regiments, as it is planned to distribute the seasoned men equally. They will be found in the ranks of the privates, and the gap to be filled will be only in the grade of private.

An increase in the coast artillery is also provided for in the act, but so far no arrangements have been made for it. The reorganization will be made later, when more attention can be given to the coast guard.

The state troops are fed according to the allowance provided for the regular soldiers of the United States army. The average daily food each soldier will receive follows:

Fourteen ounces of fish.
Eighteen ounces of salt beef.
Sixteen ounces of fresh beef.
One egg.
One ounce of coffee.
One ounce rice.
One ounce potatoes.
Two ounces beans and butter.
Three ounces sugar.
Fourteen ounces cornmeal.
Bread.

The New Oath.

Under the provisions of the Hay-Chamberlain bill a new oath for militiamen is required. Regular army officers expressed deep gratification over the expressed willingness of the men to take the new oath, which is as follows:

I do hereby acknowledge to have voluntarily enlisted this ..... day of ..... 191... as a soldier of the national guard of the United States and of the state of ..... for the period of three years in service and three years in the reserve, under the conditions prescribed by law, unless sooner discharged by the proper authorities. And I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America and to the state of ..... and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever, and that I will obey the orders of the president of the United States and of the governor of the state of ..... and the officers appointed over me according to law and the rules and articles of war.

(Signed) .....

Under this oath the troops can be utilized in any way the president desires.

SCENES AT CAMP BEEKMAN, NEW YORK, WHERE SOLDIERS MOBILIZED, AND SWEETHEARTS AND WIVES SAYING GOODBY TO DEPARTING GUARDSMEN.

The Fight at Carrizal, Mexico.

The seventeen American soldiers, negro troopers of the Tenth cavalry, who were captured in the battle at Carrizal were taken to Chihuahua City, with Lem H. Spillsbury, a Mormon scout, employed by General J. J. Pershing, and were imprisoned.

Spillsbury said that Captain Charles T. Boyd commanded the Americans and, with Lieutenant Henry R. Adair, was among the killed.

Captain Moore, who was with the American detachment, was wounded in the shoulder, but escaped.

Spillsbury's story as announced by General Jacinto Trevino, commander of the Carranza forces in the north, was to the effect that seventy-six negroes, comprising Troop H of the Tenth, Captains Boyd and Moore, Lieutenant Adair and himself, composed the American detachment that encountered the Mexicans.

Spillsbury said he saw on the field the bodies of Boyd and Adair and at least eleven of the negroes.

Spillsbury's account follows:

"When we arrived at Carrizal Captain Boyd dispatched a courier to the jefe politico of the little village, advising him that we were on our way to Villa Ahumada.

"After we had waited some time Lieutenant Colonel Rivas came out and warned Captain Boyd that he had better turn back. Captain Boyd then explained that he was in pursuit of some bandits who he had heard had looted Santo Domingo and also was bound to catch a negro deserter who he had heard was in Villa Ahumada.

"In reply to this Lieutenant Rivas notified the American that if he attempted to advance he would have to pass over the dead bodies of the Mexicans. He advised Boyd that he had better not argue the matter.

"Rivas returned to the village to report to his superior officer, General Gomez, who sent out a note inviting the Americans to enter Carrizal for a conference. Captain Boyd declined.

"On this ground Gomez went out in person and insistently urged the Americans to retire, pointing out that his orders from his superiors necessitated his acting on them without further parley. General Gomez repeated these words as he walked away. Boyd merely answered, 'All right.'"

General Trevino's announcement then goes on to quote Spillsbury as saying that after General Gomez had retired to his troops, who were lined up outside the town, Captain Boyd ordered his men to advance, whereupon Spillsbury expostulated with him, arguing that a fight was sure to follow.

Spillsbury is reported as saying that Captain Boyd "obstinately seemed to think that the Mexican general was only bluffing," and the firing quickly began. He is quoted further:

"Captain Boyd and Lieutenant Adair fell mortally wounded. Captain Moore was wounded in the shoulder, and immediately the horses fled with the mounts, leaving behind eleven negroes and myself. We were forced to surrender.

"I saw the bodies of Boyd and Adair and at least eleven negroes on the field of battle."

Mexican authorities asserted that the prisoners had been well treated en route to Chihuahua.

REFUGEES CROWD FRENCH CITIES

Government Now Caring For Nearly a Million Persons.

LIVE ON 25 CENTS A DAY.

Included Among These Are 143,000 Belgians and 11,000 Servians—Others Come From Fortified French Cities Near Battle Lines—Some Earn Own Living.

Nearly a million people, the exact figures being 928,000, who have been driven from their homes are scattered throughout France and draw allowances from the government, half the number being under sixteen years of age. The greatest number, 762,000, are French, refugees from the invaded departments, from the fortified towns which could no longer keep "useless mouths" and from the danger zone of the front. The Belgians number 143,000; Alsace and Lorraine have sent 12,000 and Servia 11,000.

In addition to these refugees who need state aid, there are about 120,000 who have means of their own, but these decrease as their means become exhausted.

The first class of refugees to be aided was the "useless mouths" from fortresses like Maubeuge, Verdun, Toul, Epinal and Belfort. Before the war had lasted a fortnight 25,000 of these had to be provided with homes elsewhere.

After the battle of Charleroi and the rapid onrush of the Germans 115,000 Belgians and French had to be sent to the rear, and when Paris was threatened with an attack early in September 15,000 who had built homes within the zone of the capital's fortifications had to be moved.

Live With Private Families.

Refugees were first installed in empty buildings, schoolhouses, etc., but it was soon found that some regular principle must be adopted, and every family not touched by the war was called upon to receive a refugee family, the state paying the expenses.

The battle of the Marne slackened the inflow of refugees for a time, but when operations moved to the north the number became so great that they had to be moved not only by train, but by ships, which carried them from Dunkirk, Calais and Boulogne to La Pallice, whence they were distributed among the southwest departments. Many families who had been taken to Germany from the invaded districts were returned via Switzerland and had to be provided for.

The money aid given to refugees has been fixed at the same rate as the allowance made to the wives and families of mobilized soldiers, 25 cents a day for each adult and 10 cents for each child under sixteen.

When refugees had settled down and could earn something by their labor a difficult question had to be solved. It would manifestly be unfair to suppress the grant of a poor woman who could only earn, say, 25 cents a day, and yet those who could earn a living wage (and it must be remembered that the war had caused a great demand for labor) could not expect to receive a grant in addition. The question was left to the prefect of the department to decide with the aid of three members of a committee formed to distribute aid in kind the gifts of private individuals, beneficent societies, etc. No hard and fast rules were laid down, but any refugee who without valid excuse refused any offer of work which was properly paid and suited his or her capacities had the allowance suppressed.

Many refugees have found well paid work in munition factories and have thus been able to maintain themselves and co-operate directly toward their return to their old homes.

SON'S DEATH LIKE GRANT'S.

Former President's Smoking Habit Taken Up by Younger Man.

The real cause of the death of General Frederick D. Grant on April 1, 1912, was made public for the first time the other day. He died of cancer of the throat superinduced by the excessive use of tobacco. His father, General U. S. Grant, died from the same cause, and the malignant growth was attributed to the same agency.

The facts regarding the death of the younger Grant are contained in the following paragraph from an article by Dr. Robert Abbe of New York, senior surgeon to St. Luke's hospital, who was with him when he died, on "The Legacy of the Intemperate Use of Tobacco," which appeared in the Medical Record:

"I could not help reminding him (a patient) that one of our great national heroes smoked incessantly, as every one knew, and suffered and died from the consequences of disease of his throat. His distinguished son, also a heroic figure in our army, adopted the same habit, smoked equally incessantly and suffered and died of the same terrible consequences. This is a heavy price to pay for the intemperate indulgence of such a throat irritating and unnatural habit."

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

CUNNING NEST BUILDERS.

Humming Birds' Homes Are Not Hidden, Yet They Defy Detection.

Even in those parts of tropical America where, as in Colombia, humming birds are vastly numerous, it is almost impossible for the most experienced naturalist to find their nests, in this, although as a rule they are not hidden at all, the feathered builders relying for concealment upon the likeness of their tiny houses to the surroundings amid which they are placed. A hummer's nest always corresponds exactly in color with the branch to which it is attached. It may imitate a knot or other excrescence. Thus the Calliope humming bird of the western United States often builds on a dead pine twig, either upon or near a cone of similar size and hue.

Usually the nests of humming birds are cup shaped or turban shaped, and their material is always plant down. Such down, resembling cotton wool, but of more delicate fiber, is gathered from the stems of ferns and other plants. This is woven together with spiders' webs into a compact mass. Usually they ornament the outside of the nest with small feathers or lichens which they obtain by detaching them from the rocks where these humble plants grow. These they fasten with cobwebs all over the exterior of their tiny house.

When these wee architects suspend their nets from leaves or tendrils they are always weighted for stability in order that they may not be upset by every passing breeze. For this purpose the bottom is made very thick. But the most remarkable expedient is that adopted by the hill stars, which dwell far up near the snow line of the Andes. They weight the tiny suspended house on the lighter side with a pebble to give the proper balance. There is no question whatever that this is done, and many of the nests of such species preserved in collections are found to contain pebbles.—Rose L. Honeyman in St. Nicholas.

HE GOT STUCK IN THE MUD.

Then He Discovered the Magic Power of the Water Jet.

The water jet has been used for so many years in putting down and pulling piling that its discovery has long since been lost sight of. It was used during the civil war and for many years previous by government engineers.

Tradition has it that the discoverer of the advantages of the water jet was a government engineer and that his discovery was made in the following manner: It seems that along in the forties this engineer was building a wharf and was having unusual difficulty in putting down his piling. One day in wading around his boots became stuck in a tenacious mud, and he found it impossible to pull them out. There happened to be a hose near by, and one of the men handed it to the officer, the idea being that he would wash the mud away from his boots. The water was turned on, and the officer applied a stream to his feet.

To his surprise he sank deeper. He tried it again and went down still farther in the mud. By this time he was in up to his waist and still going down. Astonished by his discovery, he continued to apply the stream to his feet, and he might be going down yet had not his men come to the rescue and pulled him out by means of a small hand derrick.

Once on shore he began "to think the matter out." If a stream of water applied to a man's feet will cause him to sink deeper in the mud why wouldn't it have the same effect if applied to the base of a pile? He tried it, and the pile which had obstinately refused to go down before sank easily to place, and in that way, so runs the story, was discovered the use of the water jet for putting down piling. — Philadelphia Record.

A Losing Game.

"The average man fifty years of age," didactically began Professor Pate, "has eaten 16,000 pounds of meat, 17,000 pounds of bread and 4,600 pounds of vegetables, drunk 7,000 gallons of liquid"—

"And after going to all that expense and trouble," spoke up the old codger, "he has been unable to build up a structure that has anything like the unqualified indorsement of his friends and neighbors."—Judge.

A Prison Punster.

"The close confinement," said the prison visiting justice to a hardened old convict, "must affect you greatly."

"Yes," replied the facetious convict, "I find prison bars somewhat grating."

"Ah, life to you is evidently a failure," was the visitor's further comment.

"Yes; it's nothing but a cell," said the convict.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Reckless.

"Perhaps it is just as well that wives do not always know how husbands disburse their funds."

"How now?"

"My wife would have a fit if she knew I spent my 15 cents lunch money for a sandwich and a ten cent cigar."—Pittsburgh Post.

Improvements.

"Now that you have leisure you can improve your mind."

"I suppose so," replied Dustin Stax. "But a good mind is sometimes like a good piece of property. Overanxiety to improve it may spoil it."—Washington Star.

DRAWING A STAR.

Trying It This Way Is Said to Be as Funny as a Circus.

When your party is not making progress enough to suit you try the following on them: Take a large sheet of plain paper and draw a five or six pointed star on it. Have the star about ten inches wide from point to point. Then draw another star on the outside of the first one, so that a space of about half an inch is left between the two stars all the way around.

Then provide yourself with a hand mirror and a book. Place the paper flat on the table. Put the book end up on the side of the paper nearest you. Take the mirror and place it on the opposite end of the paper. Then looking into the mirror you should be able to see the whole star. Having provided yourself with a pencil, fix it on a spot inside the two lines of the star and proceed to draw another star on the inside the two lines by looking only at the star through the mirror.

The book is simply used to prevent your eyes dropping down to the drawing itself. If your pencil goes outside the lines or inside you have lost your turn.

Try it out and see what you can do. Some say it can be done, and others say it can't, but whether it can or can't has little to do with it; it will furnish enough amusement to keep a crowd convulsed for an hour.—Cleveland Dispatch.

What Is Good Water?

Good water is colorless, clear, free from suspended matter, of brilliant luster and free from smell or taste. Bad water may sometimes meet all these specifications and yet be full of germs. Rainwater is good; so is water from clear ice or from springs, lakes, large rivers and streams in uninhabited districts. Rainwater from polluted surfaces is bad; so is the water from snow ice, small ponds, streams and wells in inhabited places. Marsh water is bad, and streams below towns are almost certainly full of germs and sewage.—Outing.

Made It Hard Work.

First Maid—So you don't like to work for Lightbrows? Second Maid—You bet I don't. I worked for one pair of them—and never again! Him and her was fighting continually, and it kept me running back and forth between the keyhole and the dictionary all the time.—Puck.

As It Really Was.

On the morning after his first appearance on the stage the confident but untalented youth met a friend who had witnessed his first performance. "What do you think of my acting?" asked the would be Hamlet.

"That wasn't acting," replied the friend. "That was misbehavior."

WAR DAY TOURISTS HIT LONG TRAIL TO VISIT STATE NO. 49

TOTEM POLE, WRANGELL, ALASKA

Attu Island, in prospective state No. 49, is farther west of San Francisco than that city is west of Eastport, Me. Few realize that the Alaskan fjords equal those of Norway, that Alaska contains more than 200 immense and unmatched glaciers, some of them near neighbors to active volcanoes such as Wrangell, whose smoking summit forms the eastern end of a chain of living and dead lava peaks a thousand miles long.

The climatic variations are great. The coldest month of Sitka is no colder than that of St. Louis. The warmest months of San Francisco and Juneau are of identical record. Pt. Barrow is 300 miles within the Arctic Circle and has no sun for 40 days of the year.

If he leaves Vancouver on a nine-day trip in a Canadian Pacific Princess steamer, the traveller wakes next morning to his first view of the solemn fjord country. Seymour Narrows ushers him into smooth, island-dotted waters that lead to Alert Bay, where he may see 50-foot totem poles and the cedar lodges of the Kwatiutis.

Queen Charlotte sound is reached by evening and for the only time during the trip the vessel rides open water, while whales spout in the offing and the sharks sport in the last sunshine.

Wrangell Narrows is a fascinating and pulseless shadowland, where the vessel goes too slowly through the winding channel to break the reflections of the midnight sun. In Summdum Bay a hundred or more glaciers may be seen along the walls. The scenery is wild and the plunging bergs keep the fjord roaring like some vast foundry of the gods. Farther north, the Taku Glacier stretches a mile wide, the largest of the forty-five ice streams emptying into Taku Bay.

At the bottom of a 3,000-foot mountain is Juneau, the capital of Alaska, a well-built city, although there couldn't be found a naturally level spot on which to place a single large building.

Skagway is one day's trip up Lynn Canal. In the wild days of '98 Skagway was the door through which all the trail-hitters struck for the gold fields, taking the line of the present White Pass & Yukon Railway.

BETWEEN THE RAINDROPS AT SEA GIRT

TROOPERS' PLANS KNOCKED INTO A COCKED HAT BY WEATHER MAN

Storm That Broke Over Sea Girt Yesterday Morning Cast a Gloom Over the Camp—More Than 3,000 Visitors Arrived at Troop D Headquarters During the Day—Men Feel That They Should Be Given More Liberty in the Evenings—Much Speculation in the Result of Muster Into Government Service—No Church Services Held Yesterday.

STATE MOBILIZATION CAMP, Sea Girt, June 26.—It was gloomy in camp yesterday. The rain had continued to beat down all night, so that outside the tents everything was soaking, although the men had been able to keep comfortable all night and to keep the water out of their quarters, the latter being done by a successful system of ditches. When breakfast was served the soldier boys took their cups and pans, went to the cook tent and then hastened back to shelter.

There was not a man in Troop D who did not expect relatives or friends down for the day, but the weather conditions were such that these expectations were knocked into a cocked hat. As a result the two thousand or more visitors who did brave the elements and came to camp were received with the warmest greetings.

Sheets of driving rain and frequent sprays of dirty water caused by vehicles and horses passing up and down the camp streets made the lives of the newcomers miserable all day. Mud, grime, water and grass that had been soaked and pounded to a swamp-like consistency gave the camp streets an impassable appearance, but there was not a single person who visited it who did not brave these elements to personally inspect the quarters.

Women garbed in white and guady colored frocks, light shoes and still lighter stockings waded ankle deep through the canal-like passages and it did not take mother nature long to transform the neat appearance of those who had stepped from lavishly equipped motor cars into that of the most neglected personage imaginable. But the visitors were merry with it all, apparently resigned to getting mud soaked and willing to sacrifice expensive clothing for one last look at fond ones who may a week hence be miles away.

A small tent was erected at noon for the visitors but no dry furnishings could be located and those who had brought lunches decided that they might just as well eat them in the rain as under the damp and dismal canvas with its muddy flooring. The troopers rushed their plates to the mess tent and scooted back to their tents in some cases, while others apparently enjoyed a mixture of rain and chow in the middle of the street. Officers instructed the guardsmen to dig trenches around the tents as water sheds and in this matter the equipment was kept fairly dry. When the storm disappeared late in the afternoon the tent flaps were thrown wide open and an attempt made to dry out the interior.

Many of the men had planned to attend the open-air religious service at the Governor's Cottage, scheduled for 10:30. At that hour a steady shower was falling and everything around the knoll on which services are usually held was soaked. Sergeant Rolston took a detail to the Governor's Cottage but they were sent back. Catholic members of the company, twelve in all, went to Sea Girt.

There has only been one complaint heard in the cavalry camp, and that is general. The men feel that they are too closely confined in the evenings, and at other times when they may be off duty. In the infantry camp, at the regular Sea Girt grounds, the men are permitted leave after dark and scores of them have visited Manasquan, Asbury Park and other nearby resorts. There is no particular advantage gained in keeping the boys within the company streets, but the senior officers in command have decreed that a man must have a mighty good reason for wanting to get out before a pass will be issued. For instance one of the Red Bank boys in Troop B had to have an influential citizen of that community come to Sea Girt and intercede with one of the adjutant-general's staff in order to get permission for him to go home from Saturday until this morning in order to get married. The permission was finally procured.

At the infantry camp this is all different. In the evenings scores and hundreds of the men of the First, Fourth and Fifth Regiments, including in many cases rookies who have not even received their uniforms, are allowed to leave camp, provided they are all back by 9:30. The Plainfielders have relatives and friends by the score in nearby resorts, many of them owning automobiles. They could take the boys away for an hour or two and have them back in plenty of time for "taps" without in the least interfering with camp discipline or routine. Yesterday this discipline was somewhat relaxed and a number went to nearby resorts with friends.

The mail service is both good and bad. Sometimes letters get through promptly and at others there is great delay. The Sea Girt postoffice has never had to handle so much mail at one time before and it is swamped, especially with the newspapers and parcel post packages. In order to partially relieve this some mail is being cared for by the Spring Lake office, three miles further up the beach. But friends at home are advised to not be impatient if there is delay in getting replies to letters sent to the camp. The telephone company has installed 'phones in a tent on the camp ground and any trooper in case of great emergency can now be reached by 'phoning Manasquan 776. The best time is between 12 and 1 and 6 and 7 p. m. It is often necessary to "hold the line" for some time as the men are scattered over a wide area.

No one knows exactly what will happen when the men are mustered into the government service. Some are under the impression that any man can refuse to re-enlist and can leave at once for home. Even the officers do not know exactly about this, but the impression among them is that any man over 35 may drop out if he wishes to do so, while all others must remain and go to the border on Wednesday, if they go then. In Troop D there are said to be ten men who are over 35, and some have declared that they will not re-enlist for family reasons. But the large majority of the Plainfielders are looking forward to going to the border for actual service. Of course it is possible that every man who wants to go will not be able to do so, for they must all undergo another physical examination before being mustered into the Federal service. Most of this examining will be done by guard surgeons who have already been mustered in, including Major Harold D. Corbusier, of Plainfield, all being attached to the United States Medical Corps. No doubt some who have neglected their teeth or have weak vision will be rejected.

TAPS BLOWN OVER THE WEEK-END

Sergeant William L. Righter to Trooper "Stump" Burr—"Take the telephone booth detail from 3 to 4 o'clock this afternoon."

Burr—"Shall I take my gun or pistol along?"

Trooper Cherry (before Righter got a chance to answer)—"Why you poor simple brainless jelly-fish, do you think you could shoot anyone over the wire?"

Trumpeter Warren Ackerman and Troopers Jack Caulfield, John Sickler and other huskies threaten to form a regiment of their own in case the troop doesn't move to the border within twenty-four hours. It would be different from other detachments, however, inasmuch as Ackerman declares he would change the reveille hour from 4:30 to 9:00 in the morning and the mess call would be sounded six times a day instead of three.

Trooper Johnny Rinehart celebrated his twenty-second birthday yesterday. A friend in Dunellen sent him along a five spot as a present and now Johnny's figuring how he's going to spend it if the troop remains in one spot very much longer. It was suggested last night that Rinehart save the coin until he gets to Keansburg this summer.

Trooper Ferdinand Collins entertained his parents from East Orange yesterday and incidently induced them to leave a big box of choice eatables when they departed. His tent mates in Squad 4 are being watched by the hospital corps today.

One ambitious guardsman devoted last evening to writing forty-seven postals. He confesses forty-six of the number went to the fair sex. Won't there be a lot of weeping when this trifling youth sets sail for the border?

Being too far from the ocean to enjoy daily baths such as the infantry is having the troopers are doing the next best thing in throwing pails of cold water on each other every night. One of the older members declared today that these bucket brigades have a bath-tub full of hot water beaten ninety different ways.

Troopers Alpers and Caulfield had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday afternoon when detailed to assist in moving a wagon load of necessities from Sea Girt to the camp. The return trip was made later than anticipated and the driver was urging the horses on at a rapid clip when the chain of the tail-board on which the troopers were sitting snapped off. Both men were thrown heavily to the roadbed and were badly shaken up. Caulfield is now under the doctor's care suffering from a badly bruised hip.

The members of Troop D are wondering why those kind hearted women who distributed soap and towels among the guardsmen at Sea Girt neglected to show up at the Buckalew farm where the troop is located. Although they haven't any ocean to bathe in the cavalry can still make use of soap and towels.

Conspicuous among the things brought to camp yesterday by visitors were rubbers and arctics. Several dozen pairs of these welcome necessities arrived during the day.

So concerned were they over the safety of the fair sex wading through the river of mud and water yesterday afternoon that Chief Cook Eugene Johnson and his staff consumed more than two hours in doing the usual half hour's after dinner cleaning up. Johnson reprimanded his three assistants, but they accused him of being the worst offender in the lot and he finally owned up to it.

One of the features that has appealed to the troopers in the camp has been the fact that Captain Borden and his staff of officers have insisted on living in exactly the same manner as the most recent addition to the troop, even though their ranking entitles them to a better mode of life. Captain Borden sleeps on the same kind of a blanket and slicker bed and eats the same vituals out of the same utensils as the troopers.

The troop has not as yet been completely equipped with bags for straw and as a consequence a number of the men are sleeping with only their slickers and a blanket between them and the ground and their saddles for pillows.

Members of Troop D witnessed an interesting bit of army life yesterday morning, when one of the members of Battery A, of East Orange, located directly across the tent street from the Plainfielders, balked at leading an unruly horse to the corral and was sent to the guardhouse by the commanding officer. Considerable trouble has been experienced by the East Orange guardsmen in handling a carload of unbroken animals that arrived Saturday and one battery man was seriously injured yesterday when a steed kicked him in the face.

The Plainfielders are looking forward to a big afternoon today with the horses. Four hundred fine animals have been placed in an enclosure for the use of the troopers and the local cavalry will be given their pick. All are anxious to get good mounts and it is probable that there will be some fun when an attempt is made to bridle some of the more frisky animals.

Every man in the camp looks the better for his short sojourn at Sea Girt. They are all bronzed and acclimated and all are in the best of physical condition. Troop D has one of the healthiest collection of men of any division at Sea Girt.

Trooper Johnny Logan, who was ill the day after arrival, has recovered fully and was given one of the hardest details in the camp for a tryout yesterday.

Lance Corporal Maxwell Perkins and Trooper Walter Glaentzer covered the four-hour detail, from 4 to 8 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the headquarters camp in Sea Girt. This was the first real opportunity Glaentzer had of showing his ability to handle a horse, the mile trip to headquarters being made on horseback.

The troopers were a lot of disappointed boys when they heard the rain pattering on the tent roofs yesterday morning. All had been looking forward to a big day and nearly every man expected a visitor. However, scores found their way to the camp through the rainstorm and the day was a big one for all.

Trooper Nelson Ramsey has been threatened with eviction by his tent mates if he doesn't stop talking in his sleep. One of his remarks last night was: "There's just one greaser left, let's take him back to Crescent avenue and tame him."

Small groups of officers and men could be seen on all parts of the lot after the weather cleared up yesterday afternoon discussing the probable routine of the week. Even the officers are not quite certain of the terms under which they enlisted and considerable discussion has been overheard regarding the right the United States will or will not have to send Troop D over the border.

Trooper J. Osgood Sewell got in bad with the culinary department yesterday by reflecting on their serving to the extent of demand "seconds" on the roast beef. Osgood got it but Gene told him a thing or two about table manners that may be applied even to camp life.

A civilian appeared on the grounds yesterday with a wad of pictures said to have been taken on Richmond street as the troops were leaving Plainfield. Although the collection of pohtos sold like hot cakes among the troopers no one but themselves would ever accuse the cavalry of being possessed of such countenances as those pictures portrayed.

General complaint was lodged by nearly everyone of the troopers yesterday about the slickers they have been provided with. "They leak like a hot of cheese cloth, but outside of that they're perfectly up to date," remarked one.

When a superior officer shouted Trooper Barry's name in the tent street yesterday afternoon, the former taxi driver responded with "Taxi sir, right here sir, quarter to the Maples."

SEA GIRT CAMP THE MECCA FOR HUNDREDS OF PLAINFIELD PEOPLE

Throng Visited Guardsmen All Day Yesterday—State Traffic Officers Required to Handle Automobiles—Weather Conditions Bad all During the Day But Let up in Rain in the Latter Part of the Afternoon Was the Signal For Thousands of Visitors to Flock to Buckalew Farm—Some of Those Seen in the Tented Village.

More than 300 Plainfielders braved the elements yesterday to visit the cavalrymen in the Troop D camp at Manasquan and more than half that number were present again today. Many of the relatives and friends of troopers have taken cottages and hotel accommodations at resorts close to the camp and are spending sometime each day with the troopers. Automobiles lined both sides of the narrow road that fronts the tented village all day yesterday and two traffic officers from the State Motor Vehicle Department were on duty for twelve hours directing the cars.

Jitney buses and garage machines reaped a big harvest, hundreds of persons coming into Sea Girt by train and requiring transportation to the Buckelew Farm, which is about a mile from the depot. A special detail of troopers was ordered to assist the traffic officers and everything possible was done to facilitate travel. Autos were allowed to move but one way on the street near the camp, it being necessary to make a mile loop in order to return to the starting point.

Weather conditions caused many of the local excursionists to delay their visits until late in the afternoon and the guardsmen were receiving visitors up to the time taps were sounded last night. The greatest crowd was present from 4 in the afternoon until 7 at night and many stirring scenes were witnessed in the partings between loved ones. Yesterday was probably the last time that a good many of the relatives will have a chance to meet the enlisted men prior to their departure for the border and all made the best of their time at the camp.

Among those seen at the camp yesterday were: Union County Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein and Father Charles A. Mackle, of Elizabeth; former President of the Common Council George S. Clay, former Councilman Theodore Martin, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Rowland, Mrs. Daniel Guinna, Mr. and Mrs. Story Rowland, Allan Stevenson, George Van Boskerck, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Stevenson, J. W. EX-GOVERNOR PLEASED WITH SEA GIRT CAMP

Former Governor John Franklin Fort was one of the visitors Saturday at the Sea Girt State military camp. He always has been deeply interested in the New Jersey National Guard and personally is acquainted with practically every officer in each arm of the service, and therefore wanted to see them before their threatened early start for the Mexican border for an indefinite period of service.

"I found the men and the camp in fine shape," he said. "The very atmosphere of the camp seems different from what it is during an ordinary summer drill and target practice camp of the State troops.

"The 'rookies,' many of whom I found I also knew, were drilling in civilian dress while I was there. They are getting on splendidly while awaiting their uniforms and other military equipment, and are just as ready and anxious for any duty that awaits them as are the previously enlisted and equipped men. Great aid is being received by the officers and the 'rookies' alike from the fact that many of the newly enlisted men have service records of various lengths in both State and Federal troops. Their old training asserts itself immediately.

"I was greatly interested in the fact that the State has procured, with comparatively little trouble, about 900 horses and each arm of the New Jersey service is well supplied with good mounts and animals for whatever service may be necessary. I visited the Orange battery of field artillery, the cavalry squadron and the field hospital, and called on General Edwin W. Hine. In every rank and organization the men seemed ready and fit to take up any task that may be assigned to them by Uncle Sam. It is a time to be proud of New Jersey and New Jersey men."

TWENTY LOCAL TROOPERS TRANSFERRED TO NEWARK

Twenty Plainfielders enlisted in Troop D will be transferred this afternoon to Troops A and C, of Newark, and will probably leave for the border with the first units Wednesday morning. When this announcement was made in camp this morning much interest was evidenced among the local cavalrymen, all expressing a wish that they be drawn with the score selected.

When it was announced among the troopers yesterday that General Wood had ordered the New Jersey and Massachusetts militia to the border Wednesday it was the general belief that all of the units would go.

The First Squadron, made up of Troops A and C, of Newark, B, of Red Bank, and D, of Plainfield, are somewhat disgruntled because it is possible that the artillery and other mounted troops will go out before they do, but this is no reflection on the cavalry. The cavalry is only as strong as its horses, and the troops have not gotten all their horses from the State, and when they do, the animals in many cases will have to be trained. It is possible, however, that this may have little effect on the border mobilization.

JUNIORS TENDER SERVICES FOR DUTY ON THE BORDER

Determined to serve their country and with a view to proving that their drilling has not been merely an idle fuss members of the Junior Order of American Mechanics of New Jersey, many of whom live in Plainfield, has sent a tender of its services to Major General Leonard Wood for duty on the Mexican border.

There are fully 67,000 Juniors in New Jersey, according to the estimate of Colonel Clark, and a majority of them are under 30 years old. The order accepts boys of 16 and over as members and this accounts in part for its rapid growth.

RECRUITING OFFICE TURNED MANY AWAY

Some Good Work Done by Officers Since Troop Left for Camp Last Week.

Lieut. Daniel Runkle, Corporal Charles D. Wardlaw and Trooper Donald C. Fullerton kept the local recruiting office of Troop D at 1120 Putnam avenue opened all day yesterday in response to an order issued by the State department. It is probable that the number for war strength, 100, will be reached today and that the three recruiting officers will report immediately to the troop at Sea Girt.

Many applicants have been examined by Lieut. Runkle and his staff since the troop left for camp and many have been turned away for one reason or another.

Rejections are for youth and inability to secure consent of parents, lack of knowledge of English, bad teeth, flat feet, eyesight and similar trouble. The army offers special inducements to likely young men; first, by enlisting, after two years, before the men are 27, they may take the examination for second lieutenant, which, if passed, makes them equal in rank to a West Point graduate, and second, under the new law young men between 18 and 21, who have served a year, have an opportunity for appointment to West Point. This will take effect July 1.

In addition, the new army bill provides for vocation training, so that by enlisting a man can skill himself to earn higher wages.

SEALS AND MANLEY REJECTED IN TESTS

Plainfield Boys Failed to Pass Federal Examination and Will Return Home.

When the First New Jersey Field Hospital Corps was examined by government officials yesterday preparatory to mustering the corps into government service two Plainfielders, Alfred Seal and Raymond Manley, were rejected because of physical defects.

Seal had been appointed orderly to Major Corbusier and both boys were very much disappointed when informed that they could not remain with the corps. They will probably return to Plainfield late this afternoon.

RAILROAD ENDEAVORED TO SECURE PULLMANS

President Besler Failed to Get Them and is Shipping Day Coaches to Sea Girt.

Rumor reached the Troop D headquarters at Sea Girt yesterday that the Central Railroad was planning to furnish the cavalry and infantry of New Jersey with Pullman coaches for the trip to the coast and semi-official announcement created considerable enthusiasm. Those close to President William G. Besler, of the Central Railroad, declared yesterday that the road officials had determined to see that the men had every comfort going to the border inasmuch as the chance of their enjoying a trip back home in the same style did not seem so certain.

In an interview with a Plainfield Daily Press reporter this morning, President Besler said that attempts had been made to secure Pullman coaches, but found that the government had commandeered all of the Pullman company's coaches. The railroad head, however, said that the best type of day coach was being provided and the comfort of the men would be the greatest thing considered. He said that government orders have been received instructing the railroad to prepare forty-nine cars for this work and they are being sent to Sea Girt today.

TEN MORE NEEDED BY HOSPITAL CORPS

Major Corbusier and Plainfielders Anxious to Move on to Border.

One new recruit was added to the Field Hospital Corps under command of Major Harold D. Corbusier, of Plainfield, yesterday. The corps now has four officers, fifty-six men, 422 horses, 100 wagons and thirteen ambulances.

All of the men are well and gradually rounding into shape. Major Corbusier informed a Daily Press reporter yesterday that he is ready to move at a moment's notice and expects to be among the first to be ordered to the border. The Plainfield boys in the corps anxiously inquired for news yesterday, both concerning the Mexican situation and matters in which they are especially interested in Plainfield.

Richard F. Harris, of the Field Hospital, who is assisting First Lieutenant Frank A. Roberts, M. C., the recruiting officer for the hospital company in Elizabeth, said last night that many applications for enlistments had been received.

Most of those who have applied for places with the hospital, he said, are residents of Union or Essex counties. "The hospital needs about ten more men before it will be recruited up to full war strength," Mr. Harris said, "and we expect to have them enrolled before the company leaves for the border."

The Lawrence Portland Cement Company, of New York and Pennsylvania, of which former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, is president, at a meeting of its directors voted to pay the salaries in full of every member of its organization who enters military service in defense of the colors, for as long as he shall be absent on such duty.

VETERAN VISITS SON.

Among those seen at the Sea Girt camp, where the First Field Hospital Corps is camping, yesterday afternoon, was Colonel William H. Corbusier, a retired army surgeon. He spent the afternoon inspecting his son's equipment and was profound in his praise of the men and the course of preliminary training they are being subjected to.

Troop Will Take Federal Oath Today

Members of Troop D will be mustered into government service today. Officers of the Fourth Regiment of Infantry were sworn in yesterday afternoon. Following is the oath the Plainfielders will be obliged to take:

"I do hereby acknowledge to have voluntarily enlisted this..... .....day of .....1916, as a soldier in the National Guard of the United States and of the State of New Jersey, for the period of three years in service and three years in the reserve, under the conditions prescribed by law, unless sooner discharged by proper authority. And I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America and to the State of New Jersey, and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever, and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and of the Governor of the State of New Jersey, and of the officers appointed over me according to law and the rules and articles of war. This oath is subscribed with the understanding that credit will be given in the execution of this contract for the period which I have already served under my current enlistment in the Organized Militia of the State of New Jersey."

Oaths will be administered by Captain Walter Reeds, U. S. A., sent to Sea Girt from the Department of the East Headquarters on Governors Island for that purpose.

PLATT, FORMER P. H. S. BOY, SERGEANT OF BATTERY B

Sergeant Kenneth M. Platt, of Brooklyn, formerly of this city, left yesterday morning with his regiment, Battery B, Second Field Artillery, for Van Cortlandt Park, preparatory to going to Camp Whitman. With him is his brother-in-law, Corporal Carlin, of the same battery. Mrs. Carlin was formerly Miss Helen Elizabeth Platt, a well known former resident of Plainfield, and a graduate of the Plainfield High School with the class of 1912.

Troopers May Be Reached By Telephone

In case of emergency friends of Troop D members may reach the guardsmen by 'phoning Manasquan 776. The New York Telephone Company has installed 'phone booths at the camp and troopers are detailed there from 5 o'clock in the morning until taps are sounded at night. The best time to call the men is between 12 and 1 o'clock or between 6 and 7 o'clock.

It may be necessary to "hold the wire" a number of minutes no matter what time the call is sent in for the men are scattered over the camp on various details and cannot always be located immediately. It is better to give the one answering the call your number with instructions to have the particular trooper wanted call you.

Call should be sent in only for something important for it is sometimes difficult for the men to get to the telephone and sometimes impossible. In cases of emergency the cavalry may use the 'phones to call their homes. The telephone company is also compiling a roster with the name, address and nearest phone connection of every man at Sea Girt. This may be of marked value in case of war with Mexico and the injury or death of some of the New Jersey guardsmen.

MR. TAFT SEES WAR AHEAD.

A war with Mexico, according to ex-President William Howard Taft, will last two or three years, and will result in great loss of American manhood through the constant bandit warfare that will be waged. This is anything but a pleasant thought for the mothers, wives and other loved ones who see their men marching off to the border this week, but it is not a careless statement, and Mr. Taft knows something of conditions in Mexico. He deplores the lack of preparedness on the part of the American government which forces it to call schoolboys and business men away from home on a long hard campaign which may result in an international war.

When so conservative a citizen as Mr. Taft publicly approves of armed forced, especially as his personal preference would be to criticise the present administration, then those who are opposing action in the Mexican matter may be put down as fanatical factionalists who can see no good in anything Democratic or pacifists who long ago lost all sense of national honor. Mr. Taft does not approve of the policy which led up to the present situation in Mexico, but he says the United States has gone too far now to turn back and that the honor of the nation must be defended, even though it mean—"that word which is never used in diplomatic correspondence."

If his carefully prepared comment on our world relationships was correctly understood here he sees ahead of us intervention in Mexico. He sees at least two long years of guerilla warfare, during which many Americans are to be picked off by Mexican snipers, and during which thousands of young men not intended and not prepared for army life are to undergo hardships in a strange land, and all because of the lack of a standing army of 250,000 men. If America had been able to properly patrol her own border the present situation would have been impossible, according to Mr. Taft, and his experience makes him a competent judge of conditions.

But there is a bright side to his vision. He predicts that as a result of this trouble America will prepare. She will provide an army of 250,000 men, and arrange to call 250,000 more trained soldiers to the colors on short notice without interrupting commercial and social life. If this is brought about, and an adequate navy is provided, the country will be reasonably safe from future conflicts.

It is a pity that more Plainfielders did not hear the address of Mr. Taft. The city is not awake to the high-class offerings of the Community Chautauqua program and this sensible comment on the most vital question before the American people from a man peculiarly fitted to advise was given to but a few hundred, when thousands might have heard.

CHAPMAN AND IMMELMANN.

Within the past week two of the most daring aviators of the European war have met death—Victor Chapman, of the French army, and Lieutenant Immelmann, of the German. Chapman was an American. Both died as they would have planned the end, had they been given the right to plan, for each was engaged in combat with three enemy aeroplanes high above the air when the fatal shot found his machine. Chapman fell with his body riddled with bullets. Immelmann was shot from behind when charging an aeroplane and his tail and one wing were carried away, dashing him to death. It is likely that while the French pay tribute to their American hero they will also drop a tear for Immelmann, and when the German fliers are placing wreaths upon the grave of their dead leader they will dedicate one to the courageous foe, Chapman. Fighting far above the battlefields of Europe these men seem to have risen also above the brutality and coarseness of the common soldier and to be able to "play the game" more like the heroes of old."

• • • • • •

In addition to providing an incident which promises to precipitate war with Mexico the Carrizal fight in which two troops of the Tenth U. S. cavalry were wiped out is a grim prophesy of the kind of foes that Mexicans will prove. There is no longer any doubt of the treachery of Gen. Gomez. He was not content to give battle to the little handful of American troopers with a vastly superior force, but he parleyed with them under a flag of truce until his "greasers" had surrounded the men and then opened fire with hidden machine guns while they were considering his suggestion that they go round the town. The trapped soldiers won everlasting glory by the courageous manner in which they sold their lives, and they created greater respect for the American flag by the heroism against odds. Mr. Wilson's demand for the release of prisoners taken in this fight is almost in itself a declaration of war, after statements from Obregon and Carranza that they ordered the attack, but the most significant word from Washington is the announcement that President Wilson "will accept with question the word of American officers" in forming an official opinion upon which to act. This means no end of trust and confidence in Mexico and Mexicans.

• • • • • •

Henry Ford is angry because the world believed him guilty of issuing an order that any employe who answered the call of his country and went to the Mexican border would be discharged from the Ford plant. Mr. Ford denies the story and insists that it should not be given credence. We are glad it is not true, but it seemed in keeping with the character of the maker of jitneys and no apologies are due him.

• • • • • •

While we are celebrating a safe and sane Fourth let us remember those on the Mexican border for whom it is anything but safe.

The Governor was attired in an olive drab uniform and leggings.

The Flies.

(With Apologies to Edgar Allen Poe.)

Hear the buzzing of the flies— pesky flies—
As they seem to drop by millions from the skies.
Every one is a newcomer
Who has never buzzed before,
Who has come to spend the summer
And to put us on the hummer
With his deadly germs galore.
That he brings in at our door.
You will hasten with the swatter if you're anywhere near wise.
Swat the flies, flies, flies, flies, flies, flies, flies—
Swat 'em early, swat 'em often—swat the flies.

Oh, the docs who specialize on the flies
Have already sounded many warning cries.
One fly now will mean a million—
Yes, a million bye and bye;
Later on 'twill mean a billion;
Then still later on a trillion.
And that is the reason why
It is certain you and I
Must go out and buy a swatter and must take some exercise.
Swat the flies, flies, flies, flies, flies, flies, flies.
Swat 'em early, swat 'em often—swat the flies.

De Wolf Hopper and Fay Tincher In Triangle Feature, "Mr. Goode, the Samaritan."

AT PROCTOR'S TOMORROW.

Fritzi Brunette, the talented Selig star, heads a large cast of clever Selig screen artists in a picturization of David K. Higgins' famous play, "At Piney Ridge," presented at Proctor's today. A striking example of the screen's scenic supremacy over the speaking stage is afforded here, for when this play was originally produced, only three or four scenes could be shown, but in the screen production we have scores of interiors and exteriors and among the latter some very close approximations of the Tennessee mountains, which furnish the locale of the story. The story is such a familiar one that it it unnecessary to go into a detailed synopsis here, but suffice to say that if the film fans of this vicinity want to see a really interesting picture cleverly mounted and produced, they can spend their time in no better way than to visit Procor's today. The cast includes beside Miss Brunette, who assumes the role of the mountain girl, Vivian Reed, who is always charming as the ingenue, Leo Pierson, who makes a nimble-witted hero, and Edward J. Piel, who portrays a cold-blooded villain in masterly fashion. Other features today include the eighth episode of "The Mysteries of Myra," and a collection of clever comedy creations.

Tuesday will see DeWolf Hopper at Proctor's in his latest Triangle comedy entitled "Mr. Goode, the Samaritan." For years Mr. Hopper has been appearing in comedy drama on Broadway, making people laugh for two hours at a stretch. Now he is making Triangle picture plays and he is living up to his reputation as a fun-maker, a sure cure for one who wants a good clean laugh—and a good clean comedy, which everyone will find in this his latest play. "Bubbles of Trouble," a novel Keystone comedy, also appears tomorrow and the program is completed by the addition of the third episode of "The Secret of the Submarine."

On Wednesday Robert Mantell is featured in "The Spider and the Fly," a Fox feature, while on Thursday H. B. Warner will be seen in "The Market of Vain Desire," one of those incomparable Thomas H. Ince Triangle plays.

"I GUESS I'VE STIRRED UP SOMETHING THIS TIME!"

--Astor Theatre--

Today will witness one of the greatest of photoplays, a Mutual masterpicture De Luxe edition, "The Hidden Law," featuring Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, a five-part drama, also featuring the Bostock animals. As a drama of unusual merit this will please both young and old. Tomorrow the big attraction at this theatre will be "The Dead Alive," a story of twin sisters, Mary and Jessie, whose father is employed in a gambling house. Jessie, who works in a department store, is seen and admired by Stuyvesant, a young millionaire. When she learns that her father is a gambler and that he has just been arrested for murder, she declines Stuyvesant's offer of marriage, but finally consents. Her father is sent to the penitentiary for ten years, and Ardini, the proprietor of the gambling house, is sentenced to three months. When the latter is discharged, he forces Mary, a chorus girl, to secure money from Jessie by threatening to reveal Mary's stage career and her father's disgrace. Jessie is killed in an automobile accident and Ardini wins Stuyvesant's friendship and tells him that it is possible, through spiritualistic powers, to see his dead wife. Mary is to pose as Jessie. Ardini's plan is to rob the safe in the millionaire's home during the seance. Mary warns Stuyvesant and Ardini is killed by an automatic device attached to the safe. Mary reveals the family secrets to Stuyvesant and the two are married. The production is written and directed by Henry J. Vernot, and features the celebrated star, Marguerite Courtot, in addition to our other big attractions this will make a wonderful program for tomorrow. On Wednesday the big story of the day, "Who's Guilty?"

TAFT SEES WAR AHEAD

dress was an argument for the American acceptance of the principles of the League to Enforce Peace, which recently adopted a "platform" at a convention held in Washington. The speaker was introduced by Mayor Leighton Calkins. Mr. Calkins has been a strong believer in the League since it was first proposed, and he recntly delegated J. A. Babcock and George S. Clay to represent Plainfield at the initial convention. He expressed his belief in the plan for which the League stands in a brief introductory address.

The world today is facing ever-changing conditions, said Mr. Taft, and these changes are to effect profoundly the future policies of this nation. There is nothing that guarantees the neutrality of the United States, and many things which threaten it, and he urged preparedness and the League to Enforce Peace as the means of averting war. The four "planks" in the platform of the League are:

1. An agrreement that all nations shall submit differences of a justifiable nature to a permanent international court.

2. That all issues not of a justifiable nature, such as the discrimination of the United States against Japanese and Chinese immigrants, shall be submitted to a board of conciliation.

3. That all nations shall agree to defend any signers of the League agreement that is prematurely attacked.

4. That all members of the League shall hold a congress each year when new phases of international law shall be discussed and additions to the law shall be made.

The League will make no effort to force a decision of the international court or of the conciliation board. Through forcing the submission of questions likely to cause war to these bodies it will prevent any two nations rushing blindly into conflict and will force a sober consideration of the issues and the consequences for at least a year, thereby greatly reducing the possibility of war.

Mr. Taft dismissed "planks" three and four with the statement that they could not be attacked by any nation willing to sign the first two. He declared that the plan was not a dream, that it was practical and could be made to work for international peace if the larger nations of the world would agree. He pointed out that the Supreme Court of the United States was an international body, or rather a body having international authority, as it was freely called upon to decide questions of equity between sovereign states, and that these decisions were followed by the litigants without resort to armed force. This is ample proof of the fact that an international court would prove practical, he said, and he cited the instance of the unpopular and unfair verdict of the arbitration board in the Alabama case between the United States and England, when England was ordered to pay $15,000,000 and paid it despite the appeal of her representatives to the people to resist the decision with arms. The United States has got into the habit of arbitration with Canada, he said, and all of its boundary disputes, of which there are many, are settled in this manner.

The time has not come when we can depend upon moral force alone, he said, because the nation is not as moral as the average man, and he favors the use of force to back up moral sanction leading to proper conduct.

In telling of the relations of the United States and other countries, he said that Japan was frowning on our discrimination against her citizens, and that her feeling might be fanned into a flame that would result in war; that the Philippines were an ever-present danger of the international complications, especially when Congress was insisting on freeing the islands; that the United States had guaranteed the integrity of Panama and Cuba, which meant that this country would fight for those two republics, and that Porto Rico must be defended. He bitterly criticized the plan to free the Philippines at this time, saying he could not tell exactly what he thought about this because of the presence of ladies. The people on these islands are capable of great development, he said, under careful instruction, but if they are let go they will revert to the barbaric state in which they were found, and some other nation will "snap them up," thereby necessitating a war.

After his reference to the Mexican situation quoted above, Mr. Taft said that intervention in Mexico would lead to bad feeling on the part of South Amreican countries, who would call us "land robbers," and he admitted that he did not like the prospect. He called attention to the Monroe Doctrine as a possible cause of international trouble, declaring that it meant too much to the United States to be abandoned and that this counry must fight for it whenever called upon to do so.

The pose of a neutral when a war such as that in Europe is raging is necessarily a dangerous one, said Mr. Taft, and he pointed to the numerous diplomatic troubles with England and Germany. England has violated our neutrality in a way she would not stand for us doing in the Civil War, he said, but the issue with her will be arbitrated. Germany, he declared, has drowned 150 American citizens who had the right to be rescued and this is an issue necessarily charged with gunpowder.

"Our relations to a world war are not so remote," he concluded, "and we are close to being involved."

The League to Enforce Peace would not prove an entangling alliance for this country, he believed, and it would prevent some hot-headed nation from plunging into a war in the future which might include the United States among the belligerents.

Preceeding Mr. Taft on Saturday evening's program were O'Hara and Wetmore, clever entertainers in song and impersonations. They held the crowd for more than an hour, and their part of the program was highly pleasing. In the afternoon Ole Theobaldi was heard in a violin recital, and the small crowd of music lovers that heard him enthusiastically accorded to him a place among the world's greatest violinists.

THE WORD "LOVE."

In the Orient It Means to Like or Is Used to Express Good Will.

The word "love" has been more highly specialized in the west than in the east. In its proper English use it means only that ardent, amorous feeling which cannot be created by will and design. In the west the word "love" has been relieved of the function of expressing the less ardent desires, such as the terms "to like," "to have good will toward" and "to be well disposed toward" simply.

Not so in the east. The word "like," meaning "to be favorably inclined toward," is not found either in the Bible or in the Arabic tongue. In the English version of the Bible it is used in two places, but the translation is incorrect. In the twenty-fifth chapter of Deuteronomy and the seventh verse, "If the man like not to take his brother's wife," should be rendered "If the man 'consent' not," and in the fourth chapter of Amos, the fifth verse, "For this liketh you, O ye children of Israel," is in the original, "For this ye 'loved,' O ye children of Israel." In any standard concordance of the Bible the Hebrew verb aheb—to love—precedes these quotations.

So to us orientals the only word which can express any cordial inclination of approval is "love." One loves his wife and children and loves grapes and figs and meat, if he likes these things. An employer says to an employee, "If you 'love' to work for me according to this agreement you can."

It is nothing uncommon for one to say to a casual acquaintance whom he likes, "I must say, sahib (friend), that I love you!" I know of no equivalent in the Arabic for the phrase, "I am interested in you." "Love" and "hate" are the usual terms by which to express approval and disapproval, as well as real love and hatred.

From all this it may be seen that when the Great Oriental Teacher said to his countrymen, who considered all other clans than their own as their enemies, "Love your enemies," he did not mean that they should be enamored of them, but that they should have good will toward them. We cannot love by will and design, but we certainly can will to be well disposed even toward those who, we believe, have ill will toward us.—Abraham Mitrie Rihbony in Atlantic Monthly.

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes every man and woman adopts this splendid morning habit.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice the drinking of phosphated hot water before breakfast, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons in the bowels which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but it is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.—Adv.

Following the conferring of honors, Father B. M. Bogan made a farewell address to the graduates. Father Bogan said in part:

"Man belongs to God. He was solemnly consecrated to God from his very origin. Being made for God man cannot step aside from his destiny without violating the very nature that God gave him. To know God and from that knowledge to love God and by very love of God to serve Him with a life of devotion, is the reason of our being. The craving for knowledge is the gift of our Creator. From the beginning it has been so and so shall it be to the end. That she might know, the first woman yielded to the deceptive promise and the wisdom that God had guaraded was bartered for the knowledge of deception. And so it is that mind development is co-existent with humanity. 'The heir of all the ages in the forefront of time' the present revels in the possession of the past. And so it comes that education guarding these treasures and following the index of their direction turns instinctively to the preserving elements of their purity to the mother of all science, to the guardian of the treasures of art and literature, to the old Mother Church who in the fulfillment of her divine mission 'go teach all nations,' has brightened the page of history with the story of her achievements.

"From the day when barbarism yielded to her civilizing influence, when gathering up the remnants of poor stricken humanity which lay scattered along the shores of time, she reconstructed society and breathed into it the soul of divine truth to our own day she has given to the nations the only preserving element in education, the morality of divine law. No wonder then that the thought of the present is but the reflex of the elder day of our republic, when the Father of our Country said in his simple faith, 'Let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion.' And so this Mother Church of ours nurturing us with a tender maternal solicitude at the font divine wisdom, gathers her children about her and holds before them the inspiration of the presence of God who gave them life for whom their life is to be lived and who finally shall sit in judgment upon the use thereof. What wonder that the educators of the world, the moral leaders of society, are turning at last with tardy admiration to the system upon which fundamentally must rest the preserving principle of our republic. A recent remarkable incident of this recognition was given at Yale University. One of the most distinguished students and educators of Pennsylvania, Professor George Warton Pepper, addressed the convocation of Ministers at the Divinity School as follows: 'There is no doubt in my mind that the Roman Catholics have the finest system of teaching possible, and I am positive that the time is coming when a move will be promoted to have each religion care for the education of the children of its creed, just as the Roman Catholics are doing at the present time. I believe that these various religions will receive a small compensation of the State for the education of each pupil. In this way the children of each creed will be freed from the rival claims of other creeds and the time is not far off when to know God will be considered the greatest of all the uses of the human mind. And when this move is started you may be sure it will have strong political backing.' Surely this is a most remarkable utterance, the place, the assemblage and the speaker all considered. Truly the times are changing and public sentiment with it. From the Northwestern Christian Advocate, a high-class Methodist weekly, we have a similar thought in approval of our methods of education—'Not only in this country, but in every civilized country, there has been a growing conviction that the education which aims only or even chiefly at training the intellect without reference to the other sides of a man's nature, comes far short of doing the best for the man and consequently comes far short of doing the best for the State. The theory which is now finding acceptance with education of all beliefs and even of no belief has been the theory of the Church from the beginning. The education of the heart is the heart of education."

The commencement exercises were brought to a close by the solemn benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, Father Peter J. Hart being celebrant, with Father Walter J. Hennessy, deacon, and Father John Baldwin, subdeacon. Father Joseph S. McDonald acted as master of ceremonies. The members of the alumni who acted as ushers were Garret Keating, Frank Donnolly, William Sullivan, Edward J. McCann, John McCarthy and John J. Hines.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—Little Tuk Talks With a Weeding Woman.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

RIGHT after bread and jam daddy told Jack and Evelyn this story: "Once a little boy by the name of Tuk had to do so many errands that he never had time to get his geography lesson. So he always put his geography under his pillow, hoping he might dream his lesson. One night a tiny soldier came in his sleep and told him about the towns in the lesson. When he thought he heard the town say it had rose gardens near its gates little Tuk could see them, the red roses and the green leaves flowering before his eyes. Then they vanished and changed into wooded heights that sloped down to the clear waters of a Danish fiord."

"What's a fiord, daddy?" asked Jack.

"A narrow inlet of the sea between high banks and rocks. Alaska and Norway have many of them.

"A tall old church with twin spires towered over the pleasant fiord. Springs of water flowed from the cliff and rushed down in swift, bubbling streams. Close by sat an old king with a gold crown around his flowing locks. This was King Hroar, and the name of the town was Hroar Springs. Down over the slopes and past the springs walked hand in hand all of Denmark's kings and queens wearing their crowns.

"On and on little Tuk watched them go, on into the old church with twin spires, while the springs rippled and bubbled and the church organ pealed out its music. 'Don't forget the estates of the realm,' little Tuk heard King Hroar tell them. And all at once everything vanished. Where were they?

"Then an old peasant woman stood there before little Tuk. She was a weeding woman and came from Soro, where the grass grows in the market place. She had put her gray apron over her head and shoulders. Her apron was sopping wet. So little Tuk knew it had been raining.

"'Yes, indeed, it has been raining,' she said to little Tuk. She talked on and on, and soon little Tuk learned that she knew some of the funny parts in Danish dramas and all about King Waldemar and Absolom. But just as she was going to tell little Tuk all about these stories she shrank up and looked just as if she was going to take a leap. 'Ko-ax!' she said. 'It is wet, it is wet, it is as dull as ditch water—in good old Soro!'

"Then she said 'Ko-ax!' again and became a frog. Then 'Ko-ax!' again and became an old weeding woman," daddy finished.

"Oh, daddy, please tell us what she did next?" cried the children. But daddy only kissed them good night and looked upstairs.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

The New Maid Begins Early to Take Advantage of Her Mistress.

"Well, I must tell you about Clara. You know she is my new maid. I have been particularly pleased with her; she is quiet and neat and a good cook——"

"No wonder you are pleased with her if she is all that," interrupted Nell Morton.

"Wait till you hear the sequel," continued Ethel Gordon. "We were invited out to dinner and expected to spend the evening, but Mrs. Sarson's little boy wa staken seriously ill. You knew about that?"

"Yes."

"Well, of course we came home early. When we neared the house we saw it was all lighted up. I thought possibly the Forsyths or some one else had come and had decided not to telephone us to come home. We hurried on and when we opened the door there sat a strange young man in Ralph's chair smoking, and on the tea wagon was the daintiest lunch it ever held. Mistress Clara was presiding, if you please.

"What?"

"The young lady was entertaining her 'fellow,' as she explained with some embarrassment. He was smoking Ralph's cigars. Ralph knew, for he had put a half dozen in the case that very evening before he went and there were only four left." Ethel paused impressively.

"What did you do?" asked Nell.

"I did not have to do. Ralph took the helm, and the raking those people got they will not soon forget. He discharged her. She pleaded to be tried again, for to leave under a cloud like that would make it hard for her to get another place. Besides, I have no idea where I can get another girl, so the thing was patched up and Clara will stay until I find some one else." Ethel paused for breath.

"The girl looked so honest," mused Nell.

"Ralph had a very serious talk with me after we went to bed. He said I was placing temptation in the paths of my maids by being so careless, and I promised to look after things more carefully in the future. Who would have thought of their being so dishonest?"

"The only way to make sure of their honesty is to let them know that you keep tab on everything." Nell was secretly congratulating herself that she did not have to depend on servants to any great extent. At least she was independent of them when it was necessary to be so.

"Ralph says that explains why our grocery bill has been so large, and I have missed other things that I thought were only mislaid. I have a habit of mislaying things." Ethel was perfectly light-hearted over her shortcomings and seemed to think that having allowed servants to carry off groceries and so necessitate her husband to pay staggering bills was not a very serious matter.

"How will you know whether she keeps on stealing or not?" queried Nell.

"Oh, she will not begin right away, I am sure, and Ralph is interested enough so that he will go over the grocery lists and find out what is ordered," was the easy reply.

"I should not think a man would know what was a reasonable amount of any given thing." Nell was canvassing the subject in her mind.

"As far as that goes, he knows as much about it as I do. That is where the trouble is. I cannot see any way out of the tangle, for I cannot spend all my time watching my maid." Ethel laughed, "and if I get a new maid—I do not know where I could in the first place—she might steal and know nothing of cooking besides. So there you are." Ethel waved her hands as if dismissing the whole matter.

WILL TRY TO ELECT "DRY" TICKET HERE

The Church League to Take Hand in Fall Election—Plan Action in Borough.

The Church League which is now in progress of organization here by the representatives of the different evangelical churches, proposes to take a hand this fall in the election and will endeavor to elect a local "dry" ticket including Mayor and city Council. When the candidates are nominated they will be asked to declare themselves on the liquor question and those in favor of "no license" will have the support of the members of the league.

Mayor Leighton Calkins who previously declared that he would like to "come back" and be the city executive under a prohibition condition, will be asked how he stands on the question should he seek a re-election this fall.

The conditions in North Plainfield are somewhat similar. Mayor W. L. Smalley's views on the liquor question are well known. He recently stated that he would be willing to resign his office and then run for Mayor on a "no license" ticket. That there is a determined effort to make the borough "dry" is a recognized fact and at present efforts are being made to prevent Morris Latzko from either continuing in business when his license expires or to transfer it to somebody else.

A Little Chat About "Good-bye"

THE telephone "Hello" has fallen into disfavor because it is useless and meaningless. It is fast becoming obsolete.

The telephone "Good-bye," however, is well worth preserving, even in these days of economy and efficiency. It gives a personal, friendly touch to the business or social conversation that makes for better relations. The cheery "good-bye" is just as potent as the cordial "good-morning." Over the telephone it averts the feeling one sometimes has of being cut off abruptly.

Say "good-bye" over the telephone as if it were really a part of your conversation and not merely a regrettable habit of speech.

Winning pitchers—Eddie Conshay (Farmers); Russ Stewart (Netherwood); Warry McLaughlin (Dunellen).

After a two weeks' enforced layoff, the City League baseball teams resumed hostilities Saturday afternoon and proved to the many fans who attended the games that the unappreciated rest had not interfered with the ability of the numerous artists, heretofore engaged in demonstrating the national pastime on local lots. Jupiter Pluvius tried his best to upset the perfect plans of the City League bosses by visiting this vicinity frequently during the past two weeks but, fortunately, he remained away on Saturday. This fact enabled the Netherwood "Champions" to trounce the Baptists, a ninth inning rally doing the stunt and putting a feather in the cap of Russ Stewart. The battle between the Hopes and the Farmers was a family affair inasmuch as the two teams have met four times this season and are due to call a halt. Peaceful as these Farmers are, they certainly did get excited Saturday, and with Eddie Conshay at the helm, gave the Hopes a full dose of medicine, compounded by Dame Defeat. The Tabs went to Dunellen in response to a call from Opportunity. There was much that the Tabs might have done and there was little that they did do. They tried hard but Warry McLaughlin tried harder. And when Warry tries, all is over. This contest was interesting from start to fish and was not cinched by either team until the last man was out. In fact it is reported that the Tabs do not believe that the battle has been cinched yet, inasmuch as they claim that Warry made a balk in the fatal ninth. His "Ump," it is said, would not admit that he was of the same mind, because he wasn't. At any rate, the matter will come up for discussion at the City League meeting in the Daily Press office this evening.

The unusually pleasant weather assured all teams good crowds and enthusiasm ran high at all three games.

Except in the case of the "balk" matter, the work of the umpires was of the highest calibre and it is said that "Herr" Coriell did especially well, encountering no trouble and handling the decisions to the satisfaction of all who paid to see the game.

EDDIE CONSHAY WINS GAME FOR FARMERS

Campbellites and Hopes Furnish Plenty of Excitement For Frenzied Fans.

The Farmers, featuring Eddie Conshay in a "come-back" stunt, were the superiors of the Hopes in an interesting encounter staged on West End field Saturday afternoon, the result of the superiority being a bitter 4 to 2 defeat for the Chapelites. From the fact that the Hope lads were defeated one must not get the impression that the victors had things all their own way. They didn't. Pop Martin's crew was always waiting for the opportunity but, unfortunately, it never came. Eddie Conshay, invincible at all stages, was unusually effective in the pinches and when men were on the bags he got busy. A total of only three bingles was run up against the "Vet" and while two of these taps were productive of runs, the others did not do much damage.

Both teams made the first inning the "big" frame by gathering in two runs. The Farmers got their portion via the "gift" route, while the losers worked their way. In the second canto, one of Dick Schott's "fade-aways" struck the platter and whisked off to oneside, Billy Ryan, who had earned a life on a hit, coming home with what proved to be the run that upset things. Up until the time that Schott's unlucky peg was uncorked, the battle was evenly waged but once headed, the Hopes never revived, and the fourth run annexed by the Farmers ended the flickering hope of a chapel victory.

Aside from the fact that Eddie Conshay pitched a remarkable game for one who is supposed to be all through, the affair unearthed other promising material, particularly in the fielding line. At third, Frank Mullin, a brother of the famous Tommy and proud possessor of one of his brother's "Amboy" suits, did excellent work and is sure to be a star. His work with the willow was not astonishing, but his fielding ability demanded and received the attention of the fans. Hann, not a "vet" nor yet a youngster, played a good game and was instrumental in securing at least one Farmer run.

NETHERWOOD ANNEXES WIN IN THE NINTH

Russ Stewart Victor Over "Dunc" Paterson in Pitching Duel.

It was a regular ninth inning rally that gave the Netherwoods their victory over the Baptists Saturday, the score of the match being 5 to 4. Matty Coughlin's hit was responsible for the victory and a couple of miscplays aided Matty in his "victory-snatching" stunt.

Until the final frame, the Baptists were conent to remain on an even plane with their opponents, each of the contending parties having two runs. But in their half of the last canto, the Firsts got busy and rushed Ross Stewart and his pals for a pair of tallies. This fact made the Netherwood rooters feel a little uneasy, although they never lost confidence in their favorites. In the last half of the ninth, a duo of errors and two hits, the last one a telling blow by Matty, were the makings of Netherwood's seventh victory.

The game was witnessed by a large crowd and was marked by fast fielding and heavy clouting, the Baptists excelling in the latter art. "Dunc" Patterson was very effective and allowed only eight hits, two of which came in the ninth. Russ Stewart was clouted to a larger extent but not to greater advantage as his ability to brace up in the pinches earned him the right to claim a win. Brandt, a new lad from Bound Brook, proved himself to be all that advance notices have said he was and he is sure of a steady job with the league leaders.

The defeat of the Baptists lowered their colors a little and placed them on an even basis with the Tabs and Hopes.

Warry McLaughlin, the former Pittsburgh National League moundsman, twirled the Dunellen baseball team to victory over the local Tabs at Dunellen Saturday, doing the stunt to the tune of three tallies to two. The game was interesting and was anyone's up until the last man was out. Jack Denny pitched a fine game for the losers, but had to bow to the older and more experienced "Warry."

This news came in at the eleventh hour. It tells of the Dunellen victory over the T. A. B. S.

TRAVERS AND MARSTON WIN ON LOCAL LINKS

Defeat Oswald Kirby and Reginald Lewis at Country Club Saturday.

Jerome D. Travers and Max D. Marston defeated Oswald Kirby and Reginald Lewis, 4 up and 3 to play in the 36-hole exhibition match at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday. Lewis made 79 on his first round and then went out in 39 on the second round. When he picked his ball on the last two holes his card showed a 31. A gallery of about three hundred followed the players during the afternoon. The individual scores follow:

Travers, 74—79—153; Marston, 77—77—154; Kirby, 78—75—153.

W. W. Coriell, 93—21—72; M. J. Dumont, 86—14—72; F. O. Reinhart, 80—6—74; H. B. Hibbard, 84—14—74; W. G. Cooke, 93—18—75.

Two of the players who performed on the local links Saturday also exhibited at Baltusrol yesterday. Max R. Marston teamed up with Reginald M. Lewis in a 36-hole four ball match. Jerome D. Travers and George Low were the opposing players. Marston and Lewis established a four hole lead in the morning and kept it in the afternoon. Marston played the best golf and had a total of 75—75—150. Travers played away below form and Low had the whole burden thrust upon him. Low's medal score was 79—75—154. The winning best ball was 72—74—146.

TEAM FAILED TO APPEAR.

The Pans, managed by Cyril Poling, were all ready to meet a team from Somerville on Saturday, but the team failed to appear. Joe Newell was in fine form and was anxious to defeat the Somerset county lads. Manager Cyril Poling and his charges are out for the junior championship of this city, and it looks as though they had the title cinched, inasmuch as they have met and defeated all other contenders for the same honor.

NORTH PLAINFIELD HIGH WINS OVER ALUMNI

Denny and Dilts Get Together in Pitching Duel, Oscar Winning.

Playing together for the last time, the former North Plainfield High School team was defeated on Hyde Field Saturday afternoon by a 3 to 1 verdict, at the hands of the Alumni. Although the ranks of the N. P. H. S. combine were dotted with players who were recently elected to the Alumni Association, their presence did not bias the playing of the older "grads," who were out to win, and accomplished the feat, much to their elation.

Denny and Dilts wer the opposing twirlers and both pitched creditably, the former allowing six hits, while the latter was liberal to the extent of two more, but counteracted this by striking out fifteen batsmen. The winners utilized their advantages, placing one of their runs on a cleverly executed squeeze play.

Successful Salesmen.

In the American Magazine a successful salesman says:

"A salesman should look healthy. I formed a theory on that point a long while ago and have proved it since then more than a thousand times. At first I didn't know exactly why it was, but now I think I have succeeded in figuring out the psychology of the thing.

"In the first place, the best selling point for an article is to get it associated in the mind of the customer with success. Everything even remotely connected with the article that suggests success is a point which weighs in favor of the sale. If the salesman looks prosperous the customer unconsciously or subconsciously receives the impression that this prosperity grew out of the excellence of the article he is selling. The salesman should carry into a store an impression of success, prosperity and harmony. Now, the idea of complete harmony cannot be conveyed, as I look at it, without health."

Light and Telescopes.

Light, sound and wireless telegraphy spread out and become weaker as they travel. An electric message sent on a wire does not weaken nearly so much. This explains the great difficulty at first experienced in getting wireless messages across the Atlantic, although it was quite easy to get the message across by wire.

On the other hand, light can be made to travel without spreading out, and searchlights keep the light traveling almost as if it were on a wire, so that it does not spread out and get weaker.

The object of the great telescopes which have been invented is to collect the light from the stars which is weakened by its long journey. One of the greatest of the telescopes used for astronomical purposes is the vertical telescopic tower, 150 feet high, as well as eighty feet into the ground and built by Professor Hale, on Mount Welson, Cal., the actual telescope used being eight feet in diameter.

Helter Skelter.

"Helter skelter" has been suggestively defined as a jingling expression vaguely imitating the hurried clatter of feet rapidly and irregularly moved. Most dictionaries, however, led astray probably by the ordinary orthography, have missed the true etymology of this phrase. It should be "helter kelter." "Helter" is an old word for "hang," probably connected with halter, and "kelter" is used by old writers in the sense of "order" or the proper state. Thus Barrow, the divine, says, "If the organs of prayer be out of kelter how can we pray?" "Helter skelter," therefore, is literally "hang order" and means, "Oh, hang order; let us do it, or let it take its chance." Ben Jonson in "Every Man In His Humor" writes, "Helter skelter hang sorrow, care'll kill a cat," and Shakespeare, using it to express rush and hurry, says, "Helter skelter have I rode to thee."

BOROUGH POLICE COURT.

Thomas Hernell, employed at a local stone-crushing plant, was arraigned before Recorder Fred Hand in the borough court this morning on the charge of being in a helpless condition on Somerset street Saturday. Hernell was arrested by Roundsmen Charles Keller and was given a suspended sentence.

ODD PLACE NAMES

How Some of Our Cities Received Their Appellations.

CHANCE HUMOR AND SATIRE.

All These Had Roles In the Selection by the Pioneers of Titles For Their New Homes—Why There Is Not a Great Boston on the Pacific Coast.

The thriving cities, the picturesque streams and the rugged mountains of the United States have in numerous instances received their names for reasons calculated to give a shock to the national bonsil of geographic names.

The most grotesque accidents and coincidences, the results of games or wagers, the grim efforts of the pioneer mind to be satirical at the expense of his new home, all have operated to determine the name by which proud municipalities or imposing physical features appear upon the map.

In a general study of the origin and significance of place names of this country made by the United States geological survey the following oddly given names have been picked out:

The naming of the populous city of Portland, Ore., was decided by the tossing of a copper coin by two settlers, one from Portland, Me., the other from Boston. The Maine man won, else we should have had another great Boston on the Pacific.

The city of Tombstone, Ariz., was named as a bit of grim humor. Its finder had been advised when starting on his prospecting tour that he would "find his tombstone." In order that the prophecy might be fulfilled he gave the name to the city he established.

The city of Bangor, Me., bears the name of an old psalm tune which our forefathers sang to the tremor of a tuning fork. The name was given by the Rev. Seth Noble, who represented the district in the Maine legislature.

Wheeling, the metropolis of West Virginia, owes its name to the circumstance of the Indians having displayed the head of a white man on a pole at this point. The name is from the Indian weal-link, meaning "place of a human head."

One of the most distinctive names on the map of Colorado is Ouray. It has been applied to a city, a county and an imposing mountain. Yet the name means nothing more nor less than Willie and is the result of the Ute Indians' attempt to translate this synonym of Harold and Percy into their own tongue.

The city of Norwalk, Conn., is said to have been so named because when purchased from the Indians the northern boundary of the land was to extend northward from the sea one day's walk, according to the Indian marking of the distance.

A town in Georgia rejoices in the strikingly original but somewhat ambiguous designation of Nameless. The name was given from the fact that in a list of several hundred names submitted to the postoffice authorities not one was found satisfactory.

A town in Gunnison county, Colo., possesses the eloquent name of Tin Cup, given because in its early days, when a mining camp, gold was so plentiful that it was measured in a tin cup.

The Calico mountain range in California was given its name from the variegated color of its rocks.

The city of Jacksonville, Ill., was named for a prominent colored preacher and is perhaps the largest community in the country named for a negro.

The city of Spartanburg, S. C., was so called from the rigorous, Spartan-like self discipline practiced by the inhabitants during the Revolutionary war.

A stream in Ravalli county, Mont., is known as Weeping Child from the circumstance of an Indian child being carried off by a mountain lion, causing insanity in the mother.

Antelope county, in Nebraska, was so named in commemoration of the killing and eating of an antelope during the pursuit of some Indians by the pioneers.

The town of Deerfield, N. H., was so named because, when the petition for the establishment of the town was pending, a Mr. Batchelder killed a deer and upon presenting it to Governor Wentworth obtained the act of establishment and the town name.

Hell Gate, the narrow pass in the East river at New York, was called by the Dutch hellegat, meaning "bright strait" or "clear opening." The name quickly suggested the present English form, which was regarded as more appropriate on account of the whirlpools which made navigation dangerous.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Denmark In Her Prime.

In the twelfth century Denmark was the mightiest state in northern Europe, and the Baltic had become a "Danish Mediterranean." This supremacy was short lived, though, and the country never again regained the power and prestige which she had won and lost at the point of the sword.—Argonaut.

Wanted to Demonstrate.

"This man says you kicked him," said the judge.

"I did, your honor."

"Could you tell us how hard you kicked him?"

"I could show you, your honor."—Yonkers Statesman.

It is happiness to be nobly descended; it is not less to have so much merit that nobody inquires whether we are so or not.—La Bruyere.

FORMER PLAINFIELD PETS BOMBARD JOE WILLIAMS

The baseball fans of Dover were inclined to mob Umpire Cullom on Saturday, after he had ruled Wiley, a Dover player, out at the plate. Friends of the umpire, however, hurried him away in an automobile and the Dover following had to be content with the 6 to 5 defeat handed them by Hackettstown. On the winning team were several former Central New Jersey Leaguers, including Jimmy Clinton, the former Somerville hurler, who did the pitching stunt on Saturday; Billy Stallings, former Pet and brother of Eddie Stallings, a resident of North Plainfield; Joe Harter and Artie Pickering.

Dick Redding, the "cannon ball king" of the Lincoln Giants, was on the mound for the losers, assisting "Cyclone Joe" Williams in the task of holding back the invaders.

NEW BRUNSWICK KNIGHTS TO HAVE BASEBALL NINE

The building committee of New Brunswick Council, No. 257, Knights of Columbus, have prepared plans for extensive changes and renovation to the building. These include installing two modern bowling alleys and redecorating and painting the interior of the building. The work will be commenced the early part of next month and will be completed about the first of October.

The New Brunswick Knights will put a baseball team on the field and see no reason why the local Knights of Columbus should not be their first victims. The Middlesex lads expect to stage a baseball game between the married and single members of their council sometime in the near future. Local sport enthusiasts see no reason why the local knights should not do the same stunt.

LOCAL MEN IN AUTO CLUB.

Enrolled in the ranks of the Middlesex Automobile Club, a new organization with a membership of eighty-five, are C. A. Coriell, of Dunellen, and Lewis Randolph, of South Plainfield.

—Among the readers of this newspaper's classified columns are possible buyers for any desirable real estate in this city.

JOHNNY COUGHLIN WILL HEAD NETHERWOOD TEAM

Owing to the inclement weather, Matty Coughlin, manager of Netherwood City League baseball team, was obliged to call off the game scheduled to be played with the Knights of St. Peter at New Brunswick yesterday. Lou Slocum and Jake Deinzer were to be the opposing pitchers had the battle been played.

From now on, Johnny Coughlin will manage the Netherwood team. Up until this time Matty Coughlin has been handling the affairs of the club and has been unusually successful. However, Johnny managed the team last year and led the boys to the championship of the City League. John has been out of town for some time but it is expected that he will be home in time to assume charge at next Saturday's game with the Dunellens. Matty Coughlin will be retained as a player on the team.

DOUBLE BILL POSTPONED.

The baseball game scheduled to be played betwen the Tabs and the Eries of Kearney, at Avon Oval yesterday, had to be called off on account of wet grounds. The "prelim" was also postponed.

Miss Alice Lee, of The Madison, is spending her vacation at Kennebunkport, Maine.

Harry Eliott, of Summit avenue, has returned from an automobile trip through Orange county, New York.

WILSON GIVES CARRANZA UNTIL THURSDAY MORNING TO RELEASE PRISONERS TAKEN AT CARRIZAL

WASHINGTON BELIEVES HOSTILITIES WITH MEXICO CANNOT BE AVERTED NOW—RUSHING MILITIA TO BORDER.

25,000 ON WAY THERE THIS AFTERNOON

South American Countries Are Called Upon by Mexico to Witness That U. S. Has Forced War on Her Without Cause—Congress Does Its Part to Aid in Preparing for Conflict by Making Appropriations.

Washington, June 27.—The war threat of the United States government has so far failed to free the eighteen soldiers held prisoners by Carranza in Chihuahua City, and the time limit for obedience to this demand is almost up. President Wilson will probably allow a further delay of twenty-four hours, during which time all available militiamen will be sent to the border, and if the Tenth Cavalry troopers captured in the Carrizal fight are not freed them, Gen. Pershing will be ordered to "get" them.

After the Cabinet meeting today it was announced that all discussion of the future policy in Mexico has been held in abeyance pending a reply from Carranza. Administration officials are determined that this reply must reach Washington before Thursday morning at the latest. Action will be taken immediately if Carranza delays his response beyond that time.

There is little hope here that Carranza will send anything but a warlike answer to the American ultimatum of last Saturday. His Foreign Secretary is busy sending messages to the South American countries calling attention to the fact that "the American government, without justifiable or political reasons for declaring war on Mexico, wish to make it inevitable," and this is accepted as evidence that Carranza will not release the United States soldiers held as prisoners and will refuse to make a diplomatic statement of the attitude of the Mexican government toward this country.

A total of 25,000 militia troops are on their way to the border today and within a short time they will be able to relieve this number of seasoned regulars, who will then be free for use in Mexico.

The House has voted an increase of $22,960,000 in the regular army appropriation bill for preparedness, but there was criticism over the alleged inadequate supply of machine guns.

While news of naval operations is suppressed, save for the hustling of Americans aboard warships and any kind of craft available at Mexican ports, the understanding is that cruisers and light draft vessels are taking up their assigned stations ready for blockade of both Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The big battleship squadrons have not been ordered south yet.

While these active preparations are going on in War and Navy Departments, the President and Secretary Lansing and marking diplomatic time, waiting for Carranza's decision whether he wants peace or war. The First Chief has two questions that he must answer. The first is whether he will surrender the seventeen prisoners captured in the Carrizal fight. The second is "an early statement as to the course of action he wishes the United States govenment to understand he has determined upon."

Overtures of diplomats from small South and Central American States proposing mediation have been rejected by the State Department. Labor union delegates from Mexico who came to Washington from Mexico to confer with American Federation of Labor officials on vague peace and fraternity propositions have not been accorded Government recognition.

All diverting or dust-throwing schemes have been cast aside by the Administration and the issue narrowed strictly down to a demand for a direct "yes" or "no" answer from Carranza.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR D. T. KENNEY

U. S. District Court Sustains His Claims in Action Against Infringement.

IMPORTANT DECISION

Suit Was Brought by Vacuum Cleaner Co. vs. Innovation Electric Co.—Judge Mayer Writes the Opinion of Court.

Another victory for the Vacuum Cleaner Company has just been recorded in its action against the Innovation Electric Company, of New York, the decision in which was handed own yesterday by Judge Mayer, of the United States District Court. As in other suits, the Vacuum Cleaner Company claimed an infringement of patents which were the invention of David T. Kenney, of this city.

The decision in the latest suit was just as sweeping in favor of the plaintiff company as in the other actions, which include one against the Rotary Valve Company, of Chicago. Important parts of the decision written by Judge Mayer are as follows:

"The case at bar has confirmed the conclusion announced in Vacuum Cleaner Co. vs. American Rotary Valve Co., 227F, 998, that Kenney founded the modern art of vacuum cleaning and that his invention has not only added much in the way of greater comfort and improved hygienic conditions from the household to the skyscraper, but has opened an opportunity for extensive manufacture with the consequent employment of labor from the mechanic to the salesman.

"Such an invention is of great merit and, in determining its scope, the court must endeavor to look at the patent in suit and at the prior art with the eyes of yesterday and to realize what could or could not be accomplished today if the prior art alone had been followed and the disclosures of the patent had never been made.

"The fundamentally important propositon which Kenney taught the art and practically exemplified, was the vacuum idea as contrasted with the air current theory.

"Throughout the proceedings in the patent office, Kenney stood his ground and step by step overcame the objections and references made by the office in the course of the prosecution of his patents.

"The presumption which goes with the grant, is fortified in this case by careful and diligent examination to which Kenney's applications were subjected.

"The patent is valid and claim four is infringed, and plaintiff may submit the usual decree excluding from the accounting the period from November, 1910, to October, 1915, and settle decree on notice."

The above suit was to restrain infringement of claim 4, of U. S. Pattent No. 847947, granted to David T. Kenney, dated March 19, 1907. The application was filed November 29, 1901. Charles Neave, William G. McKnight and Frank C. Cole, all of New York, represented the plaintiff and Francis W. Parker, of Chicago, and A. L. Kent, of New York, were counsel for the defendant company.

PROTEST INCREASE IN SCHOOL TUITION

North Plainfield Township to Take Matter up With State Board.

The Borough Board of Education held its final meeting for the year last evening and at this meeting much was accomplished. The resignation of Miss Laura Sydenham was received and accepted. A letter of regret will be sent Miss Sydenham in the near future. Miss Florence Gratton was engaged as a teacher for the special class. This class is not unlike the "opportunity" classes on this side of the brook, and Miss Gratton has had experience in this line. Bids for supplies and coal were received and the goods ordered purchased.

There was much discussion regarding the meeting of the North Plainfield Township Board of Education and the State Board of Education. This meeting will be held in Trenton on Saturday and the borough will be represented by Dr. J. H. Cooley. A letter on the subject of "High School School Tuition" has been prepared by Judd Stewart and will be read at the meeting. Resolutions of thanks were order sent to Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong and William L. Saunders for the addresses made at the graduating exercises of the High School. It was announced that Dr. Roger L. Cooley will be the school physician for the coming year. Dr. Cooley replaces Dr. A. H. Dundon. All bills incurred during the year were ordered paid.

CROWD SEES TROOP TRAINS GO TROUGH

Hundreds at Local Depot, But No Plainfielders Come This Way.

Hundreds of Plainfielders were at the North avenue station this morning to see the first Eastern militiamen go through en route to the border. It was reported that the detachment including Troops A and C, of New Jersey, would pass through Plainfield, and men and women crowded the station for a last look at loved ones or friends.

The troop train ran in three sections and long before the first had passed Elizabeth there was a crowd at the local depot. Its progress was eagerly watched through the courteous railroad employees, and there was a sigh of disappointment when it became known that the first section had stopped a few minutes at Elizabethport, because of a hot box. Soon word came that it was moving again.

Many of those in the crowd carried flags and some brought packages or letters for the local troopers, hoping that the train would stop a few minutes. Judge William DeMeza, Chief of Police Kiely, Fire Chief Doane and City Collector Townsend were among the city officials present. There were at least two hundred women in the crowd.

The first section passed through at 11:30. With a flag streaming from each side of the engine headlight it flashed past. The train was going at such speed that it would have been impossible to recognize any Plainfielders had they been aboard. This section carried a number of Saurer trucks loaded on flat cars, in addition to several cars of horses and the passenger coaches in which the soldiers rode. In the driving seat of one of the trucks rode a civilian, a boy of apparently 16 or 18 years of age. He had evidently climbed aboard after the train started and was stealing a ride, but the swaying of the car made his seat a precarious one and it was plain that he was not enjoying his trip.

Section 2 followed fifteen minutes later, and section 3 about the same time after it. All passed through Plainfield at great speed and it was said that the first stop would be made at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where engines would be changed.

Troops A and C were not among those that went through here this morning. Several Plainfielders will challenge this statement as they are certain they recognized several friends, but the Plainfield boys did not leave Sea Girt until 11:30, and they were routed over the Pennsylvania.

Judge DeMeza is sure he recognized Johnny Reinhart, and several are equally positive they saw Trooper Jack Caulfield, but the train was going so fast that it made "all the soldiers look alike."

Two farewell notes were dropped at the local station. One was addressed to Robert Pruden, of Plainfield, and was from N. Van Peit, Company I, First New Jersey Regiment. The sheet of paper merely contained these names. The other was from Fred Schultz, of the First New Jersey Infantry. He asked that someone send a postal card "to cheer up the boys." His address will be El Paso, so far as he knows now.

MISS SPARKS TO SING AT CHAUTAUQUA TENT TONIGHT

Miss Lenore Sparks, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be the attraction at the Chautaugua tent tonight. Miss Sparks is to appear in a song recital, assisted by pianist of ability. The Victor Florentine band was heard in two enjjoyable recitals yesterday afternoon and evening by good crowds. Tonight closes the local program.

"MAC" GOES THROUGH ENROUTE TO OCEAN GROVE

William McEwan, soloist and choir leader with the Biederwolf Evangelistic party, passed through Plainfield this morning and stopped for a few minutes to see friends. "Mac" is working in Chautauqua entertainments this summer. He left Allentown, Pa., last night and was en route to Ocean Grove, where he will sing tonight.

WHERE TO ADDRESS PLAINFIELDERS IN TROOP C.

Official announcement of the assignments for the various New Jersey units was made last night by Colonel John B. Bellinger, of the quartermaster's department, U. S. A., at Governor's Island. New Jersey will go direct to El Paso, Texas, with the Massachusetts troops.

The Plainfielders may be addressed as follows: "John Doe, Troop C, First Squadron, New Jersey Cavalry, Fort Bliss, near El Paso, Texas.

EATON SAYS THE OLD WORLD DIED

America Should Prepare to Take Its Part in Remodeling of Civilization.

TALK ON PREPAREDNESS

U. S. Must Prepare by Building Army and Navy Large Enough to Force Respect, and its People Must Have Patriotic Awakening.

Real preparedness for America means a preparedness that will fit its citizens to take their place in the peace of the world as well as in its wars, according to Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, of New York, who talked to members of the Dutch Arms Men's organization of Trinity Reformed church last night.

Before the address of Dr. Eaton a business meeting of the organization was held at which the following officers were elected: Arthur B. Cole, president; W. E. Moke, first vice president; George W. Anderson, second vice president; R. P. Gay, corresponding secretary; W. H. Olmsted, financial secretary, and George E. Volk, treasurer. More than two hundred members were present, with a number of women. Refreshments were served.

Dr. Eaton's subject was "Preparedness," and he said that the Mexican situation would probably serve to awake Americans to a new patriotism. The country is not only unprepared from a military standpoint, he said, but is unprepared for a spiritual response to the development of the Kingdom of God. Its people do not understand and appreciate the principles on which the country was founded. They are like the drunken son of a rich father, who squanders the fruits of the father's life without thinking of the sacrifices made by the parent.

The military situation is shameful, said Dr. Eaton. He said that the United States has long been protected byy the English navy and would continue to be protected from any European country, but that it needed a strong army and navy to maintain its present position of respect on this continent. Two ever present sources of danger are the Monroe Doctrine and Mexico. We have no policy as a nation toward Mexico, and yet we are responsible for Mexico to the rest of the world, declared the speaker. "We have got to see that she doesn't raise the devil and hurt us."

As an example of the total lack of military unpreparedness he cited the Villa raid on Columbus, saying that the United States only had one machine gun there and it would not work, and that it took weeks for a nation of 100,000,000 people to organize a posse to arrest one man. We are drifting every day toward a declaration of war, he continued, and when war comes it must be intervention. The United States must tell all the world that it does not want Mexican land, but that it is going into the country to model it after America. This means more than an army or a navy—it means an army of school teachers, a corps of financiers, and thousands of men and women capable of developing 15,000,000 people, 13,000,000 of whom are now illiterate and criminal. This work, if done right, will be "the most glorious thing ever done by a nation in the history of man," said Dr. Eaton "and will take 30 years."

The world died on August 1, 1914, according to Dr. Eaton and a new world must rise out of its ashes after the war. That new world in Europe will not be English, French nor German, but will include the best things of all these governments, but will be modeled after America. It will accept as the standards of morality the teachings of Jesus Christ and he urged that Americans prepare spiritually to do their part in the remodeling of the world.

WILL MAKE SUPPLIES FOR AMERICAN FORCES

A special meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Prince of Wales Committee was held in Grace Episcopal church parish house to discuss plans for making hospital supplies for the American army as well as continuing their work for the Allies armies abroad. It was decided for the present to divide the work equally, one-half to be reserved for the American army until needed. Before the meeting adjourned $115 was subscribed to be used for providing supplies for the American army in Mexico. The work of the local branch will continue as it has heretofore, meetings being held every Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in the Grace church parish house. All interested are cordially invited to aid in this work and to add their contribution to the American fund.

TEN PLAINFIELD CAVALRYMEN OFF TO TEXAS FOLLOWING AN ALL NIGHT WAIT FOR ORDERS

DELAY HOLDS UP DEPARTURE OF TROOPS A AND C, OF NEWARK, WITH LOCAL BOYS—ALL WELL AND ENTHUSIASTIC.

ROUTED OVER THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD

Crowds Who Gathered at Local Depot Disappointed in Not Seeing Troops—Cavalrymen Had Nothing to Eat From Yesterday Noon Until This Morning—Eleventh Hour Mixup.

(By Telegraph from a Staff Correspondent.)

MOBILIZATION CAMP, SEA GIRT, June 27.—Ten members of Troop D have already started for the front. At least that number have responded to their nation's call. They were transferred late yesterday afternoon to Troop C, of Essex county, Newark, and are now on their way to the border with that organization, under command of Captain Kyle. They are all rookies, having enlisted since the National Guard were called out, and here are the names:

Walter Glaentzer, Plainfield
John E. Rinehart, Plainfield
John T. Caulfield, Plainfield
Cornelius Murray, Plainfield
John F. Sickler, Plainfield
Henry M. Jackson, Eufaula, Ala
G. Noonan, Bayonne
Thomas F. Noonan, Bayonne
George T. Hoffman, Somerville
George W. Smith, Ocean Grove

During the afternoon Captain Borden walked down the company street and asked for volunteers who would leave the Plainfield command and go at once. There were plenty who responded and a dozen of these were marched to Captain Kyle's tent, where the ten named above were accepted. The boys were given a rousing send-off by the other members of the troop as they packed up their goods, smiling in anticipation of leaving, and soon seeing actual service.

The rest of the members of Troop D were kept busy supplying horses and equipment for the departing troops. They brought the draught mules up from the main encampment, turned over saddles, bridles and various supplies, and saw to it that the men to see active service had everything they needed.

Even though they were equipped and ready to depart at 5 o'clock last night the troops were held up until 11:30 this morning and were accorded another rousing send-off by Troop D and other "left-behinds" as the big sections steamed out of the Sea Girt depot bound over the Pennsylvania Railroad for Fort Bliss, Texas, by way of Philadelphia.

The Plainfielders did not pass through Plainfield, this being a great disappointment to the boys who wished to get a departing glimpse of the city en route to Mexico. The First Regiment went by way of the Central Railroad and went through Plainfield in three sections.

The men were up all night, watchfully waiting for further instructions. From yesterday noon until this morning they had had nothing to eat and when breakfast was served this morning by Chief Cook Eugene Johnston, of Troop D, and the cooks of Troop D it was eagerly devoured by the famished guardsmen.

When seen by a Daily Press reporter on the train a few minutes before it pulled out from Sea Girt the Plainfield boys were all in good spirits and called out the car window as it pulled out: "Remember us to all the boys at home."

Major Harold D. Corbusier and his field hospital corps, together with the ambulance corps, got away at 3 o'clock this morning. All of the boys in the hospital corps, a number of whom are Plainfielders, are well and enthusiastic.

General Wilbur Sadler received a request from the government this morning for more New Jersey troops but replied that no others could be sent until additional equipment was received. About 150 recruits now at Sea Girt are either without equipment or only partly equipped. General Sadler, when interviewed by a Daily Press representative this morning, said that mess kits, ammunition and various other articles will have to be available before any more troops are moved to the border.

The Ford truck, donated by several Plainfield men to Troop D, arrived this morning, and is being put to good use.

Private J. Hartley Mellick has been elevated to the rank of mess sergeant, having been appointed yesterday by Captain Borden. He is the only man whose rank has been changed as yet, but before the troop leaves for the front at least two more sergeants and two more corporals will be added to Troop D. Sergeant Mellick assumed his new rank at once.

Tight lines were drawn around the camp yesterday and few visitors were admitted. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace church, was one of those who visited the camp, and he spent several hours with the boys. A few other Plainfielders came down, but the vast majority of the troopers had gotten word home that they were not to go, and advised their relatives not to come down.

Bugler Warren Ackerman expected to go as Bugler for Troop C, but at the last moment that organization secured a former regular army man, and Ackerman was mich disappointed at not being able to get off.

(By a Staff Correspondent)

Mobilization Camp, Sea Girt, June 27.—Dissatisfaction has at last been heard among the men of Troop D, especially the recruits. It is not over the food, the crowded tents, or the mud through which all had to wade until a late hour yesterday afternoon. It all comes because every man in camp was not called out with the first lot of soldier boys to go. The officers have had to do a lot of explaining, and while the explanations were received in the spirit in which they were given, there are still a lot of disappointed men, both recruits and the more seasoned militia men and troopers.

With an idea of trying to make the boys more content with conditions, Major Bryant called the soldiers together shortly before Troops A and C, of Newark, broke camp late yesterday afternoon. The Majr had the men of Troop B, of Red Bank, and D, of Plainfield, called together and briefly explained that they would be sent on as soon as plans could be completed for equipping them. He said that the government had called for two efficient troops, and there was no alterative but to send A and C, of Newark. He explained that those men who were taken from the two troops remaining at home, in order to send A and C with a full quota, would be given an opportunity to rejoin their former commands when they later were joined together as a squadron "somewhere in Texas," and that until that time he hoped that all would try to make the best of things and get their commands in shape to leave at the earliest possible moment. He then asked the men to listen to Major Nelson B. Gaskill, of the adjutant-general's staff, who would explain about the enlistments.

There has been considerable doubt in the minds of numerous troopers as to just what their standing was, if for family reasons they wished to withdraw from the service, and go back home. The general orders issued on June 19 were rather vague on this score, and newspaper reports and rumors around camp have not added to the peace of mind of those who feel that on the first call they should not respond and leave their families in want. Major Gaskill made an inspiring address which was received with prolonged cheers.

He explained to the men that none of them would be compelled to take

GEORGE AND JOHN JUROSKI CHARGED WITH BURGLARY

George and John Juroski, aged 16 and 13 respectively, were arrested last night by Marshals Tarpey and Keppler at their home in the Equator Park section charged with having entered the barn of Councilman Forman G. Neighbour Saturday afternoon while the family were on the front porch and stealing bicycle accessories valued at over $10.

The older brother has only been out of the Jamesburg Reformatory a short time. He served over a year there for breaking into the home of Ernest C. Kepler in Equator Park.

The younger boy was also implicated in this affair but on account of his age was not punished by the court. When informed of the Neighbour robbery Marshal Tarpey thought it might be well to look the Juroski boys up. So he and Marshal Keppler went to their home and a search of the cellar revealed the stolen property, which has been returned.

Marshal Harry Shugars is laid up. He is employed on the railroad gang of the New Jersey Central and while cutting ties yesterday with a five-pound ax, the ax slipped and cut his foot quite badly.

Mrs. A. G. Nelson, who has been quite ill for the past few days, is now recovering.

Mrs. Robert A. Nagle has been confined to her bed since she was taken suddenly ill Sunday night.

John Hayes has taken a position at Levgar's.

Fred Wilcox, of Oklahoma, a former resident of this place, is renewing old acquaintances here.

Contractor A. H. Burdick has started the erection of a new house on Washington avenue, south.

DUNELLEN IS GROWING.

One evidence that the town is growing rapidly is the fact that Postmaster Willard N. Apgar has been obliged to negotiate with Russell E. Runyon, the owner of the postoffice building for the installation of 100 new letter boxes. It is understood that if the business of the local office continues to grow at its present rate it will be a second class office by 1917.

J. Ramsey Fisher, a fireman in the employ of the New Jersey Central, is detained at his home by an ankle which he sprained when he jumped off of his engine.

Edward Maurer and family have gone for Lake Hopatcong, where they have a summer home.

LAST LADIES' AID MEETING.

The last meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Episcopal church until next October will be held at the home of Mrs. George Kyte, of Martine avenue, tomorrow afternoon. A special program has been arranged for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Meggy, of North avenue, are entertaining relatives from Stamford, Conn.

POPULAR AT SEA GIRT.

The Rev. J. Madison Hare has for some time been known by the members of the Fourth Regiment, N. J. N. G., of which he is chaplain, as the "shooting parson" and rightly, too, as he is a crack shot, but since he went to Sea Girt with his regiment he has been uniting so many "war brides" with the soldier boys that he will now be the "marrying parson" as well.

The junk dealers have been having a rather rough time of it in the borough and township during the past week and all because they sought to evade the ordinances in both places. After Marshal Logan had taken one junkman before Recorder Charles Sheelen for a fine the rest voluntarily took out licenses, and in Scotch Plains Marshal Sullivan simply makes them take out a license.

LETTER CARRIERS TO HOLD PATRIOTIC CELEBRATION

The New York Letter Carriers' Association will hold their annual patriotic celebration on Tuesday, July 4, at Schuetzen Park, Union Hill. The proceeds will be added to the sick and death benefit fund of the association. In line with the spirit of the times, a preparedness demonstration has been arranged for this occasion, consisting of exhibits of army and navy equipments, drills by soldiers and sailors, boy scouts, etc., and in the evening moving pictures featuring the defence of the country and a splendid display of fireworks will be shown.

The Burglar's Hour.

"This is a poor night for burglars," I said to the policeman when I took the dog for his last trot. "You could see a mouse tonight."

"Yes," he said, "and hear it too. It's dead still as well as light."

"What sort suits burglars best?" I asked.

His answer came without any hesitation.

"Dark, wet and windy," he said.

"Dark I can understand," I said, "but why wet?"

"Folk stay at home in wet weather, and they think the burglar would never choose a rotten night like this. That's their way of looking at it. The burglar knows that, and he says, 'My best time is just when I'm least expected.'"

"And why windy?" I queried.

"You can hear a cat sneeze tonight," said the policeman. "If a window or door squeaked the householder or his missus would be sitting up listening, and the old woman wouldn't rest till hubby prowled round a bit. But on a windy night it's different. Bang, rattle, bump, swish, clatter, all the blessed night."—Exchange.

An Obedient Man.

The other morning one of the regular patrons boarded the car at the usual place, but instead of taking a seat he started to walk back and forth in the car. There were plenty of seats, and the action of the regular patron attracted the attention of one of his business associates.

"What's the matter, Dan? Why don't you take a seat?" he was asked.

"Serving two masters!" came back the reply. "You see, when I started out this morning my mother-in-law reminded me that it was such a fine morning that I should walk to the office. Wifey, more considerate of my well being, told me to ride. I am trying to obey them both so that when I get home this evening from the office I can truthfully say that I won't have to lie to either of them." And the regular patron kept on walking back and forth.—Columbus Dispatch.

CHORUS TO SING AMONG THE TREES

500 Voices Will Present Patriotic Program in City Park July 4.

MORE MONEY NEEDED

Venetian Quartet, of New York, Will Also Have a Part in the Celebration—Complete List of the Assistants.

Five hundred voices singing patriotic airs through the trees of the city park in the presence of 15,000 will be a distinctive feature of the great Fourth of July celebration next Tuesday afternoon, which will be more thrilling than the bombast of the old-fashioned screech-bomb of former celebrations.

The novelty of having the singers in the midst of the trees is quite by accident. The grandstand that will be erected this week will probably be the largest temporary structure of its kind ever put up here.

The Venetian Quartet, of New York, will be one of the big features, it being that part of the program in which the Italian Nest of Owls will participate in the celebration of Garibaldi's birthday, who was born on that day. The Public Recreation Committee in charge of the program is facing a problem for more funds are needed to make the celebration a success. Checks should be sent to De Witt Hubbell, of The Plainfield Trust Company, so that they may reach him by tomorrow night at the latest. The rehearsal for the big choir will be held Thursday night at the Plainfield High School and Clifford A. Braider, leader, will then distribute tickets to the choir stand. This will be the only opportunity to get them. It is hoped to make this celebration an annual event. Champlain L. Riley's assistants are as follows:

Clifford A. Braider, Dr. and Mrs. A. K. Brennan Allen E. Beals, Mrs. Harold D. Corbusier, wife of Major Corbusier, of the First New Jersey Field Hospital Corps; Mrs. Archibald Cox, F. T. Dickerson, Leslie R. Fort, Charles H. Frost, Mrs. Francis De L. Hyde, F. W. Iredell, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Jones, Dr. E. S. Krans, Mrs. Dr. Clara De H Krans, Dr. Henry M. Maxson, Miss E. MAJOR CHARLES IRWIN WEDS MISS TRENBATH

Ceremony is Performed by Rev. Robert W. Trenbath, Brother of the Bride.

An attractive home wedding took place at noon today when Miss Alys Trenbath, of 519 Central avenue, this city, became the bride of Major Charles W. Irwin, of Elizabeth. The Rev. Robert W. Trenbath, of St. James' church, Upper Montclair, brother of the bride, performed the ceremony, while another brother, Herbert Trenbath, of Trenton, gave her in marriage. Only the immediate relatives were present.

An informal reception followed the ceremony after which the couple left for the Adirondacks, where they will spend some time. Upon their return they will reside here for a time.

The bride has for the past five years been a teacher in the Jefferson Public School, prior to which time she taught in the Bayonne schools. She has a large circle of friends and acquaintances with whom she is popular.

Major Irwin is probation officer for Union county, a position he has held for some time. He is connected with the Second Regiment, Infantry, a member of the Elizabeth Lodge of Elks and the American Legion. He is also well known not only in Elizabeth, but throughout the county and State.

CRIPPLE GETS AUTO LICENSE.

But State Warns a One Handed Man to Drive Carefully.

With a caution to drive carefully and avoid bad roads the state of Connecticut granted an auto license to Irving Collins of Mansfield following a hearing before State Secretary Charles B. Burns.

Collins, whose right hand has been amputated, has rigged up his auto so he can shift gears with his feet.

He is the owner of a poultry farm in Mansfield and has a summer hotel at Waterford. Because of business he travels about the country a good deal.

GRADING COTTON.

To persons not familiar with the technical side of cotton grading—and this means incidentally many men who make their livings producing the staple—such terms as "strict good ordinary," "low middling" and "middling fair," often encountered in print, are a meaningless jumble of words. Less than three years ago—as a matter of fact, until Uncle Sam came to the rescue—the terms meant little enough in the most technical phases of the cotton trade. Nearly every one of the large "spot" cotton markets of the country—where actual bales of cotton are bought and sold—had a different scheme of grading, and a still different system was employed in Liverpool, long the chief cotton market of the world.

The variations gave rise to endless disputes and the loss of much time and money. Attempts had been made from time to time by various associations to reach an agreement as to standards, but had never proved successful. Many experienced cotton dealers believed that variations among cotton grown in various sections of the south was so great that the formulation of a satisfactory system of grades of universal application would be impossible.

Under authority of congress, however, the then newly created office of markets of the department of agriculture took up the problem in 1914 and established standards that have not only met with practically universal acceptance in the United States, but that have been accepted to a certain extent in the chief foreign cotton markets. Demand for the government standards is so brisk, in fact, that a large force of experts is kept busy now in specially equipped workrooms in Washington arranging the carefully selected samples of fiber of different grades in special receptacles and preparing them for shipment.

FAKES FROM ABROAD.

American mails are being flooded with frauds from abroad. Beware, says the postoffice department, of all seductive circulars from foreign agents who offer to read your horoscope and by doing so put you on the road to health, prosperity and happiness. All they ask is the small consideration of two or three dollars, which, indeed, would be little enough to pay for these precious gifts if they were actually forthcoming. But here is the rub—they are not.

Crafty "crooks" are operating from England, France and Holland, increasing their incomes at the expense of the superstitious and credulous. The government has been investigating these fraud cases by the score, but their literature still flows into the country, and despite all efforts of the postoffice authorities money orders continue to be sent by trusting individuals who want to learn what the future holds in store for them.

The literature of these fraudulent astrologers which the department has collected in its pursuit of evidence makes entertaining reading. They are a clever set, well acquainted with human nature. Everything within the scope of mortal desire is anticipated, and their circulars promise the most definite aid for overcoming troubles, conquering foes and achieving all the desires of the soul, mind and body.

HEADLIGHTS MORE POWERFUL.

Railroad locomotives in road service between sunset and sunrise are required by an order of the interstate commerce commission to have a headlight sufficiently powerful to enable persons in the locomotive cab to see an object the size of a man a distance of 1,000 feet or more ahead in normal weather conditions.

Locomotives required to run backward in road service must have a rear headlight of the same type, and those used in yard or terminal stations will be required to carry two lights strong enough to make a man size object visible at a distance of 300 feet or more.

The order is made applicable to all new steam locomotives put in service after Oct. 1 next and to others given a general overhauling before that date. All engines now in service must be equipped with the lights not later than 1920.

MANUFACTURE OF BUTTONS.

In the 1914 census of manufactures for the button industry, with which is incorporated a comparison with the figures for 1909, an increased number of establishments is reported, but the value of the products is not so great as that for 1909. Returns were received by the United States bureau of the census from 517 establishments which manufactured buttons during 1914. The total value of the products of these establishments was $20,791,985. At the census of 1909 there were 444 establishments, with products valued at $22,708,065. In addition fifty establishments engaged primarily in other industries manufactured buttons to the value of $482,061 in 1914.

TEXAS RANGERS AT WAR STRENGTH

Four Companies Composed of Men Who Do Things.

MANY FROM THE RANCHES.

Are Used to Rough Life and Are Familiar With Every Foot of Border Territory—Drinking, Gambling and Profanity Are Barred—All Are Crack Shots and Hardened Troopers.

For the first time in more than forty years the Texas ranger force has been recruited to its full strength of eighty-two men and officers. When Governor Ferguson issued an order recently that the organization be raised to "war" strength the office of Adjutant General Hutchings was immediately flooded with applications for enlistment. Many muscular, keen eyed men, each bearing the distinguishing marks of the ranch and open spaces in his attire and general aspect, went to Austin in person and made every possible effort to get into the service. General Hutchings says he could have easily formed a regiment within a few days.

Practically all of the ranger recruits came from the ranches. In most instances they are perfectly familiar with the border region. Besides being proficient in the Spanish language, they know the Mexican character intimately. The rangers do not follow any defined military tactics or rules of campaign. They simply go out and "get" their men. The fact that the victim is usually dead when he is brought back makes the very name "ranger" a terror to evildoers on the border.

Strenuous Requirements.

It has always been a requirement of the ranger force that he shall be an expert shot with pistol and rifle, a good rider, of perfect physical fitness and proved daring and bravery. To these essentials there has been added in comparatively recent years the requirements that the ranger must not be addicted to gambling. And it is easy to find plenty of men who measure up. Because a ranger shoots to kill in performance of his duty is no reason why he may not be a good church member.

Captain John R. Hughes, who served for more than a quarter of a century in the ranger service and retired a year or so ago, was of the mild mannered, churchgoing type, who was at the same time a terror to the lawless element. For several years he was superintendent of the Sunday school at Ysleta. He has been known to dismiss his Sunday school and mount his horse and go in a chase after bandits, perhaps killing an outlaw or two on the expedition. Drinking, gambling and profanity were absolutely barred among the men comprising his company.

The ranger force as now organized consists of four separate companies of mounted men, each company consisting of a captain, one first sergeant and twenty privates.

Their Equipment.

The pay of the captains is $100 each a month; sergeants, $50; privates, $40. The term of enlistment is two years, subject to disbandment of all or any part of the force at any time. Each officer, noncommissioned officer and private is required to furnish himself with a suitable horse, saddle, bridle and clothing. The state must pay for the horse if it is killed in action. The carbine and pistol are furnished by the state, but the cost is deducted from the wages of the ranger on the first pay day. The state furnishes rations, camp equipage, ammunition and forage.

WEST POINTERS MAY GO.

Class of 1917 May Be Graduated at Once to Supply Officers.

Embarrassed by a shortage of regular army officers at this time, members of the general staff considered graduation next month of the class at West Point who ordinarily would graduate in June, 1917. In the event of war, some officials told Secretary Baker, such a step would be necessary.

Precedent for such action occurred during the Spanish-American war, when first class men at the Military academy were graduated in February instead of June, 1898, and the class that would have graduated in 1899 was graduated in June, 1898.

The suggestion now considered is to give these men their commissions in July and send them out as militia and recruit instructors. Should the number be insufficient it was suggested these 140 cadets be commissioned and assigned to posts, while the class that would graduate ordinarily in 1918 be sent out as militia instructors.

News Read to Convicts.

Holding that the newspapers in themselves have been "the greatest educators yet submitted to civilization," James M. Carter, state superintendent of prisons, is preparing to have brief extracts from the daily papers read to the convicts after supper, acquainting them with the big news events and making them feel like normal men at home.

Brazil to Celebrate.

Brazil is already making preparations to celebrate the centennial of its independence in 1922.

PLANNING TO HAVE SAFE, SANE FOURTH

Fire Prevention Federation Sends Plea to Governors.

WOULD SAFEGUARD LIVES.

President Wilson to Be Asked to Designate Oct. 9 as Fire Prevention Day, to Be Observed by All Cities of the Nation—Casualties of Former Years.

A special meeting of the national fire prevention committee of the Safety First Federation of America was held at the City club in New York for the purpose of discussing the forthcoming celebration of Independence day and a proposal to request President Wilson to designate Oct. 9, the anniversary of the great Chicago fire, as national fire prevention day.

Ex-Deputy Chief William Guerin of the New York fire department presided. Mr. Guerin announced that the nation wide movement to make the coming Fourth the safest in the history of the country was in full swing and that in all states governors and other officials were doing everything possible to assist the committee in its campaign. Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the National federation, he announced, had mailed to the governors of the various states a letter in which he said:

May I place before you and ask you to further a plan under which Independence day may be celebrated this year in a saner and therefore safer manner than has been the custom heretofore? The plan is offered for the purpose of diminishing the usual heavy toll of young lives, to lessen injuries to persons and to decrease the attendant destruction of property by fire. For the furtherance of such a plan the Safety First federation believes it is justified in asking your hearty co-operation.

On behalf of the federation, I urge you to issue a proclamation to the people of your commonwealth calling upon the citizens generally to do their part and to aid public officials in enforcing the local regulations. It is suggested that you particularly address yourself to those in charge of public schools and charge that suitable instructions as to the dangers attending the use of fireworks, firecrackers and other explosives be given to the children.

The following instructions may with propriety be given to public officials who have under their jurisdiction the regulations of the use of fireworks and explosives:

First.—That they issue no permits for the sale at retail of fireworks or explosives except paper caps.

Second.—That they issue no permits for the sale of fireworks at wholesale except for deliveries outside the jurisdiction of the officer issuing the permit.

Third.—That for ten days prior to July 4 they seize all fireworks kept or stored without a permit and destroy the same.

Fourth.—That they start at once a campaign of publicity, to be continued until July 5, especially using editorials on the evening of July 3 and morning of July 4.

Fifth.—That they obtain a supply of tetanus antitoxin for instant use as a preventative of lockjaw in cases of injury.

In the course of a talk to the members of the committee Mr. Guerin cited the Fourth of July casualty figures for the past thirteen years, statistics, he pointed out, which prove that the movement in behalf of safe celebrations of Independence day is making great headway. The figures show that in the thirteen years covered by the report 1,862 persons lost their lives and 42,139 were injured in Fourth of July celebrations, in most cases the death or injury being due to the careless handling of fire.

The statistics cited by Mr. Guerin were as follows:

Year.	Killed.	Injured.	Total.
1903	466	3,983	4,449
1904	183	3,986	4,169
1905	182	4,494	5,176
1906	158	5,308	5,466
1907	164	4,249	4,413
1908	163	5,460	5,623
1909	215	5,092	5,307
1910	131	2,792	2,923
1911	57	1,546	1,603
1912	41	947	988
1913	32	1,131	1,163
1914	40	1,466	1,506
1915	30	1,185	1,215

Mr. Kingsley will shortly appoint a committee to confer with President Wilson on the proposal to make Oct. 9 a national fire prevention day.

The National Guard

Pretty soft for all day hikin' through the stingin' alkali.
Pretty new to beans an' bacon and a total lack o' pie;
They will do a lot o' marchin' 'fore they get the army swing.
They will do a heap o' duckin' when they hear the bullets sing.
What's ahead o' them down yonder ain't no fall maneuver game—
It's a mess o' blood an' trouble, but they're goin' just the same!

Sure they're goin'! From all corners of the city, far an' near.
They are crowdin' one another to be first to answer "Here!"
Every man with eyes wide open, not a one that doesn't know
Just exactly what is waitin' on the way they've got to go.
Pretty soft an' shy o' trainin', but they only are afraid
That the word that sends 'em forward may be too blame long delayed.

Time will put the trainin' in 'em; time will learn 'em how to hike.
Time—an' Mexicans—will show 'em what a battlefield is like.
Appetite will sauce their rations, when there ain't no choice o' food.
An' you've marched from dawn to sunset anything you get is good.
But the grit an' nerve an' courage that meet danger with a song
They won't find 'em on the border—they are takin' them along!

PLAINFIELD CAVALRYMEN OFF

the new oath if they did not want to do so, and that if they took the new oath under the Chamberlain bill they would still merely be members of the National Guard, and could refuse to be mustered into the regular service, unless the President took advantage of his prerogative to draft them, which power he is given under the Chamberlain bill. But he stated that any organization that would not take the new oath would not have to leave Sea Girt, and would discontinue being a unit of the National Guard of New Jersey.

Major Gaskill impressed it upon the men that they must make up their minds now, as neither the State or the government wanted to pay their expenses to the border, and then have to send them back. But, he said, if there is anyone that does not want to go they should say so now, and not stay here for a vacation, and quit when the troops are ordered to move on.

"The National Guard is to be used as a stop-gap, as it were," continued Major Gaskill, "until the government can call for volunteers and recruit a regular army to not only patrol the border, but to go into Mexico if necessary. You all know that for the last two or three years the National Guard has been criticised as no good by members of Congress, the newspapers and by the public in general, even to the extent of calling us grafters. This is the deciding point and the whole State is proud of the way in which the militia has responded and mobilized. I want to urge this on all of you, and that is that upon what you men now do is going to depend a large extent the future of the National Guard of New Jersey. The men who have wives, children or others dependent upon them have a reason, but you want to be sure that your reason is a good one before deciding not to go. If you let little things stand in the way, imaginary things, and all try to stay home, the Guard will get a black eye that nothing will wipe out."

(By a Staff Correspondent)

Mobilization Camp, Sea Girt, June 27.—Realignments of the various commands occupied the time of the organizations which were to leave camp yesterday afternoon, and aside from drilling the rookies in the Fourth and Fifth Regiments there was no military duty required during the afternoon. At the cavalry camp the men of Troops B and D were occupied getting equipment and horses ready for the two outgoing troops, while the members of those organizations were given a little more freedom than has been the case before to bid farewell to the hundreds of relatives and friends who had hastened to Sea Girt, after reading in the morning papers of the impending departure of part of the organizations.

At both camps the scenes were tearful in the extreme. Mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters, and not a few sweethearts, were in the crowd that thronged the camp, watched the tearing down of the tents, the packing of the wagons, and the various necessary details which emphasized the fact that the National Guard means business, something which thousands of the visitors here on Sunday apparently could not comprehend. Everywhere the orderlies were rushing back and forth with orders to the commanders of the various organizations which were to leave camp. The guard lines, so far as vehicles were concerned, were drawn tighter, and real war conditions became more in evidence with each hour.

Battery A and B were the first to break camp, leaving the Buckalew farm shortly after 3 o'clock. The guns and caissons were sent down each in command of one or two men, for loading on the cars, and the men, after packing and rolling their personal belongings, marched on foot to the train. There was not a cheer from the infantry camp as they marched out as the men there were so occupied in getting the two troops ready to leave that they did not notice the movement from the artillery camp. Captain Lanterman, as he left, expressed great delight over the fact that although fifteen or more of his men had been permitted to go home because they were wage earners, a new detail was on the way from the armory to take their places and would be in camp before the battery pulled out.

Late in the afternoon Corporal J. E. Smith, one of the drummers in the Fifth Regiment band, slashed his throat with a razor, and died before assistance could reach him. There was only one other man in the tent with him, and that man fainted when Smith put the razor to his throat. No cause could be assigned for his suicide by any of his companions. He lived at 126 Paterson avenue, Paterson.

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, June 27.—Clad only in his B. V. D.'s, a pair of blue garters, socks of a little darker blue shade, and a pair of shoes that were coated with the thick yellow mud which was everywhere to be found in the cavalry camp and with a big leather belt around his waist, a forlorn looking man marched into Manasquan late yesterday afternoon. Behind him marched two privates from Battery B of Camden, with full equipment of side arms, and he was given no opportunity to stop. When he reached Manasquan the constable in the center of town first started for the middle of the street to make an arrest and then decided that the soliers could do anything they wanted to do so far as he was concerned. Anyway he did not like the looks of the six shooters that the two fully clothed men wore, and he thought that perhaps General Sadler was carrying out his threat to parade the men in the equipment which the United States Government has furnished the State.

When the vilage store was reached the leading actor walked in, only to come out at a rapid pace. Then he went on up the street to the oculist's, but he evidently didn't want glasses for he came out of there double quick. Finally at a candy store across the street he procured an old pair of khaki trousers, and then was started on his way home.

The two guards finally admitted that Battery B did not want any quitters in its ranks, and this man was the only one who refused to be mustered into the government service. He was a rookie from Merchantville, and evidently thought that a soldier's life was a life of ease and the excursion to the south to be a fine junket. A few hours' work trying to ride the wild horses that have been sent in for army use took all the ambition out of this future general, and he jumped at the opportunity to depart from hence. His batterymates took literal advantage of the orders for him to turn in the State's equipment, and that explains his predicament.

Battery B is the only organization which went away from Sea Girt to "somewhere in Texas" without losing a man, aside from the man mentioned above. The commanders of both the Newark troops and of the various companies in the First Regiment, as well as Captain Lanterman, of Battery A, gave married men with families which were dependent upon them for support, an opportunity to pull out, and they went without the ridicule of their companions. It was realized that they were not needed, as there are plenty of recruits in camp to fill the mounted organizations to full war strength, and the regiment to full peace strength, which was the way they left camp.

In the regiment there were twelve companies of 65 men and officers, the Colonel and his staff and the band and field music. In the batteries are 71 men and five officers, and each troop has 100 men and three officers.

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, June 27.—Swinging along with full marching equipment, to the strains of the First Regiment band, though a fog that was so thick that the marchers could hardly see the second column ahead, the men of the First Regiment, of Newark, broke camp shortly after midnight and went to the four trains which were waiting to carry them to Texas. With all the depressing weather conditions the Newark boys were a cheerful lot and seemed anxious to get under way. The prospect of a night spent trying to get a rest in ordinary day coaches did not seem to worry them in the slightest. It had been a tiresome afternoon and evening, with all sorts of rumors as to when camp was to be broken, and accompanied by the parting with many loved ones who had come to see them off.

The railroad had placed the cars on the sidings at Sea Girt before 8 o'clock, with engines attached, ready to move, but for a reason which has been unexplained there had been delay after delay getting under way. Colonel Fraser could not say when the regiment would move, and no one at the Adjutant General's office or brigade headquarters would venture a statement as to when they would get away, although General Sadler predicted it before morning.

With the two batteries things were slightly different. The men broke camp late in the afternoon and took their equipment to the Manasquan station of the Pennsylvania Railroad. There are two sidings there, and each battery was allotted one of them. The equipment was loaded before midnight, but there was delay in getting off. In the meantime Major Bryant had Troops A and C break camp, and the troopers, who were to use the same sidings to load their horses and equipments were compelled to wait in the open in the heavy mist, for several hours before they were able to load.

At 9.30, seven hours after the batteries broke camp, their trains were only partly loaded, and it was well after midnight before the job was completed, and the batteries were on their way. The troops in the meantime had had ethe best of the fact that they were without shelter, and patiently waited until the trains were took in on their sidings for them to load. This work took all night, and it was early this morning before they got under way.

Under Major Harold D. Corbusier, the field hospital corps broke camp at five o'clock and got to the station in good time. There everything was working smoothly until a couple of the mules got away and were lost in the fog. Privates chased them around for an hour or more, and it may be that some of them are still wandering around the country back of Sea Girt.

French Attacks Fail to Dislodge Them—Put Cannon on Aeroplanes.

Paris, June 27.—The repulse of a night attack made by the Germans with grenades west of the Meuse River and a slight advance east of the river on the Verdun front were reported in today's communique of the War Office. The Germans continue to maintain their foothold in the village of Fleury but their attempts to advance against the French trenches in front of Souville and Belleville were immediately halted by the concentrated fire of the French guns. Severe losses were inflicted. Heavy artillery firing by both sides is in progress all along the Verdun front.

FOOD IS NEEDED BY THE BELGIANS

Local Relief Society Holds Final Meeting and Transact Much Business.

WORK WILL CONTINUE

Treasurer Reports Total Subscriptions of $8,036.79 With a Balance of $481.27—Will Ship 4,000 Cans of Milk.

The final meeting of the Plainfield Belgian Relief Society for this season was held yesterday. The chairman, Mrs. Wallace, reported that it had been difficult to obtain from all the sources she had consulted any definite information concerning the greatest need of the Belgians at the present time, and that the executive committee had therefore decided to present all available facts to the society and to ask it what should be done with the money in the treasury. From all sources it had been ascertained that the need for both food and clothing was great, but the general opinion was that food would be more acceptable. As flour spoils if long delayed or if dampened in transport either condensed milk or dried peas had been recommended if sent from this side. It had also been argued that, owing to the present rate of exchange and the condition of the crops in Europe, it might be wise to send money so that food might be bought on the spot. After considering the facts and learning that the balance of $381.27 on hand at the meeting of May 31st had been increased by a gift of $100 to $481.27, it was resolved that 4,800 cans of condensed milk be shippyed as soon as possible and that from $125 to $150 be sent the Appul Belge to be used in buying food for the people in Belgium.

Mrs. Wallace was able to state that owing to a recent arrangement made by the French War Office, the cases of food and clothing that had been piling up at Bordeaux since the beginning of the battle of Verdun were now being shipped without delay as war materials. She announced also that through a friend on the Relief Committee, she had had unofficial news that the portable house had been received and erected at La Panne.

The report of the chairman showed that over 4,000 garments had been sent to the Belgians since last fall exclusive of the blankets and the towels that went with the portable house. During the summer the members of the association will continue their work, and will make garments for children, girls or women.

Most appreciative and interesting letters from Mme. de Rancougne were read telling of her brother's peril as hostage and of the recent efforts of the Appui Belge.

The members were gratified to learn that at the Allies' Bazaar Plainfield broke the record for one day's sale. They were also interested to hear that a movement is on foot to assure the families of the Plainfield State Militia of adequate support while the soldiers are away on duty either in camp or on the field. Many members of the society are already members of the National Aid.

Following is a summary of the treasurer's report for the year: Balance on hand, Nov. 9, 1915, $69.62; contributions from Nov. 9, 1915 to June 26, 1916, $5,265.11; interest on deposits, Nov. 9, 1915, to June 26, 1916, $20.11; total, $5,354.84.

At the request of the members present last year's report was also read showing that $2,774.49, including $2.81 interest had been collected between October, 1914, and November, 1915. Of this sum $2,704.87 was expended: $1,308.23 for 300 barrels of flour; $1,233.80 for 19,200 cans of milk; $150.28 for 121 pairs of shoes; $7.65 for material for baby clothes and $5 for express charges. The sum total subscribed to the society since its formation is $8,036.79, the interest being $22.92.

Among recent contributors are Mrs. E. V. Stevenson and Mrs. W. A. Conner.

JOHN F. KENNEDY.

John F. Kennedy, of Johnston Drive, North Plainfield, died last night, following a brief illness. Mr. Kennedy was in his seventy-seventh year and resided at the Johnston Drive home with his son, Henry Kennedy. The funeral will be held at the undertaking parlors at 402 Park avenue tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock and the service will be in charge of the Rev. Lewis Bond. The body will later be shipped to Hartford, Conn., where interment will take place.

Mrs. Harry Hann, of 319 West Front street, who stepped into a hole on Park avenue Saturday night, is under the care of Dr. Albert Pittis, having suffered a severe injury to her hip. Immediately following the accident Mrs. Hann was removed to her home in an automobile.

GOING ON NAVAL CRUISE.

Fred Smith and Ernest Hand, both of Netherwood avenue, have enlisted to go on the naval training cruise for civilians the latter part of August and fore part of September.

MRS. DUNN ILL.

Mrs. Eleanor Dunn is seriously ill at her home on Norwood avenue. Mrs. Dunn is secretary of the local branch of the S. P. C. A., and was at one time at the head of a private girls' school in New York.

PREPAREDNESS DANCE WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Nearly two hundred couples enjoyed the "Preparedness Dance" of the Second Night Club in the Columbus Auditorium last night. The hall was decorated with American flags and bunting while the stage had a typical camp setting. Van Epps Brothers banjo orchestra furnished music. At 10:30 the players struck up "The Star Spangled Banner" and at the same time the curtain of the stage was rolled up displaying the setting with two troopers' tents, American flags and guns.

An electric fan was hidden in back and the current from it made "Old Glory" wave in the breeze. At the sound of the well known tune all joined in the singing. Immediately following this feature the "Spirit of 1776" grand march was held.

Probably the most enthusiasm was shown when Joseph Sullivan read a letter from Trooper Jack Caulfield, of Troop D, to the club. Mr. Caulfield was one of its most active members and the announcement of a letter from the Plainfielder who is already on his way to Mexico brought forth much cheering. Joseph Greene was the chairman of the committee and Joseph R. Sullivan the secretary.

STABBING CASE IS TRIED IN COURT

George Delmont, charged with having stabbed Frank Nogalay in a fight following a game of cards Sunday night, was this morning held to await the action of the grand jury on a bond of $1,000. In the trial of the case before Judge De Meza it developed that men and women too were engaged in gambling. The man who was stabbed is a Polock, while all others in the game were Russians.

Nogalay was in court this morning, having come from the hospital. He went back there after the case was over, but when finally released will be held under $50 bond as a witness against Delmont. John Romon, who ran the boarding house where the fight occurred, was fined $20. His wife, who was one of those in the card game, was fined $50. John Dolowka was fined $10 and Peter Donbrosky, Frank Dell and Adam Sukeln were held on bonds of $50 each as material witnesses.

In assessing the fines against Romon and his wife Judge De Meza told them that any house in which gambling was permitted was a gambling house, and he would find the operators in every case that came before him.

PILLARS OF FIRE CASE GOES OVER TO JULY 6

The cases against Levina Leach and Mrs. Laura Wilson, members of the Pillars of Fire, who were arrested Saturday night on a charge of disorderly conduct for attempting to hold a street meeting without a license, were continued by Judge De Meza in police court this morning. The women were released on $200 bail each, which was signed by Attorney G. W. V. Moy, who will represent them. July 6 was agreed on as the date for a hearing after a conference between Mr. Moy and Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr.

TWO RECRUITS HELP FILL GAPS IN TROOP D RANKS

Rumors that Troop D will move for the Mexican border are groundless, according to word given out at the troop headquarters on Putnam avenue. The taking of ten men from the troop to put in Troop C, of Newark, will hold the local soldier boys up until the latter part of this week or the first of next. Two of the dozen troopers still needed were secured today when Milton Dilts, of Lenox avenue, and Golden Ronge, of West Third street, successfully passed the examinations and were headed for Sea Girt.

Lieutenant Daniel Runkle received word at the headquarters that the Troop D delegation of boys transferred to Troop C had been put in charge of John Sickler, of 111 New street, this city, he being raised to the rank of corporal. He served nine years in the regular army, belonging to the Second and Thirtieth Infantry and Third Cavalry. Donald Fullerton has gone to Sea Girt and been relieved at the local recruiting headquarters by Harvey Fisk.

GEORGE SERVIS PASSES AWAY AT THE HOSPITAL

George Servis, of 323 Watchung avenue, died this morning in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he had been a patient since last Friday. Death was due to Bright's disease. Mr. Servis was a carpenter by trade and was employed by the Plainfield Theatre for a long time after coming from Newark and Elizabeth, where he held similar positions with theatres. The only local organization to which the deceased belonged is the Plainfield Aerie, No. 886, Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Beside his wife, Mr. Servis leaves his mother, Mrs. Margaret Servis, of Somerville; two sons, George and John Servis, of Plainfield; two daughters, Margaret and Rose Servis, also of this city; two step-sons, Edward Burns, of Newark, and Thomas Burns, of the borough, and one step-daughter, Mrs. George Perry, of the borough. The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

ATTEND EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

W. F. Coe and C. F. Stout Delegates to Gathering of I. C. M. Ass'n.

W. F. Coe and C. F. Stout, circulation managers of the Daily Press and Courier-News, returned to their respective offices yesterday after spending a week at Grand Rapids, Mich., where they attended the International Circulation Managers' Association eighteenth annual convention. The association convened last Monday for a four day session, every hour of which was filled with interesting discussions and helpful hints to the hundreds of men who gathered from all over the country. Atlanta, Ga., was chosen as the 1917 meeting place.

At the banquet given by the association last Wednesday, in the Dantlind Hotel, the delegates from all parts of the country and the women guests heard the voices of other men of newspaperdom as they spoke their greetings over the lines of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. After listening to DeWolf Hopper recite his famous "Casey at the Bat" from Los Angeles, with all the pathos and heart he ever put into the poem and catching the poem and catching the sweet strains of "Little Grey Home in the West," played on a phonograph in San Francisco, the assemblarge settled back to hear Senator William Aiden Smith eulogize the master mind of science which made such an accomplishment possible. The arrangements for hearing and conversing with persons at all parts of the country were made by G. W. Peck, of the New York office of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

BOY LOSES MONEY TO PAY FOR DOG LICENSE

This is a peaceful revolution which the telephone is accomplishing, and all the forces of civilization are benefiting."

The Telephone Review (N. Y.), opening a most interesting account of the recent "mobilization" of communication forces in the United States, holds that "upon rapid and reliable communication in the mobilization of its defensive forces and in the exigencies of war, depends not only the safety of a nation but its civilization." And after reading the details of what the telephone system of the United States working in conjunction with the Navy, did for the three days of the demonstration, one is forced to admit confidence in this one bulwark for the safety and civilization of our country.

The wire and wireless means of communication created and operated by the Bell System places the Government of the United States in the foremost position among all the nations of the world not only in the rapidity and reliability of the service available, but in its extent.

The demonstration covered a period of forty hours, from 4 P. M. May 6 to 8 A. M. May 8. As outlined by Secretary Daniels, it consisted of bringing "the officers of the departments and the navy yards and stations within the limits of the United States proper into that close touch which the exigencies of war might demand" and "with a ship at sea."

During this period, all communications of the Navy Department were on a war basis. The conditions under which this mobilization was conducted were made to represent as nearly as possible those of war. All other means of communication were suspended, and all orders and instructions of all kinds were transmitted and reports received over the lines of the Bell System, either by telephone, telegraph, or printer telegraph.

First Wireless Telephone Conversations With a Battleship at Sea.

Promptly at 4 P. M. on May 6 Secretary Daniels lifted the receiver of the telephone on his desk and was connected by wire and wireless with Captain Lloyd H. Chandler, who was at his station on the bridge of the U. S. S. New Hampshire at Hampton Roads.

After some general conversation, Secretary Daniels said to Captain Chandler: "I will be in my office in the Navy Department at ten o'clock tomorrow morning. I will ring you up then and have another conversation. I can hear you as well as if you were in Washington, Captain Chandler. It will not be long before the Secretary of the Navy will be able to sit in his office and communicate with vessels of the navy all over the world by wireless telephone. That is something the captains may not like!"

Rear Admiral Benson, Chief of Naval Operations, then stepped to Secretary Daniels's telephone and said to Captain Chandler: "This is Admiral Benson. You will get under way at ten o'clock to-morrow morning. Stand out to sea; report your position every hour by wireless telephone, and you will return in time to anchor off the mouth of the Potomac not later than Monday. On Monday afternoon the same program will be repeated in an exchange of wireless telephone messages with you from the Naval Academy at Annapolis."

Then Rear Admiral Badger, former Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet, talked with Captain Chandler. "Hello!" said the Admiral. "That you, Chandler? Did you get your orders all right from Admiral Benson? I hope you will have a very pleasant trip outside the Capes. It is very wonderful to be able to talk with you this way. I hear your voice as plainly as if you were here."

For nearly half an hour Captain Chandler remained at the telephone on the bridge of his battleship at Hampton Roads, talking with officers of the army and navy.

The speed which would be so powerful in emergency, left nothing to be desired. It was a miracle from first to last. Forty-five seconds only were needed to get Pensacola, Florida, 32 seconds to get Great Lakes, Ill., north of Chicago, 27 seconds to get the New York navy yard in Brooklyn, and 28 seconds to get San Diego, Cal.

Even more striking was the incident related in a telegram from San Diego to the Department in Washington: "The rapidity with which orders can be transmitted by telephone was indicated today, when instructions were received at Point Loma, Cal., in this manner from the Navy Department in Washington, and then flashed by wireless to the cruiser Raleigh at Corinto Nicaragua, within four minutes after the message had been filed at the national capital."

While the New Hampshire was cruising fifty miles at sea conversations were carried on as if within the limits of a single city between Captain Chandler and his wife in their home in Washington and between Captain Chandler and Capt. Frank M. Bennett, Commadant at Mare Island Navy Yard, Cal., and with Lieut. Commander Sweet.

Less Than 1 Per Cent. of Bell System Called Upon.

Although the entire plant and personnel of the Bell System were available for the purposes of mobilization, less than 1 per cent. of each was called into service.

The following figures show the extent of the plant facilities available and those which were utilized.

Telephone Service by Wire.

A switchboard was installed in the Navy Annex at Washington, D. C., connected by direct circuits with the following stations: Portsmouth, N. H.; Boston, Mass.; Newport, R. I.; New London, Conn.; Brooklyn, N. Y.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Annapolis, Md.; Washington, D. C.; Norfolk, Va.; Charleston, S. C.; Pensacola, Fla.; New Orleans, La.; Great Lakes, Ill.; Mare Island, Cal.

Naval stations at San Diego, Cal., Yerba Buena, Cal., and Bremerton, Wash., were connected by direct circuits to the San Francisco toll board.

The system of communication—the one aspect of national defense in which the United States excels all other countries of the world—is the only one which, built upon the sound principles of American business, not dependent upon politics, has escaped the fell influence of the pork barrel.

BY-PRODUCT OF THE JOB.

The Telephone Review (N. Y.) is a house organ which among other things that it does, inspires its readers—the employees of the telephone company—to high achievement by recounting the incidents of unusually excellent or original work among the various workers. The magazine is consequently quite rich in anecdotes of the telephone industry, some of which are of notable interest to outsiders. Take for example the following story and after reading it, you will welcome the advent of the pole climber, whenever you see him in your neighborhood.

Lineman Harry Boutillette was working on a pole in the rear of a large residence in Newark when he saw a suspicious looking stranger enter the house. Boutillette called to a young man nearby and asked if any-

Buying for the home cannot be done wisely and economically unless the "buyer" is a student of the advertisements—no more than a store may be made prosperous without advertising.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

REAL PREPAREDNESS FOR AMERICA.

Preparedness to the American mind has come to mean, in the nighest understanding of the word, the building of a bigger army and navy as an insurance against war. To many the word is a synonym for threatened militarism, but a crowd of some two hundred men and women heard it explained in a broader sense last night when they gathered at the Trinity Reformed church to hear the address of the Rev. Charles A. Eaton. Dr. Eaton believes in military preparedness for the purpose of resisting attack and placing the United States on a footing where its policies and its people will be respected by the other nations of the world, but he is preaching and pleading for a preparedness that is spiritual.

The world died on August 1, 1914, he asserts, and out of the ashes of the world that was but now is as dead as Pompeii there is to arise a new civilization, a new people with new ideas of government and of national and individual relations. They are to accept, they must build on if they build for all time, the principles which are the foundation of America, and the duty of Americans is to prepare to remodel the world.

It is not a dream. As Dr. Eaton pointed out nothing is ever settled until it is settled right and there will be no peace in Europe until the neighboring nations have adopted a universal civilization, a single standard of morality. England, in theory a monarchy, but really ruled by the individual mind, can never accept German imperialism, and Germany's centralized efficiency could not be swallowed by the English democracy. The men that are left when this struggle for supremacy of arms has ended will be a sober people who will decide for themselves their relation to the governments under which they live, and they must seek to set up a civilization founded on the Christian brotherhood of man. For example they will turn to America.

Were they not so blinded by blood, so busily engaged in tearing the throats of their brother called enemy only because he is on the opposite side of a thin barbed-wire fence, they might look now. They would see a nation barely awakened from a half-century of sleep. Dr. Eaton believes that the bothersome little Southern neighbor will prove a blessing in disguise in arousing America. He thinks the American army will intervene in Mexico, raise 15,000,000 citizens out of the depth of illiterate despondency, open to them the vast riches of their own mountains and their own lands, and leave them free and capable of self-government. It will be "the most glorious thing ever done by a nation in the history of man," he says, and in the saving of Mexico America will find a new patriotism, a new strength and a reconsecration to the principles to which our forefathers dedicated the land in their blood.

SPECIAL SESSION OF SENATE.

Special sessions of the lawmakers at Trenton are becoming ordinary occurrences in recent years—so ordinary that they do not attract unusual attention, says the Newark News. No excitement will attend the special gathering of the Senate today, for all the work it will be called upon to do will be to confirm the nominations by the governor of members of the commission for the bettering of the condition of mental defectives. A similar session to act upon the nomination of members of the first State Board of Assessors was held in 1884, and it lasted only two hours. A special session to confirm nominations in 1908 lasted only a few hours, and another one in 1913 completed its work in forty-five minutes.

There were two extra sessions of the Legislature in 1913, one in 1914 and one last year, while there were only eight in the fifty-two years between 1861 and 1913. The special session in 1861 was for the purpose of raising troops for the Civil War, while five of the others were called to correct errors in legislation. Perhaps the one next week may be placed in the error-correction class, but it will have no political significance, for the cost will be immaterial and the welfare of the State will not be affected.

Roosevelt's indorsement of Hughes does not necessarily carry with it the indorsement of the Progressive party and something more than this will be necessary to line up anything like a respectable majority of the millions who bolted the Republican party after the 1912 convention. Mr. Rosevelt is eliminated from the situation by his refusal to accept the Progressive nomination, unless he later decides to take the stump for Hughes and there was nothing in his letter made public yesterday which would indicate this. The elimination of the Moose leader, however, does not mean that all the sores are healed or that the principles for which its millions fought are dead.

Twelve Plainfield troopers are off for the front. Answering the call of Funston for men they filled gaps in Troops A and C, and left with the first detachment of Eastern militia. They know, perhaps better than any one else, that they are not trained for the warfare that will be encountered on the border, but imbued with the same spirit of heroism and devotion to flag that led the raw volunteers out to face England's trained mercenaries in the days of the Revolution they offer all that they have to their government. They are the Minute Men of today, and their sacrifice is all the more heroic because of their unpreparedness.

SPECIAL PRAYERS FOR NATION'S SAFETY AND HONOR

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church, has arranged for a service to be held at Grace church tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, the subject object of the service being to offer prayer and intercession to Almighty God for the safety, honor and welfare of the nation and for the well being of our soldiers and sailors in the face of the present international crisis. The Episcopal clergymen of the city and borough have been invited to be present.

Rev. Mr. Stevenson left by automobile yesterday for the State mobilization camp at Sea Girt, where he made a personal visit to the Plainfield cavalry men of Troop D.

Sour Grapes.

I love to sit upon my cottage porch
And watch the rich ride by in fine machines.
I love to see the handsome touring cars,
The cute coupes and ponderous limousines.
I love the odor they all leave for me
To breathe long after they have hurried by;
I love to sit until I suffocate
In clouds of dirt and dust they have made fly.
I love to sit and listen to the honks
And shrieks and squawks and squeals they hurl at me.
They make night hideous and I
Forget my other troubles all, you see.
So let them honk and snort and hit the breeze,
And burst their tires and suffer other ills;
Let them enjoy what peace of mind they may,
I am content, I do not get the bills.

"THE SPIDER AND THE FLY"
WILLIAM FOX PRODUCTION

AT PROCTOR'S TOMORROW.

"Mr. Goode, the Samaritan," in the Triangle photoplay feature of that name, which is being presented at Proctor's today with DeWolf Hopper in the leading role, is a benevolent old gentleman who becomes enmeshed in the toils of the law when he buys a stolen automobile from Foxy Monte, a crook. While poor Mr. Goode languishes in jail, his family, believing him to be absent on a business trip, Foxy Monte makes himself most agreeable to Mrs. Goode and her charming daughter, Evelina, who promises to become his wife. Goode, not pleased with the state of the jail, and being in great sympathy with the disreputable inmates, has the place refurnished, and at the expiration of his sentence invites Shifty Ed, one of the incarcerated crooks, to come and visit him. Ed comes to make his call in company with his "goil," Shorty Sal, at the time when the Goodes are entertaining a fashionable house party, with Foxy Monte, under an alias, as one of the guests. Sal recognizes Monte; and he, realizing he is in danger of exposure, denounces Ed and Sal as notorious thieves, himself robbing the guests of their jewelry to fasten suspicion upon them. While attention is directed to the two unfortunates, he persuades Evelina, whose hand has been denied him by Mr. Goode, to elope with him. How Shifty Ed and Shorty Sal turn the tables upon Monte in gratitude to Mr. Goode, leads the film to an exciting finish. Other attractions today include a novel Keystone comedy, abounding in laugh provoking situations entitled "Bubbles of Trouble," and also the showing of the third episode of "The Secret of the Submarine."

Tomorrow Robert Mantell, assisted by an excellent Fox cast, including Genevieve Hamper, Stuart Holmes, Claire Whitney and Walter Miller, is starred in a powerful dramatic production entitled "The Spider and the Fly," in which the acting of Mr. Mantell is the predominating feature, followed closely by a remarkable story cleverly produced "The Iron Claw," now rapidly drawing to a close, will be shown in its 15th chapter tomorrow, and there will be several comedy films to provide variety. "Where Are My Children," the production that has startled the whole western world will be shown on July 3, 4 and 5.

LOOK OUT, BOYS!

--Astor Theatre--

The big attraction at the Astor Theatre today will be the five-part Mutual master-picture, "The Dead Alive," written by Henry J. Vernot, featuring the celebrated star, Marguerite Clark. "The Dead Alive" is the story of twin sisters, Mary and Jessie, whose father is employed in a gambling house. Jessie, who works in a department store, is admired by Stuyvesant, a young millionaire. When she learns that her father is a gambler and that he has just been arrested for murder, she declines Stuyvesant's offer of marriage, but finally consents. Her father is sent to the penitentiary for ten years, and Ardini, the proprietor of the gambling house, is sentenced to three months. The finale of this story is thrilling from start to finish with not a dull moment. Sydney Mason is seen to good effect as Stuyvesant, the millionaire, and is well known as one of Broadway's favorite actors. Tomorrow is the gala day, as we offer two big features for your amusement, viz: "Naked Hearts," a Bluebird production, and the big series picture, "Who's Guilty?" which is meeting with all around approval, with the ever popular stars, Tom Moore and Anna Nilsson, in the leading roles. Also the new series of animal comedy, Jungle Film No. 2, which will be an added attraction every Wednesday for the benefit of the children. There is no doubt that all who witness "Naked Hearts" will be more than satisfied, as it gives Francellia Billington, the famous character star, an opportunity to exert his rare dramatic talent. There is a problem in "Naked Hearts," and a satisfactory solution of it is arrived at in this production. Owing to the inconvenience of many of our patrons, our matinees will begin at 2 p. m. instead of 3, and the price of admission will be afternoon and night 10 cents, excepting Thursday when prices will be matinee 5 and 10 cents, evening 10 and 15 cents, until further notice. A cool, comfortable house, no damp air, everything dry and fresh, and photoplays that are seen here first.

NATIONAL SPECIAL AID IS PLANNING TO HELP

That the women of Plainfield will be prepared to do their part in case of trouble with Mexico is evidenced by the preparations that the local branch of the National Special Aid Society is making. Every member of the society has been asked to sign a service blank to be sent to the national headquarters in New York on which they tell just what they will do in the event of need, it being for Plainfield work only. With nine different branches of service divided into fifty sub heads, the various occupations the women have to choose from are agriculture, clerical, manufacturing and mechanical, personal and domestic, professional, public, transportation, trades and contributions, the last meaning in the way of first aid hospitals, autos and the like.

The local branch of the society has been organized for sometime and at present includes in its membership about one hundred and seventy-five Plainfield women in all walks of life. Mrs. F. W. Goddard, of Woodland avenue, is president of the local branch and other prominent residents are workers.

ODD BITS.

Gardenville, Ind., boasts a monument to Adam. Eve has been ungallantly left out. The monument is a square of concrete with a sun dial on top and the inscription: "To the Memory of Adam, the First Man."

Mr. and Mrs. George Cooper, of Mitchell, Ind., are the parents of 13 children born during nine years of wedlock.

The Chinese are not isolated in their inability to pronounce the letter R. In nearly every case it is the last letter that an English-born child learns to pronounce.

WANT WOMEN PREACHERS.

Many of the English Ministers Have Gone to the Front.

Englishwomen curates are suggested because so many clergymen have gone to the trenches and because theological students who have not already enlisted will be absorbed under the compulsion act unless they are physically unfit.

For ten years before the war there was a steady decrease in the applications for ordination, owing in some measure to the modern recognition of the fact that a young man of what is known as "good family" may engage in commerce without any social disadvantages.

Genteel starvation is no longer preferable to getting a good living outside "the professions," and the candidates for the church have gradually been narrowing down to those who feel an earnest call to preach or to undertake the more exacting forms of Christian work. The war apparently has but hastened the process.

FATHER'S PERIL.

What Would You Have Done Had You Been In His Place?

Just three or four time yellowed pages in an old colonial diary. How the manuscript came into my possession is immaterial. But here are two paragraphs:

"February ye tenth, 1628. This day a most terrible thing happened to father. It hath been a long, cold winter, and ye members of our little colony have suffered grievously, supplies being scant. Our larder being well nigh bare, my goodly father started forth in search of game. Of late it hath grown exceeding difficult to obtain powder and lead. Father had but one charge left for his trusty blunderbuss; but, being a famous shot, he had no doubt that this would prove sufficient to bring down some wild creature that the household might be supplied with meat.

"He had wandered some way from ye settlement when he sighted a wild turkey perched on a limb. Drawing near, he took aim. At this moment a skulking savage leaped from behind a tree near by. An arrow hurtled past dear father's head, barely missing him. Quickly he turned his blunderbuss upon ye savage and prepared to fire.

"But ye thought came to him that his wife and children were in dire straits for food. Having but the one shot, what should he do? To slay ye savage would mean that ye turkey would escape. To shoot ye turkey would place father at ye mercy of ye cruel redskin. Momentarily he hesitated; but, suddenly determining upon a bold course, he took steady aim, fired and slew ye"—

Here the manuscript breaks off. I'm sorry that I ever ran across the confounded thing.—Walter G. Doty in Cincinnati Enquirer.

Oddities of Taxation.

In England there have been many amusing taxes and more amusing evasions. At one time the horse was singled out as a peculiar victim, and the farmer evaded the obligation by riding his cow to market or by harnessing his wife to the cart alongside of a big dog to drag the produce to town. The tax on chimneys resulted in the destruction of many fine old fireplaces, and the tax on windows had the effect of making the houses look as if they had been boarded up and deserted. It also impaired the eyesight of hundreds of Englishmen.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Harriett L. Victory and Henry H. Victory; Lloyd L. Osborn and Abigail A. Osborn:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof in a cause wherein The Morris County Savings Bank is complainant and you are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the thirty-first day of July next or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by THE W. C. T. U.

Crime and drink go hand in hand, and in producing the greater part of the crime of the country drink inflicts upon the nation terrible losses, and upon the taxpayer burdens heavy and grievous. The actual cost of dealing with criminals manufactured by the saloon is very large. First, the cost of maintaining the criminals is in itself a large item. Next comes the expense of a large police force, existing largely to deal with the saloon-made criminals. In addition to this, there are the salaries of judges, law officers and others, and the extra cost of building and supporting law courts and prison buildings. In the report made by the commision to investigate drunkenness in Massachusetts in 1914, chairman, Judge Murray, the following statement is made as to the cost of drunkenness: "It is impossible to estimate in dollars the yearly cost of drunkenness to the commonwealth. The expenditure for penal treatment is but a small fraction of the total cost, yet the expense arising from 63.4 per cent. of all arrests, and 67.6 per cent of all commitments to prison made during the year, together with a considerable percentage of the cost of probation, trial and transportation of prisoners is due to public drunkenness. Moreover, the intemperate use of alcohol is directly responsible for many other criminal offenses which are brought into the courts.

"Massachusetts prison statistics show that 96 per cent. of all criminals in our prisons in 1912 were intemperate by habit." Facts like these, which are properly authenticated and cannot be gainsaid, prove conclusively the destructive character of the liquor traffic, and should appeal to every decent citizen to enlist in the warfare against it. Lessened crime, decreased taxation, national prosperity and good citizenship would naturally follow the extinction of the relic of barbarism known as the liquor traffic.

Not only would the taxpayer be largely benefitted by the lessened cost of the administration of criminal law, but national efficiency would be greatly increased. The idleness of capable men causes a great economic loss to the State. That efficiency in production is reduced by alcoholism is admitted by all. Last year, in Massachusetts alone, over 300,000 working days were lost by men in the prime of life, through imprisonment for drunkenness. More time was undoubtedly consumed by them in looking for work after their release. This loss of productive power throughout the country, not only lowered the standard of efficiency, but detracted also from the general prosperity of the nation. So closely related are the various legitimate industries of the country, that a benefit to one reaches upon all.

These, all affected disastrously by the waste and destruction caused by the liquor traffic, would profit greatly by enforced prohibition. Suppose, for instance, that we could close up the thousand dram shops of Boston some Saturday afternoon, put prohibiton into operation, allow no liquor to come into the city, have a policeman to watch the saloons to see that no one got in, and a man to watch the policeman to see that he did not get in.

Results: No sale of liquor, men sober and efficient. The new Saturday afternoon—pay day—instead of spending their money in saloons they go to the market and purchase the food necessary for a good Sunday dinner. A boom for the grocer, the butcher, and the baker. Next week shoes are purchased for the children a good thing for the shoe shop. Then follows a dress for the wife, with better furniture for the home, rugs and carpets for the floors, and pictures for the walls.

Later a magazine or two finds its way into the changed home, and it becomes a place of joy and plenty instead of one cursed by drink. With the demand for better food and clothing, furniture and carpets, every legitimate business is boomed; the farm, the mill, the factory share in the incerased prosperity. Extend the area, give us national prohibition, stop the waste caused by the liquor traffic, and the money now spent for drink, flowing naturally into the proper channels of trade, would create a demand for the products of labor, speed the wheels of our producing machinery, and inaugurate an era of prosperity such as we have not before witnessed even in the most palmy days.

Let us apply common sense methods to the removal of this plague. Instead of fostering a traffic which makes milionaires at one end and paupers at the other, building up the great brewers and distillers, and making tramps and outcasts of the customers, let us at once sever our partnership with the devastating foe of home and country. It is much better for all that there shall be regeral prosperity and comfort in the homes of our people, than that a few shall revel in riches and luxury, at the expense of the happiness and prosperity of the many. National prohibition would give us a higher standard of morals, a better administration of law, safer government in our large cities, increased prosperity in the nation, happier homes and brighter lives. By removing the one great enemy of all reforms, it would open the highway to progress, and promote the general welfare of the race. It would thus hasten the coming of the glorious day when man will acknowledge the great truth, "The injury of one should be the concern of all."

BOY SCOUTS TO HAVE WIRELESS EQUIPMENT

Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., is Now Working Out Details for a Station.

Arrangements will be made upon the completion of the plans for the Boy Scout Camp in Terrill road next week, for the establishment of a wireless equipment that will be attuned to some receiving station in this city so that at a given time in the evening scouts may be placed in touch with their homes by telegraph, through the receiving station here and thence by 'phone to his own home. This matter is now being worked out by Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., for Troop 12.

Applications have been received from Commissioner Houseman, of Newark, for admittance for some of his scouts into the Plainfield camp should there be room for them. Applications should be made at once to Commissioner Searing for reservations from July 1.

Additional contributions to the scout camp fund were made on Saturday by Robert F. R. Huntsman, $10, and Champlain L. Riley, $5, making the total now in hand toward the $700 needed $284.41. There are about eighteen members of the scout council yet to be heard from and it is desired that the full amount be made available for use by Thursday.

No End of Wonderful Stories He Told Her.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Poor Young Man Tells Good Stories.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

RIGHT after supper the children clapped for a story. So daddy told them: "A young man who had spent all his money once got into a flying trunk and flew right into a Turkish princess' room. She lay on her sofa fast asleep and was so beautiful that the young man had to kiss her. This woke her, and at first she was terribly frightened. But the young man told her he was the prophet of all the Turks and had flown down through the air to visit her. This pleased her very much, so that she stopped crying and sat down.

"Then the young man began to tell her stories about her eyes. He said they were like the most beautiful deep, dark lakes, in which her thoughts floated like mermaids. He told her that her forehead was like a snow mountain, pure and beautiful. And he told her about remarkable storks that bring lovely little children up out of the river. No end of wonderful stories he told her, and then he asked her to marry him, and at once she said 'Yes.'

"'But you must come here on Saturday,' said the princess, 'when the king and queen drink tea with me. They will be very proud to hear I am going to marry a prophet. But, mind you, have splendid stories to tell them, for my parents are very fond of stories. My mother likes them to be grand and very proper, and my father likes them to be merry, so that he may laugh at them.'

"'A story will be my only wedding gift,' said the young man. The princess gave him a wonderful sword, all covered with gold. It was the kind of a gift he much needed.

"So he flew away and sold the sword and bought himself a new dressing gown and slippers. Then he sat down in the woods beside his trunk to make up a new story, just as your daddy has to every night of his life. His story had to win a king and queen and had to be made by Saturday, and it is not always so easy to make up a good story.

"However, he had it in time, and Saturday came at last. The king, the queen and the whole court were waiting for him around the princess' tea table. They gave him a charming reception.

"'Now, will you please tell us a story,' said the queen, 'one that is both thoughtful and instructive?'

"'One that we can laugh at, too!' cried the king. So the young man began his story, which I will tell you some other night," daddy finished.

"Oh, please, now, daddy!" cried Evelyn.

Then she got kissed twice.

Marrying a Butterfly

Everything That Requires a Little Effort Seems Old-Fashioned to Ethel.

"Oh, Ethel, I wish you would darn some of these socks. I cannot find a pair to put on." Ralph's tone was discontented in the extreme.

"Why don't you buy some. Those are all worn out?" Ethel was running her hand in sock after sock and trying to find one that had no hole in it. "There is not one here fit to put on."

"That is just what I got through saying," snapped Ralph. "I do not believe there is another married man in Fairport who has no one to see after his mending."

"It is such tiresome, senseless work to mend. I never could bring myself to do it. I can't wear mended stockings and I don't see how you can stand walking around on hard places in your mended socks." Ethel dumped the whole lap full of hose into a basket and rose listlessly.

"Hard places! There is no need of having hard places in mended stockings. The socks my mother mended were perfectly comfortable to wear."

"Really, Ralph, if you knew how tired I get hearing you sound your mother's praises you would choose some other subject of conversation."

"Well, a fellow would have to stay awake nights to think of useful deeds of yours to mention." Ralph was certainly out of temper. He had not been able to find a clean towel in the drawer, and the buttons on his shirts were hanging by a thread. He thought of the perfect order in which his wardrobe had been kept while he was at home.

"It certainly is not hard work to sew on buttons and keep the clothing mended up and as you have nothing else to do I suggest that you try and keep something in my drawer to put on."

"Oh, Ralph, I hate to mend. Do get some of those guaranteed socks that do not need mending. It is old-fashioned to fool away time darning these days," was the placid answer.

"Oh, I suppose so. Everything economical is sure to be old-fashioned. Clothing is never cared for nor mended. It must be thrown away and new things bought. That is the style now."

"Your disposition is getting very sweet. You go around with a scowl on your face as black as night. Life is certainly enlivening with you." She looked disdainfully at him.

"This home of ours does leave something to be desired, I will admit, but when it comes to giving pleasure just what do you consider that you contribute to the comfort of the place?"

"I certainly never find fault with you constantly, and when let alone I am good-natured. I was always complimented on my good disposition. You used to do it yourself." Ethel was using her injured tone.

"It is easy enough to be pleasant when everything goes your way, and you are not called on to make any sacrifices for anyone's comfort. You always seem to think it is sufficient excuse for your not doing anything that you do not like it."

"Well, what then?" asked the girl acidly.

"No one can get through life in that way. Someone has got to do the disagreeable tasks and why shove everything off on other shoulders?"

"Meaning yours, I suppose," interrupted Ethel.

"I do not like the theory that marriage purchases immunity from all care and danger for the woman, while she in her turn contributes nothing. She merely consents to be cared for and graciously receives all that her husband bestows upon her as her right."

"Ralph, you are getting to be insufferably disagreeable," snapped Ethel, rising and leaving the room.

MULLIN SHOULD MAKE GOOD BASEBALL ARTIST.

In the ranks of the Farmer A. C. is one Frank Mullin, a brother of Tommy Mullin, Amboy star. Frank is enjoying his first year in fast company, having just graduated from the sand lots. In Saturday's game between the Farmers and the Hopes, Frank did very little with the stick but covered third in a manner that admitted of no complaint. It is the opinion of the many fans who saw the North avenue lad perform that he has in him the makings of a star ballplayer. Here's to his present and future success.

PARKER FIELD BASEBALL SEASON OPEN SOON.

Supervisor George W. Wriston, who will have charge of Parker Field this summer, has announced that that popular playground will open on July 5. This announcement will gladden the hearts of the many youngsters who have been already released from school duties. The Parker Field baseball league will cater to the younger as well as the older boys and should prove just as popular this year as it has in the past. Under the capable guidance of Supervisor Wriston, the boys should spend not only an enjoyable but a profitable two months and a half. Baseball is not the only sport that will be indulged in, however, as Supervisor Wriston has extensive plans laid out whereby every form of track athletics will be taken care of.

POLING CLAIMS JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP.

Cyril Poling, manager of the Plainfield Athletic Nine, a combination with which Joseph Newell performs, has filed his claim to the junior baseball championship of this city. To back up his claim, Manager Poling has a string of victories gained by his charges. The boys think they have met and defeated all the junior teams in this city. But there is one club the Pans have not met. That team is the Plainfield A. C. Should this last mentioned team assert its right to the junior title, it is the purpose of Manager Poling to deny that the "Plainfield A. C. is a junior team." And we believe that trouble will be started. Now, just what constitutes a junior team?

SHOWING OF TRAVERS AND MARSTON.

On the links of the Plainfield Country Club Saturday Jerome D. Travers and Max R. Marston played. Paired against Travers and Marston were Oswald Kirkby and Reginald Lewis. While Marston did well he did not play at his best and the burden of the work was carried by Travers. However, on Sunday the tables were turned. It was said by those who followed the play on the Baltusrol links on that day that Travers was decidedly off form and that Marston was as good as ever. It is seldom that such a sudden reversal of conditions occurs.

MATTY COUGHLAN RESIGNS AS MANAGER.

Matty Coughlan will no longer handle the reins of the Netherwood baseball team. With the home-coming of Johnny Coughlan comes a change in the affairs of the East End organization. Matty has done well as a manager and had booked some excellent Sunday games. He will not desert the team entirely, as he has consented to be just a "private in the ranks." Brother John is a past master at the game of management, having successfully led the Netherwood team last year. Success to both Matty and John.

CITY LEAGUE UMPIRES ARE A CAPABLE LOT.

The umpires who have been secured to hand down decisions in the City League this season are good fellows. There are few "kicks" rendered on their decisions simply because each man is alert and honest. Of course, once in a while an "Ump" misses one but, on the whole, the work of the three league umpires deserves commendation.

ROYAL GIANTS DID NOT REVIVE AS WAS PREDICTED.

About three weeks ago William Kline announced that he would run a baseball team this season. The team that "Midge" intended to put on the field was to have been a rejuvenation of the now extinct Royal Giants. Unfortunately, Kline's aspirations never materialized and the city is still without a premier colored baseball band.

BITS OF BASEBALL.

"Red" Grimes is doing very well in the Steel League. Red, although handicapped by a crippled arm, is one of the fastest outfielders around these parts. And he is immensely popular with the fans, no matter where he goes.

Sidney Butler figures that he will be the boy to share honors with Joe Newell and Wendell Hutchcroft next season.

ATLANTIC LEAGUE THROUGH AFTER OWNERS' MEETING

At a meeting of the Atlantic League at the Great Western Hotel in New York City last night, the circuit blew up. Ernest Landgraf put the skids under the league when he announced the withdrawal of the Paterson club. Wilmington and Pottsville dropped out last week and Easton threw up the sponge some time before that.

The league was a losing venture from the start and local players who pastimed in it were always wondering from what source their next pay would come. Tommy Mullin and "Red" Grimes were members of the Easton club and, as far as is known, always received their salaries. In this respect they were fortunate, inasmuch as many of the players did not get even a portion of what was due them. The Paterson club paid all salaries, the fact that such was the case costing Owner Landgraf $2,000.

Rainy weather on Saturdays and Sundays made the season disastrous. The final standing follows

	W.	L.	P C
Paterson	20	12	.606
Reading	15	15	.500
Allentown	16	17	.485
Easton	12	20	.375

Magic of a Century.

An examination of American cities a century ago presents many curiosities. In 1800 not New York, but Philadelphia, was our largest city—a pre-eminence it held until 1830. After Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore and Boston, Charleston, S. C., was the largest American city. But I defy any one to give the name of the sixth largest American town in 1800. It was Northern Liberties. How many Americans today ever heard of this metropolis? An antiquarian research discloses that it is now part of Philadelphia. After Northern Liberties, our biggest city was Southwark, Pa.; then came Salem, Mass. Such were the places a hundred years ago which entered in the competition for primacy.—World's Work.

JACK MARTIN BENCHED BY MILWAUKEE MANAGER FOR NO APPARENT REASON

Local Boy Said to Be Disgruntled Over Poor Showing of His Mates—Stutz, Martin's Successor, is Batting Only .155—Rumor Current That St. Louis Nationals Are After Martin—St. Paul Comment.

Jack Martin has been benched by Harry Clark, manager of the Milwaukee, American Association baseball team for no apparent reason. The local lad has been fielding remarkably well and has been hitting much better and more timely than the man who landed his job. Jack received first notice of his removal from the lineup last week and since that time has been compelled to watch a younger named Stutz bounce around short in clever style. However, Stutz has been tried before and has been hitting only .155, having played in 25 games. Jack is hitting .210 and has played in 54 games. The local lad's average is better than that of Manager Clark, who is clouting the pill for .159. In fact, the only three Milwaukee men who have been hitting better than Martin are Devore, Thorpe and Benson. And Devore has been released. Josh outhit every other Brewer and still he was let out.

The real reason for Jack Martin's relapse to the bench, however, is found in the fact that the local lad is not among friends. The Brewers have been playing such ragged ball that they are the joke of Organized Baseball and the St. Paul Pioneer Press says that "Martin being a real ballplayer is naturally disgusted with his berth and doesn't care much whether school keeps or not. He's not in a congenial environment and the showing of the Brewers naturally makes him tired." This same newspaper seeks to inform President Timme that he had better give up the notion that he can land his team any higher than last place. Milwaukee is lucky that it doesn't "fall out of the league."

When informed of the fact that Jack had been benched, one local authority ventured the remark that the St. Louis Nationals were after the local boy. Just why St. Louis and not Philadelphia should seek the Plainfielder is not known. But it is known that neither the present St. Louis or the present Phillie shortstop has anything on Jack when it comes down to figures. Ray Corhan, of St. Louis, is batting .199, while Davy Bancroft is hitting only .165. There may be something in the rumor, at that.

DOUBLE HEADER GOES TO FAST HEBREW A. C.

St. Mary's and Shamrocks Are Defeated in Interesting Double Battle.

If the box scores that follow are authentic, J. Friedman and Benny Rosenthal, both hurlers for the Hebrew A. C., deserve commendation, for the former defeated St. Mary's A. C., allowing them only one hit, while the latter held the Shamrocks to three hits and beat them 7 to 5. The score of the first fracas was 17 to 1.

The games were marked by light hitting—unusually light hitting—and it hardly seems possible that seventeen runs could have been manufactured from seven hits. Those five errors made by the Saints must have played an unusually important part in the scoring.

The score: first game—

SIX LOCAL ENTRANTS IN SLEEPY HOLLOW PLAY

J. P. Stevens and Son, of This City, Return Creditable Score.

That the golf germ is rampant in many families in the metropolitan district was very clearly shown by the size of the field that played yesterday in the annual father and son tournament over the links of the Sleepy Hollow Country Club. Exactly 128 pairs started out, and as this is only the first anniversary of the tourney, the officials are already beginning to wonder what they are to do with it next year. The probability is that two days will be given up for the next one.

For the number of prominent men who participated the tournament very much resembled the senior event at Apawamis with the addition of the offspring. In some cases the fathers were men who had taken part with distinction in tournaments for years, while in other cases young men and youths who have found fame with the club and the cleek had induced their fathers to join them in the fun.

Plainfield was well represented in the tourney, the following scores having been made by local entries:

J. P. Stevens and J. P. Stevens, Jr., 106—19—87; G. A. Bomann and G. A. Bomann, Jr., 109—20—89; J. H. Erickson and J. H. Erickson, Jr., 112—16—96.

ANDREW M'DONOUGH TO CAPTAIN ST. JOSEPH TEAM

The St. Josephs have organized a basebal team and Andy McDonough, who did the backstop work for the North Plainfield High School during the season just passed and who will captain the Canadians next year, will be captain of the team. The club has not yet secured any games and would like to hear from the managers of capable teams in this vicinity. No game has been arranged for this Saturday and Francis McDonough, acting manager, would like to hear from other managers in this city. McDonough's address is 26 Fairview avenue, North Plainfield.

CITY LEAGUE SCHEDULE RE-ARRANGED AT MEET

"Henny" Winters Appointed Umpire and May Work on July 4.

At the City League meeting last night, a re-arrangement of a portion of the schedule was made. This affects the games of July 1 and 4, and gives each team a full share of difficult encounters. A motion was made that every man run for himself, but this motion failed to receive enough votes to carry it through. The Netherwood club announced the release of Wall, the Bound Brook Bee, who has signed up with the Tabs. M. Terry was also released by Netherwood and John Coughlin was signed up.

The corrected schedule follows:

T. A. B. S. at Farmers (Soccer Field).

Hope at Baptist (West End Field).

Netherwood at Dunellen (Dunellen), July 4, (a. m.)

Baptists at Netherwood (South avenue).

Farmers at T. A. B. S. (West End avenue).

Hopes at Dunellen (Dunellen), July 4 (p. m.)

T. A. B. S. at Farmers (Soccer Field).

Netherwood at Baptist (West End avenue).

Hope at Dunellen (Dunellen).

"Henny" Winter was made an umpire last evening. He will probably be used in one of the games on July 4.

ABSTAINER RALLY ENDED WHEN TEELING FANNED

Owing to the fact that the details of the Tab-Dunellen match arrived too late for publication yesterday, an account of the facts will not be out of place.

The game was an unusually exciting conflict, due to the fact that the Abstainers made a great effort to score in the final frame. In this inning Wall, the Bound Brook player, who had gained a life on Harry Moulton's error, was advanced to second, when Frank "Kid" Brennan, who acted as pinch-hitter for Frankie Lee, singled. Wall advanced another peg when Lou Brown dropped Warry McLaughlin's throw to catch the Bound Brooker napping. Wall was very determined about scoring and a short passed ball gave him an opportunity to take a chance. In attempting to catch the fleet Wall, Eddie Bergen, the Dunellen catcher, slipped and fell in the mud, Wall registering. With Tony Denitzio, who ran for Brennan, on third and one run needed to tie the score, Teeling whiffed the ozone. The rally died and the Dunellen club obtained a well-earned victory.

The contest was a pitcher's battle between McLaughlin and Jack Denny, the former allowing two less hits than his younger and less experienced rival. Mac struck out ten men against Denny's four.

A Ruin on the Rhine.

Said to be the first place in Germany where cannon were mounted, the tower of Ehrenfels, built in 1210 by Philip von Bolander, governor of Rheingau, has been a dismantled ruin since 1089. It is one of the romantic features of the Rhine near Bingen, with Bishop Hatto's "mouse tower" opposite

PERSHING'S MEN IN NEW FIGHT WITH MEXICANS; HAVE OVER 40 PRISONERS; LOSSES UNKNOWN

REFUGEE FROM COLONIA DUBLAN TELLS STORY OF BATTLE BETWEEN DETACHMENT OF 11TH CAVALRY AND THE ENEMY.

1,000 MEN WERE IN FORCE THAT WAS ENGAGED

Gen. Bell Believes Reports and Has Asked for More Details—Mexicans Attempted to Ambush Americans Under Major Jenkins, But Troopers Won Hot Fight Against Heavy Odds—34 Wounded Among the Prisoners.

El Paso, Texas, June 28.—A refugee from the vicinity of headquarters of the United States punitve expedition near Colonia Dublan, Mexico, states that there has been another battle between General Prshing's men and the troops of General Carranza. The report says that 34 wounded Mexican soldiers have been received at the U. S. Army field hospital at Colonia Dublan. General George Bell, Jr., commanding at El Paso, received the information from an American ranchman, a Mormon, living near Colonia Dublan. General Bell regards the man as reliable. The ranchman says that he saw the wounded prisoners brought to Colonia Dublan. The forces engaged in the fight, he reports, were two squadrons of the 11th U. S. Cavalry which were sent to the relief of the survivors of the battle at Carrizal and a body of about 1,000 Mexican troops. The battle he says ,occurred on the Santa Maria river between Colonia Dublan and Carrizal and about 18 miles east o fthe American camp. The Americans were under command of Major John M. Jenkins. An attempt to ambush them was made by the Mexicans as in the clash at Carrizal and resulted in a battle in which the Mexicans were scattered and 40 prisoners taken.

NO WORD FROM CARRANZA.

Washington, June 28.—The time limit on the U. S. ultimatum to Carranza expires at midnight. If by that time he has not answered the American note, or his answer is not satisfactory, President Wilson will go before Congress tomorrow and ask for authority to use American troops in an attack on Mexican troops who are holding eighteen U. S. prisoners.

There is every indication that even should the Carranza reply come before the expiration of the time limit it will be of such a nature as to force the hand of the United States.

Senor Arredondo, the Mexican ambassador designate, early today said that his advices from the Mexican Government had not included any response to the American demand or rejoinder to the refusal of the United States to order the withdrawal of the American forces now engaged in hunting down bandits, as demanded by the Carranza Government.

The Mexican representative said, however, that he had reason to believe that an answer to one and perhaps both communications would be received today.

Members of the Foreign Relations Committee are of the opinion that the President will appear before the two houses tomorrow if Carranza does not release the American prisoners.

Well authenticated reports in high diplomatic circles today indicated that the crisis might be reached even sooner. It was stated that Carranza's reply to the demand for the prisoners was on the way and that it was a flat refusal to give them up .

El Paso, June 28.—Alarming reports have been received here from Naco, Ariz. At Cananea, on the railroad below Naco, Mex., Carranzistas have assembled a force of 6,000 men, and General Davis, in command of the United States forces of Douglas, Arz., reports that he fears an attack on some of the Texas border towns is contemplated.

The situation at Juarez, just across the border from here, is giving considerable uneasiness to army officers. Soldiers that formerly served under Villa are reinforcing the Juarez garrison hourly, and 700 of them are now in that town. They are led by General Medinavetta and Jose Ysabel Robles, former Villa officers, who are both known to be strongly anti-American.

These officers have openly boasted that they are going to attack El Paso, which they call the "rich and cowardly gringo city," and they are being carefully watched.

Secret Service men have learned that the Carranza Government is making every effort to attract former Villistas into the service, promising they will fight under Villa himself in their old organizations and under their old flags. The promise is held out to them that they will be able to fight against the Americans, the bitter enemy of their leader, Francisco Villa, and this appeal is proving very effective.

Say Mexicans Were Mistreated.

Washington, June 28.—The Mexican government through Ambassador Designate Arrendo today filed with the State Department charges that a column of 3,000 American soldiers had captured and maltreated 300 Mexican civilians at La Cruz, Chihuahua. Arrendo demanded that the Americans be punished and the United States Government take steps that will insure that a repetition of this shall be impossible.

WESTFIELD BAND WILL GIVE CONCERT TOMORROW

The Westfield Band will give a band concert in the new High School Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, to help defray the expenses incident to the series of summer concerts arranged for the coming months in the High School campus, where Westfielders and their friends enjoyed the concerts last summer. Continued practice under instruction of Conductor W. W. Bartow has made the Westfield Band second to none in band music and their playing now shows that they have mastered the technics and detail so much required for this class of music.

The program arranged for Thursday night includes several solos to be played by Ernest Albert Couturier, the world's greatest cornet virtuoso. Mr. Couturier is called the "King of the Cornet." He has played all over the world, notably with the Garde Republican Band, of Paris, and at Knolls in Berlin, and until recently was conductor of Gilmore's Band.

VIOLATED TRAFFIC LAW.

COMMENCES A VACATION.

Henry Wierenga, of Grant avenue, has commenced his annual vacation from his duties as driver at fire headquarters. He left yesterday for Freeport, Maine, where Mrs. Wierenga and daughters, Mabel and Dorothy, have been visiting relatives since the first of the month.

JOSEPH O. OSGOOD, SR., DROPS DEAD IN NEWARK

WATERMELON CONVENTION.

The Young Men's Club of the Shiloh Baptist church will hold an entertainment in Reform Hall tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. John Taylor is the chairman of the committee of arrangements and has the following committee assisting him: Freddie Kline, W. W. Burton, James A. Saunders, W. Jetter, J. C. Lumpkins A. S. Venable, B. Harvey, J. D. Hampton, S. Pickens, J. Stewart, W. H. Phillips H. Burgess, E. Crite and M. D. Harris. The entertainment will be provided by the "Shoo Fly Regiment." Singing will be rendered by the Boy Scouts quartet and music will be provide by Venable Brothers' orchestra. Refreshments will be served.

LECTURE ON "FLORIDA."

The lecture on "Florida," given last evening in the German Reformed church, under the auspices of the Jungenbund, was enjoyed by a large gathering of friends and members of the society. The address was delivered by Mrs. F. Bach, who proved to be a most interesting and instructive speaker.

ORGANIZE FOR SOLDIERS' AID

Many Citizens Meet With the Mayor to Plan Local Relief Work.

ALL TO HAVE A PART

Association Will Be Formed to Centralize Work—No one Dependent Upon a Soldier Shall Suffer in City or Borough.

That no person in Plainfield or North Plainfield shall suffer because of the going away of a father, brother, son or other bread-winner to serve his country on the Mexican border, about thirty men and women last night met to organize a Permanent Relief Association, the purpose of which will be to do the work of "stay-at-homes" during the present trouble homes" during the present trouble with Mexico.

Mayor Calkins presided at the meeting, which was held in the Council chamber of the Municipal building. At least half of those present were women, and they represented many of the social, charitable and mercy organizations of the city and borough. Among those who were present and who volunteered their services in the work were: Mrs. Irons, Mrs. Goddard, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Coperthwaite, Mrs. Charles, Mrs. Dellifield, Mrs. Myers, Mrs. Mellick, Mrs. Calkins, Percy H. Stewart, John M. Whiton, G. P. Mellick, E. R. Depew, H. C. White, B. P. Bowers, W. G. Besler, Father McDonald, James Boyd Potter, E. H. Ladd, Peter McDonough, Allan Coperthwaite, Councilman Schmink, R. A. Claybrook, Charles H. Frost and Judge William Newcorn.

The organization is to serve as a central relief committee so that its work can be systematized. This will prevent a needy family being slighted and will insure against duplication of gifts. Every man, woman and child will be eligible for membership, according to the plan tentatively adopted last night, and the dues will be whatever the member can afford to give. Those who give ten cents will be enrolled as members along with those who give $1,000, and there is to be no distinction on the "roll of honor" that will be made up when the work is under way.

The purpose and plan of the organization was explained by Mayor Calkins at the opening of the meeting and is contained in the following resolution, passed by unanimous vote:

Whereas, in the crisis which confronts our country many young men of Plainfield and North Plainfield have already answered the call of the government and others stand ready to go when summoned, without thought of the consequences to themselves or those dependent upon them, but sure that their inclination lies in the direction of a high duty concerning which they have no doubt; and

Whereas, the people of this community are of one mind concerning not only their duty but their great opportunity and privilege in these circumstances, to make generous and effective provision for the comfort of the men who have answered and shall answer the call to arms and so that their families may not suffer for lack of help and affectionate care at a time when they are thus without warning deprived of their usual means of support. Now therefore be it

Resolved, that we, a gathering of citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield in conference this day assembled, do hereby constitute an organization which shall be known as The Volunteers' Auxiliary of Plainfield and North Plainfield, or by such other name as may be finally chosen, to membership in which all the people of the community are cordially invited; and be it further

Resolved, that a committee be named by Mayor Calkins, as the chairman of this meeting, with authority to take such action as may seem best in order to perfect the details of the organization, for the purposes aforesaid.

Mayor Calkins explained that Father Bogan, Senator Ackerman Mayor Smalley and several other individuals were enthusiastically behind the movement, but were prevented from attending last night's meeting. He also read a number of letters from societies in Plainfield and North Plainfield in which they expressed a desire to co-operate in any way possible.

The relief work is to include families of those who "have answered or shall answer the call of their country," and it is believed that many young men who might otherwise not feel at liberty to enlist in case Company K is ordered out or volunteers are called for will now offer their services to their flag, knowing that those dependent upon them shall not suffer. Five members of Troop D, who are already under arms, have left loved ones behind who are dependent upon them, according to a statement made last night, and this number will be greatly increased should Company K be called out.

"I believe that we could raise $130,000 or twice that sum if it was needed, in twenty-four hours in such a cause," said Mayor Calkins last night.

Following a long illness from Bright's disease and complications, William Goeller, a well known resident of this city, died early this morning at his home on Bradford place. His health began to fail about six months ago and for the past few weeks he had been confined to his bed failing steadily despite the best of medical attention.

Mr. Goeller was born in New York city, but came to Plainfield with his parents when a mere boy. His father conducted a shoe making business and general store on Plainfield avenue, which was one of the most successful in that part of the city for many years. Both parents are now dead. Mr. Goeller entered the Potter Press Works as a youth to learn the machinist's trade and remained in the shop until the general lay-off in 1914, giving him a record of thirty-three years with the same firm. He afterward went with the International Motor Company's local plant, where he was working at the time his illness began. Mr. Goeller was possessed of an unusual congenial disposition that won him hosts of friends and he was extremely popular throughout the West End. To those who knew him best he was always known as "Billy" and his death will be received with deep regret by those permitted to enjoy his comradeship.

Mr. Goeller was a member of Plainfield Lodge, No. 310, Loyal Order of Moose; the Plainfield local of the International Association of Machinists, and Court Dunellen, I. O. F., No. 1123, of Dunellen. He is survived by his wife, two sons and four daughters. These are Harry and Harold Goeller, Mrs. Thomas Lappin, Margaret, Lillian and Marie Goeller, also one grandchild, but nine days old, all residing at the parental home on Bradford place. There are also two sisters, Mrs. Meyers, ofn Washingto street, and Mrs. Kate Huebener, of Elizabeth.

The funeral will be held at the late home Saturday morning at 8:30 and from St. Mary's church, of which the deceased was a communicant, at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

BORO ORDERS POLES MOVED ON SOMERSET

Public Service Corporation Will Be Forced to Make Change at Once.

The Common Council of North Plainfield last night notified the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and the Public Service corporation to remove its wooden poles from present lines on Somerset street between Jackson avenue and Johnson's Drive, where work of widening is now underway. This was done at a special meeting of the Council.

George G. Andrews, of the Public Service Corporation and John VanFleet, of the Telephone Company, were present at the meeting. They said the companies would begin at once to establish a new pole line so that the street can be widened but would give no assurance that the wooden poles would be eliminated. Mr. Van Fleet said that it was impossible for the telephone company to use anything but wooden poles as the service would be great danger in a combination of telephone wires and high tension electric wires to the same metal pole.

After the two public service men had left former Mayor Newt Smalley said that the street railway on Somerset street was responsible for present conditions there and made it necessary that the thoroughfare be widened. This road belongs to the Public Service, he said, which also controls the gas and electric companies, and the city is now spending $10,000 to make the improvement which will not be complete if the present pole line stands. In view of the privileges enjoyed by the Public Service he declared that it should be willing to assist in the improvement and he suggested that the Council simply order the poles taken down.

It was reported to the Council that Morris Latzko would appear before Judge Daniel K. Beekman, of Somerset county court, Friday of this week for the purpose of asking a transfer of his license. The Council passed a resolution asking that this transfer be denied, and instructed Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., to appear in court on that date and present this.

INSTALL PASTOR OF BORO CHURCH

Rev. J. O. McKelvey Becomes the Head of Watchung Avenue Congregation.

MUSIC IS A FEATURE

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie Delivers Charge to the Congregation and Rev. Dr. J. T. Kerr the Charge to the Pastor.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, who has been associated with Warren chapel for the past twenty-three years, was installed last night as the pastor of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, which was recently made an independent church by the Elizabeth Presbytery after the mother church, the Crescent Avenue congregation, consented to the change. The Watchung avenue edifice was attractively decorated for the occasions with ropes of rambler roses, palms and ferns. The church was thronged with members of the congregation and their friends who came to see the popular reverend made pastor.

The exercises opened with an organ prelude followed by the Doxology and the invocation and Lord's prayer by the Rev. William Lloyd Imes, pastor of Bethel chapel. The scripture and prayer was offered by the Rev. Ernest R. Brown, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, followed by an anthem by the choir, "Still, Still With Thee," by Heyser. Rev. Dr. Louis B. Crane, of Elizabeth, delivered the sermon of the evening and took as his subject, "Our Citizenship In Heaven and Living It Here on Earth."

His theme pictured the colonization by the English who took their language and customs with them wherever they went and established English colonies. The similitude of both this custom and the Christian should be the same, inasmuch as the Christian should take this Christianity with him wherever he goes and practice the truths of that faith with unswerving faithfulness.

The charge to the minister was made by Rev. Dr. John T. Kerr, also of Elizabeth, who has known Mr. McKelvey through all the years of his pastorate here. He spoke of the uniqueness of the occasion inasmuch as it is seldom that a man called from the seminary to associate work has ever stayed in that position so long as to become the pastor of the church. During the course of his address he told of the early work of Mr. Kelvey, who came to the borough chapel when it was but a small congregation associated with the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

By his faithful attention to his duties, the congregation has increased many fold under the guidance of Mr. McKelvey and at the conclusion of the twenty-third year of his connection with the borough chapel, he is installed as pastor. The charge to the congregation was made by the Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, offered prayer. At the conclusion of the service the congregation all came forward to shake hands with both the new pastor and his wife.

The vocal selections rendered during the service were sung by John Richards and Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz, soloists in the church. The committee who decorated the church was composed of the following: Mrs. L. J. Stites, Mrs. George Hoagland, Miss Elsie Kurzhals and Thomas Finney.

TROOP D WILL START BORDER TRIP EARLY SATURDAY; WILL AVOID LAST MINUTE HOLD-UP

GUARDSMEN BEING SUBJECTED TO PHYSICAL TESTS TODAY PREPARATORY TO ENTRAINING—SOME PLAINFIELDERS REJECTED.

COMPANY K WILL GO TO TRENTON NEXT WEEK

Plainfield Infantry With Second Regiment Will Probably Be Ordered Out in a Week—Will Entrain for Texas From the Capitol City Armory—New Organizations Formed for Soldiers

Mobilization Camp, Sea Girt, Wednesday Afternoon—Positive assurance that Troop D would leave for the border early Saturday morning and that the Second Regiment will get orders to mobilize within a week was given the Daily Press representative here this afternoon by General Wilbur F. Sadler. The Fifth Regiment will leave for Texas Friday and the Fourth Regiment, together with Troop D, and a Signal Corps, will get under way at the earliest possible hour Saturday. In order to avoid the eleventh hour delays and confusion such as was in evidence when the other troops left yesterday General Sadler has given orders to the men to pack up their equipment the night before and Troop D and the other guardsmen who will go out Saturday will have every thing aboard the train Friday night.

Company K, of Plainfield, and the other companies in the Second Regiment will probably not go to Sea Girt. They will proceed immediately to the Trenton armory after definite orders are issued and will mobilize for border duty at that point.

Members of Troop D were subjected to the physical examinations this morning and were also given the Federal oaths. No definite information regarding the number accepted and rejected could be obtained this afternoon and the officials will probably not make an authortative statement until late this evening. Drills and other camp routine were discontinued at the Troop headquarters this morning, the guardsmen being detailed in squads to Sea Girt for the physical tests.

When the Plainfielders were informed of the probability of their moving to the border Saturday they were overjoyed. Every man is anxious to get underway and each is hoping against hope that he will not be rejected by the examiners. It is a foregone conclusion, however, that some of the Plainfield men in Troop D will not be taken into Federal service and some of these men were resigned to their fate before the tests today. However, this is no reflection on the standing of the troop for every company in camp here has been weeded out by the medical men and it is safe to state that the number turned down in Troop D will not be above the average.

An organization known as the New Jersey Soldiers' Relief Association was started today with Mrs. James F. Fielder, wife of the governor, acting as prime mover. Mrs. Fielder will appoint a committee of seven to draw up plans for permanent organization and the objects of the association will be to care for the comfort of soldiers and welfare of the families left behind.

"MARRYING PARSON" TIES ANOTHER KNOT

Rev. J. Madison Hare, of Scotch Plains, Has Made Many "War Brides."

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, June 28.—Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church and chaplain of the Fourth Regiment of New Jersey Infantry now in camp here, has become known as the "marrying parson." Dr. Hare has made a number of "war brides" since reporting to his regiment, the last one being recorded last night when he officiated at a ceremony in Governor Fielder's cottage.

The bridegroom was Lieut. Ferdinand G. Ereck, of Company H, Fourth Regiment, and he took for his bride Miss Violet Hall. Governor and Mrs. Fielder and the governor's staff witnessed the wedding. Immediately after the knot was tied the newlyweds left in the governor's automobile, the lieutenant having been granted a twenty-four hour leave of abeence for a honeymoon.

FRENCH REFULSE GERMAN ASSAULTS

Many Activities in Verdun Sectors During Last Night.

Paris, June 28.—Attempts by the Germans to advance on the Verdun front last night where easily checked the French War Office announced today. Two attacks were launched east of the Meuse River, the communique stated, but both were repulsed. German troops tried to storm the French position at hill No. 321, south of the Haudremont quarries, but it broke down under a hail of hand grenades. On the line of Flure Vaux Woods and Chapitre Woods another German assault was launched but it too proved futile. To the west of the big gun duel continued.

Casement Presents Defense.

BOY VOLUNTEERED THEN BACKED OUT

Gleantzer Returned to His Home Here Last Night With Excuses.

Yielding to the plea of his mother, Walter Gleantzer refused to take the Federal oath at Sea Girt yesterday, and as a result was not one of the local boys to accompany Troop C Squadron to the Mexican border. Gleantzer enlisted from the Troop D headquarters just as the boys were leaving for the mobilization camp and when volunteers were asked for to fill the gap in Troop C he was one of those who responded, but when it came time to take the Federal oath he refused, and was allowed to return to this city.

When seen at his home on Lafayette place today by a Daily Press reporter, he said that it was because of his mother's opposition to his taking the oath that he is not with the boys headed for the border today. His mother did not understand the conditions of the oath and when she asked him not to take it he obeyed her wishes. If war comes he will enlist in the regulars, he says.

Although this is young Gleantzer's version of his leave taking, his mother was interviewed by a Daily Press reporter yesterday and at that time she was under the impression that he was going with the troopers. She even went so far as to watch for her boy as the trains of infantry pulled through the city yesterday morning. When interviewed by a reporter yesterday she was apparently resigned to his leaving, and she was evidently not interested in the oath or its terms. Officers and men at Sea Girt last night were under the impression that Gleantzer was with the other troopers on the mobilization train.

HELD DIME SOCIAL.

The dime social held last evening at the home of Mrs. P. H. In conclusion cake and coffee was served to the attendants.

Scotch Plains, Fanwood

SCHOOL MASS MEETING IS HELD IN FANWOOD

Emil Eckhardt Endorsed for Member of Board and Other Work Started.

Fanwood borough residents seem to be determined to get at the bottom of the school question that is now causing so much discussion, and at a meeting of fifty residents held in the Fanwood fire house last night, Harry P. Robinson, chairman, was given power to appoint a committee, but will announce the names later. Emil Eckhardt, a resident of the borough for the past five years and favorable to the school proposition as viewed by Fanwood, was endorsed by the meeting for member of the Board of Education to fill the vacancy from Fanwood caused by the death of Thomas H Norton, and it will be recommended to the president of the board that he appoint Mr. Eckhardt to fill the unexpired term.

The Fanwood people have been working to have the proposition for a borough school come up for a vote at the same time the election is held to pass on an appropriation for building an additon to School No. 1, but being unsuccessful in that step they are going to continue working along other lines for the same end and it was for that purpose that the committee was suggested.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF JOHN F. KENNEDY HELD

Rev. Lewis Bond and Rev. Mebane Ramsey Officiate —Burial in Hartford.

The funeral of John Frelinghuysen Kennedy, aged 77 years, was held at 10 45 o'clock this morning at 402 Park avenue. Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city, officiated, assisted by Rev. Mebane Ramsey, pastor of the Wilson Memorial church. The burial will take place at Hartford, Conn.

Mr. Kennedy, who died Monday night at the home of his son, Henry R. Kennedy, on Johnston's Drive, was born at Greenwich, Warren county, where he spent most of his early life. He was a student at Rutgers College, when his uncle, Theodore Frelinghuysen, was president of that institution. Mr. Kennedy was the son of Henry R. Kennedy, Sr., who was president of the bank at Bloomsbury.

At the outbreak of the Civil War Mr. Kennedy enlisted in Co. C, 31st Regiment, N. J. Vols., at Flemington. Later he was made first sergeant of the company and afterward was promoted to second lieutenant of Co. F, 20th Regiment, N. J. Vols. He was honorably discharged on June 27, 1863, at the expiration of his service. In 1864 Mr. Kennedy married Miss Mary Belle Kennedy, daughter of Judge Phineas B. Kennedy, of Belvidere. She died several years ago. Mr. Kennedy was a member of the Presbyterian church of Bloomsbury.

The deceased was also the father of Rev. Phineas B. Kennedy, son-in-law of Rev. Lewis Bond, of this city, and who with his wife, was engaged in mission work in Albania for a long time. Since returning from Albania he and Mrs. Kennedy have been stopping at Bloomsbury.

ORIGIN OF CRISIS WITH CARRANZA

Refusal to Withdraw Troops Rapidly Led to Warning.

THEN THE CALL FOR MILITIA

Actual Hostilities Came Less Than a Month After First Chief Asked President Wilson to Order United States Troops to Return to Border—History of the Exchanges.

Carranza's demand that the United States consent to immediate withdrawal of its troops from Mexico was presented to the state department on May 31 last. Saying that Mexico's purpose was to avoid war if possible, the note charged the American government with bad faith, accused President Wilson of sanctioning a state of affairs grossly inconsistent with his protestations of good will, said that the true purpose of sending soldiers across the border seemed to be the invasion of Mexico and asserted that if the United States had properly protected its frontier there would have been no occasion for the expedition into Mexico.

On the following day, June 1, President Wilson let it be known that, although he had no intention of keeping the troops across the border longer than necessary to enable the Carranza authorities to end the operations of bandits, the United States would not yield to the demand of Carranza.

Many Washington officials believed that the de facto president of Mexico had drafted his remarkable note principally for home consumption. Ambassador Arredondo said he did not regard it as an ultimatum. The cabinet in Washington met on June 6, but the reply to the Carranza note was delayed.

United States Consulate Stoned.

Meanwhile General Pershing and the Mexican general, Gavira, had a conference, and the American consulate in Chihuahua was stoned. Rapid spread of anti-American sentiment, which the Carranza authorities were reported to be encouraging, was evident throughout northern Mexico.

On June 10 it was reported from San Antonio that a Mexican band had raided a Texas ranch and that Captain Bell, with one troop of the Fourteenth cavalry, had crossed the line in pursuit. On the same day General Trevino, acting governor of Chihuahua, was represented as urging all Americans to leave, as he could not guarantee them protection against the rising resentment of the Mexicans.

On June 11 Secretary of War Baker ordered 1,500 additional regulars to go to San Antonio for border patrol service. This action was induced by a report from General Funston telling of Mexicans firing on an American patrol near New Hatchet, N. M., and wounding Private Lee W. Saunders of the Twelfth cavalry. General Funston asked for more men for the patrol.

On June 13 Secretary Lansing sent a preliminary representation to General Carranza calling his attention to the fact that a Mexican raider killed by American soldiers following a raid on Coleman's ranch near Laredo, Tex., was positively identified as Lieutenant Colonel Villareal, a Carranza officer.

On June 15, following conferences in Washington between Secretary Lansing and certain members of the diplomatic corps, it was reported that some of the other powers had offered their friendly assistance in solving the Mexican problem without war.

On June 16 Washington heard unofficially that General Jacinto Trevino, acting under instructions from General Carranza, had informed General Pershing that any further movement to the east, south or west would be regarded as a hostile act and a signal for warfare. Following the entry into Mexico of American troops near Laredo notices were posted in Juarez inviting all Mexican citizens to meet every day to receive military instruction.

Fighting Near Brownsville.

On June 17, while Secretary of War Baker was in conference with President Wilson, word was received of serious fighting on the Mexican side of the border near Brownsville, Tex. General Ricaut announced that the American soldiers in Mexico would be attacked unless a punitive expedition that chased marauders across the line on June 16 was withdrawn at once.

On June 19 President Wilson called out the militia of every state for border duty. On the same day the American punitive expedition that had crossed near Brownsville was withdrawn after being fired upon, with the result that one Mexican was killed and three wounded. General Obregon, Carranza's minister of war, replied to President Wilson's summons to the militia by calling upon all Mexicans to be prepared to defend the country in case of a rupture of relations with the United States. General Pershing's description of the situation as regards his expedition was, "More tense."

On June 20 Secretary Lansing sent the long delayed note to Carranza. It summed up at great length Mexican outrages upon American life and property and warned Carranza that the United States would not recede from its determination to remove the border peril and that the execution of Carranza's threat to attack American troops if they did not retire "will lead to the gravest consequences." Then followed on June 21 the attack on American soldiers at Carrizal, Mexico

PRICE.

Did you decide, not long ago, that you could not buy some particular thing because the price was a little too high? See if the store advertisements bring to you today any interesting "news" on this question.

If values and prices ruled about alike in all stores at all times, there would not be any such thing as store competition. And, as finding desirable values would require no especial knowledge or insight, store advertising would be superfluous

WANT A SONG WITH PEP FOR SOLDIERS ON BORDER

"Mexico" Favorite, but Other Suggestions Are Coming In.

What will be the army's song along the Mexican border?

The stirring songs and marches that have aroused the patriotism of fighting men all over the world throughout all the years have been long remembered as outstanding features of a hundred campaigns.

In our own country the earliest songs of the Revolution have come down through the years and have been sung by the people long after those whose steps were livened and whose exhausted bodies were straightened to new endeavor by the music had passed away. Every one knows the refrain of "Yankee Doodle," the earliest of the soldier songs of the republic, and then came the "Star Spangled Banner" after the war of 1812, which later was accorded the honor of universal acceptance as the national anthem.

The civil war brought its scores of songs that every one knows and sings yet and appreciates for their lively marching rhythm and the stirring choruses, "The Girl I Left Behind Me," "We Are Coming, Father Abraham," "Marching Through Georgia," "John Brown's Body," "Dixie," "Maryland, My Maryland," and all the others. The Spanish-American war made "A Hot Time In the Old Town" thrill with patriotism.

The question has caused much speculation. Scores have suggested favorite songs with a swing and a rousing chorus that would serve to cheer the men and keep them marching. Attention of most of the men seemed to have centered upon "Mexico," "America, I Love You," and "It's a Grand Old Flag."

The men who had learned the verses of "Mexico" were enthusiastic in their belief that it fits the present conditions and will provide lots of pep and swing for the men.

The words of the song are:

They're get-tin' ready, they're get-tin' ready;
We've had a row, and now they're going to war.
They've got their orders to sail the waters.
With heavy heart they start for a foreign shore.
They're not excited; they're just delighted
To go and shake them, make them stand up and roar
Like they never did before.

CHORUS

They're on their way—to Mexico;
Just see those Yankee fighters, foe exciters,
Gettin' ready to go.
They're on their way—to win the day;
Just take a look at those Yankee brothers
Waving to their gray haired mothers.
Goodby, they're leaving; goodby, stop grieving.
Don't cry; they're glad to go.
They'll make them run like a herd of cattle,
They'll know they've had some battle,
Way down in Mexico.

Come over near them, come on and cheer them;
They've got a right to fight this battle because They've been invited to go and fight it,
And so they're in to win, and they'll never pause
Until they take 'em, and then they'll make 'em
With head erect respect America's laws.
Give three cheers for them because.

HARVEST HANDS NEEDED.

Western States Call For Laborers to Aid In Gathering Crops.

Bumper grain crops in the west are demanding labor for the harvest. Wages in Oklahoma range from $2 to $3 a day with board. In Kansas ordinary hands will get from $2 to $3 a day with board; stackers, $3.50 to $5 a day, enginemen, $3.50 to $6 a day, and men with teams, $4 to $7 a day. Harvest in Oklahoma was started about June 18 and in Kansas about June 15.

MILITARISM IS DISCUSSED HERE

State Commission on Training in High Schools Grants a Hearing.

IS POORLY ATTENDED

Dr. H. M. Maxson Strongly In Favor of Physical Training and Points Out Advantages—Frederick Kraft, of Ridgefield, Also Speaks.

For the purpose of considering the question whether it is desirable or not to compel military training in the high schools of the State, the New Jersey Commission on Military Training in High Schools, appointed by the last Legislatuee, held a hearing in the city building on North avenue this morning. Owing to the fact that through a mistake no previous publicity was given to the hearing, there were only two or three persons present outside the commission.

Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of the Plainfield public schools, was one of the two speakers to express an opinion, and he strongly favored the adoption of a systematic course of physical training as more advantageous than m——— training. It was the belief of Dr. Maxson that an approved physical training system will do more to give boys the proper development than the military training, which he characterized as narrow in its scope. He thought the musket a poor instrument for physical exercise, that boys cannot undergo hard instructions and requirements of a military camp. He approved the work of a school athletic league as more desirable. He cited Germany as a country where military drills are not required of boys, and yet it is one of the greatest nations in its devotion to athletic drills. Dr. Maxson also endorsed the Boy Scout movement, which he said should be encouraged.

Frederick Kraft, of Ridgefield, onetime candidate for Governor on the Socialist ticket, was the other speaker. He argued against military training of any kind in public schools, adding that it would only lead to militarism and disproved the generally accepted idea that this was a country "by the people, for the people and of the people."

In answer to questions, Mr. Kraft said that he favored some of the training adopted in the schools of Switzerland, but opposed other features.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, was among the few persons present. Efforts are now being made to hold the next hearing in Newark, a date to be determined later. The commission is composed of A. Dayton Oliphant, Trenton, chairman; Mayor Winfield S. Price, Camden; State Senator W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook; Superintendent Don C. Bliss, of Montclair, and Superintendent Henry Snyder, of Jersey City. The commission will report of its findings at the next session of the Legislature.

CHAUTAUQUA DID NOT MAKE MONEY

Signers Will Be Forced to Pay Part of Guarantee—May Be Repeated.

The recital of Miss Lenora Sparks last night closed the Community Chautauqua program for 1916 in Plainfield. Despite an exceptional program of high class amusement the chautauqua was not a success financially and the forty-nine local citizens who signed a guarantee of $1,000 will be forced to pay some part of this. An effort was made last night to guarantee a chautauqua for next year, but this has not yet been done. More than 200 tickets have been subscribed for, so that it will be necessary to guarantee only 300 more and this will probably be done later. Chairman Marshall, of the local committee, explained to the audience that many of those who had signed the guarantee were members of Troop D, and had been called away before the program opened. This left vacancies among the workers that could not be filled on short notice.

MISS THELMA HERITAGE GIVEN CUT GLASS SHOWER

A surprise party in the form of a cut-glass shower was given last night by Miss Anna Lee, of West Sixth street, in honor of Miss Thelma Heritage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heritage, of West Sixth street, whose engagement to Fred Duemler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Duemler, of Philadelphia, was recently announced.

The color scheme of pink and green was tastefully carried out in the decorations in the dining-room as well as in the refreshments which were served at a late hour.

KHAKI

Forth go the men in khaki,
Drab as the soil beneath them,
Matched with the stretch of desert,
One with the great waste spaces
Melting away in distance.

Under the soldier tunic
Beats in each man a spirit,
Matched with the mighty purpose,
One with the will eternal
Over creation brooding.

Then when the ranks of khaki
Break on the blinded foeman
He shall behold with terror
That which from sight was hidden—
Earth and the whelming judgment!

HISTORY ECLIPSED BY THE BATTLE AT VERDUN

Men Fighting and Dying as Never Before, Declares Observer.

In a description of the Verdun fighting Ferri Pesani, special correspondent of the Turin Stampa, thus speaks of the fury of the struggle and the heroism of the French soldiers. He writes in part:

"It is the right of the soldiers to have their sufferings described, to have their many dead comrades honored and to have their heroic deeds told in all details. Avocourt, Melancourt, Dead Man Hill, Crows' Wood, Vaux, Douaumont—only the name changes; the hell is the same everywhere.

"The first arduous task is that of the detachments who are to replace the survivors in the foremost trenches. To 'get there' is an almost superhuman task. The positions of the reserves lie five kilometers (three and one-eighth miles) behind the front, sometimes six or seven. And this whole zone is bathed by the constant terrific fire of the German artillery. The five, six, seven kilometers must be covered in half shattered communication trenches, on roads and paths that are swept continually by shells, on fields dotted with deep holes, under trees that are no protection, but merely form so many more targets for the German shells.

"To cover these five, six or seven kilometers often takes more than four hours and always costs 10 per cent of the reserve detachments. Arrived at last, the soldiers must remain in their positions seven days, cut off from all the world. For a whole week they must forego all hope of being supplied with fresh food or ammunition. As much as they can carry they take along with them.

"Sometimes they find in the badly shattered communication trenches a little ammunition, but rarely something to eat. Then it is a question of holding out. What have they to hope for? As if on a storm whipped island, they are cut off from all aid and supplies for seven days. Depending entirely upon themselves, no matter how small their number grows, they must hold out and resist the enemy onslaughts.

"If something goes wrong with the machine guns no mechanician can be called, not even some one who could bring necessary instruments to repair the damage. They must help themselves as well or as badly as it is possible.

"For seven days the thundering hail of steel sweeps without pause over their heads, and often a missile buries itself a few feet from them. In the midst of the rain of fire totally enveloping them their heroism is their only support. If only half of them survived that is in itself a wonderful result, which can, however, be achieved only if in the course of one day they have had to repulse not more than three German attacks."

MILLIONAIRE IN WAR.

H. S. A. Stewart, Jr., Private In Pennsylvania Regiment.

"The millionaire kid" of Pittsburgh has joined the colors. He is H. S. A. Stewart, Jr., whose father is a banker, capitalist and director in half a dozen big corporations.

"The kid," reputed to be worth $2,000,000 in his own right, enlisted as a private in Company E, Eighteenth regiment.

He is keeping step with the butcher, baker and candlestick maker. Few knew that the good looking, erect young fellow could have equipped the whole regiment and transported it to the mobilization camp without making even a dent in his pile. He passed a high physical examination.

STRANGE ANIMAL FOUND.

Freak Resembles Alligator Crossed With California Product.

A strange freak of nature which some believe to be a young alligator and others say cannot be classified under that head has been captured in Soap lake, near Gilroy, Cal., by Leland B. Holloway.

When handled or otherwise aroused the thing emits a sound which is declared to be a cross between a bark and a grunt. Holloway took the freak to the University of California, where he asked that an attempt be made to classify it. It is thought to be a hybrid originating in a cross between an alligator and some other animal. An old alligator is believed to have been discarded by some passing circus.

Sweetness That Never Palls.

During a sleepless night the Vizier Mujjeduddin Kumija dispatched his slave, Bedruddin Ejas, to bring him sweets. The slave procured a copper kettle heaped with many kinds of fruits and sweets, and Mujjeduddin began to eat.

"You relish them, my master?" asked the slave.

The vizier shrugged his shoulders. "These fruits are sweet—for the moment, he said "but show me a fruit the sweetness of which will endure even unto the judgment day."

"Such fruits there are, my master," cried the slave and hastened toward the Mesched Hassa, where he awoke the starving orphans in the house of Aliwan and let them forth into the room of his master. Overjoyed, the famished children devoured the fruits.

"Look, O my master," said the slave. "Here you see fruits the sweetness of which endures unto the judgment day."

Two Useful Hints.

To be a successful mother a woman must occasionally warm up the palm of her right hand on the rear elevation of her progeny unless, of course, she happens to be left handed. And to be a successful wife she must occasionally give her conversational powers play to properly illuminate the darkened comprehension of Old Britches as to the whatness of the wherefore, unless, of course, she happens to be handy with the churn dasher or tongs.—Houston Post.

HETTY GREEN'S BUSINESS CODE

Richest Woman In World a Peculiar Character.

HER TEN COMMANDMENTS.

Loathes a Fool, Newspaper Man, and, Most of All, a Lawyer—Says It Isn't Half as Hard to Earn Money as to Spend It—Her Advice to Women Is That They Should Work.

HETTY GREEN'S TEN COMMANDMENTS.

Be careful of your health.
Save your pennies.
Study not how you can spend the money you have earned, but how you can make more.
Watch the people who want to take your money from you. The more money you get the more such people there will be.
Keep on earning money. If you stop earning, your fortune will shrink, as your arm does when you don't exercise it.
See that your head isn't lame. It doesn't matter about your legs.
Learn to know good people from bad.
Take good care of your money. It isn't half as hard to earn it as it is to take care of it.
Be sure not to put all your money eggs into one basket.
Be reliable. That's the golden rule of business.

Hetty Howland Robinson Green, known to a few as "Ready Money Hetty," without doubt the richest woman in the United States, whose income is roughly judged at $5 a minute and who hates a newspaper man, despises a fool and loathes a lawyer—what a character! Columns have been written about her, volumes could be written about her, and yet the interest in this remarkable woman could not be exhausted—received at the courts of Europe, yet wearing a $2 bonnet that will last her a couple of years; clinging closely to a dollar, yet paying $12,000 for a red automobile; full of energy, aggressive, grasping, epigrammatic, honest, fearless, clear headed, suspicious, relentless, yet an advocate of the gentler qualities in woman, a firm believer in the Bible—a Quakeress.

Hetty Green's fortune now is conservatively estimated at $80,000,000. Some persons say she is worth $125,000,000, and they may not be far from right. Her known investments foot up an enormous sum. For instance, she has in real estate, bonds, mortgages and notes on Manhattan security to the amount of $23,000,000; in western railroads, Florida lands and coast investments she has $20,000,000; in stock investments, including industrial shares, she has $15,000,000, and in farming lands throughout the west and in Chicago holdings she has $20,000,000. She put $20,000,000 in western railroads that her son, Edward H. R. Green, might become a railway magnate, a man of affairs, and have a chance to succeed in life.

An interview with Hetty Green is like five minutes in a shower bath—it is invigorating. Her sharp, decisive speech, her pungent remarks, ready wit, her scathing passages regarding all she disapproves, her approving grunt which goes as an indorsement, form quite a contrast to the commonplaces interviewers usually have to endure. But Mrs. Green is not an easy woman to reach. She has not seen many newspaper men in her life. She hates them. And what is more, she is not backward in saying so. If she is in the midst of some litigation she will see a newspaper man. He becomes harmless beside lawyers. Not that she hates the newspaper men less, but that she hates the lawyers more.

As you approach Mrs. Green she will turn sharply and grasp her famous reticule in which she carries her keys, handkerchief, a few other oddments and frequently some securities worth a couple of millions of dollars. You will notice she signs her checks with a common steel pen. Every one else in the bank uses the usual bankers' gold pen, but one of the ordinary schoolgirl stripe is good enough for Mrs. Green.

Now, let us ask the complex creature to what she owes her business success. Here is her answer:

"My business creed is sound, and, best of all, it is put into practice. It is not a theory to be ignored. If you owe a man a dollar pay him a dollar, a good dollar, on the day it is due. Don't pay him a dollar and a quarter, and don't try to pay him 99 cents. Then he will know you are neither a knave nor a fool. If you find a dishonest man in your employ get rid of him quietly if you can, but let him go. This is not harsh. It is justice to honest men and proper justice to men who violate their faith. If you have a fool around you let him go. I can't abide a fool, and I have no use for a crook. There may be some about me, but most of the time I know it."

"What about women, Mrs. Green?"

"I have told you every woman ought to work. If women worked more we would see fewer divorces. But what can you expect? Some women never learn to keep house. They get married, and their sole ambition is to wear fine clothes, bleach their hair and wear fine ribbons and laces. Home is the last place they want to think of. They go parading around with their vulgar style and think they are beauties. Poor things! They never get sense."

A Bull In the Pulpit.

"I am requested to say," said the young dominie, who was acting as a substitute, "that there will be no meeting of the Ladies' Sewing guild this week as usual, owing to the fact that all the ladies of the guild will be out of town. Should any others wish to take up the work they may do so."

Then he paused, but it was too late. —Richmond Times-Dispatch.

TALKS ON POWER—No. 7

Purchased Power Cheaper

Public Service Electric Company,
Jersey City, N. J.

Gentlemen:

It gives us pleasure to testify to the satisfactory and efficient service we have had from your company, both in power and lighting, during the past twelve years. In the year 1904, we installed your service, operating one 3-horsepower motor. To-day, we are using 92-horsepower, besides the necessary lights for a manufacturing plant of this kind.

We might also say that we have an unused engine, which we might utilize. We might also manufacture our own electricity, but at the price you are selling current, it has never appealed to us, to even attempt operating our own electric plant. In fact, we have investigated and found that it would be more expensive. Therefore, we leave our equipment idle, and as stated above, are purchasing our entire power supply from your company.

Respectfully yours,
OWENS & TRAEGER,
(Sgd.) C. M. Owens.

In writing of the economic conditions and industrial changes that will follow the present European war, the late Mr. James J. Hill said:

"Capital may be a shy bird for some time to come. The ratio of credit to capital being now so disproportionate, the latter can pick and choose. It is generally believed that interest rates must rise after the new era has come."—New York Times, April 9, 1916.

The extremely trying conditions now confronting manufacturers

—The rising cost of raw material and labor

—The new inventions and changes in manufacturing process

—The necessity of meeting demand in order to keep out competition

—The present keen and increasing competition

—All emphasize the necessity, at times, for additional working capital.

These conditions also emphasize the folly of investing a large amount of money in a private power generating plant, even if the cost of purchased power per kilowatt hour were a trifle higher —Because the cost of power is only a very small part of the total cost of manufacture.

—And if the money were invested in the business, where it would earn a profit of 12% to 20% and where it would be turned over several times during the year, the difference in cost would be saved many times over.

But if the risk imposed by the conditions mentioned above is considered in figuring depreciation —And if the interest on the investment in the plant is figured at a rate between 12% and 20%, the rate that the money would earn if invested in the business —And if an accurate load factor were used in computing the cost of power

—Then it would be proved that purchased power is usually cheaper per kilowatt hour than privately made power

—And a wiser investment.

More than 10,000 power users are purchasing power from our great system of 22 generating stations and 61 substations.

Let us make complete engineering tests in your factory.

Perhaps you can save money by purchasing our power.

ON THE ANXIOUS SEAT AT SEA GIRT

REGULAR ARMY OFFICERS HAVE WORDS OF PRAISE FOR JERSEY TROOPS AFTER MOBILIZATION

Militia From This State Well on Its Way to Mexico Twenty-four Hours Ahead of Other Organizations Ordered Out at the Same Time—Troop D First to Get Own Motor Truck.

(By L. R. F.)

CAMP FIELDER, SEA GIRT, June 28.—Now that New Jersey troops have started to the Texas border, and the nightmare created by the confused conditions in the railroad yards here has faded away, largely because the higher officials have been able to get a little sleep, the officers have learned to their great satisfaction that New Jersey has again shown the way to the other States.

Reports that have come to Sea Girt indicate that the troops from this State were well on their way a full twenty-four hours ahead of any other organizations ordered out at the same time, in spite of what seemed like great delays at this end. While the regular army officers in camp refused to be quoted on the matter several who are here in connection with the mustering in of the National Guard stated to the New Jersey officers that the untrained citizen soldiers had handled the loading more expeditiously and in a prompter manner than could be expected from regulars. General Sadler stated that there was only one kind of an organization that can load quicker, and that is a circus.

That men of the other organizations will not leave camp in a hurry, even if the call comes for them, seems certain this morning. Adjutant General Sadler has stated that he does not intend to rush any more troops away from Sea Girt, as was done with the first lot, as he has learned that there are so many requirements on the part of the government that need to be looked after. The trouble about the examining and branding of the horses yesterday was caused by the fact that the orders for the troops to break camp were given before it was even known that such action was necessary. In view of this experience the New Jersey officials have decided to take their time with the next lot of troops sent out.

The rookies left behind by the First Regiment, to the number of 150, which are being augmented every day, have presented a new problem. These men have to be trained, and none of the regular officers attached to the Fourth and FifthRegiments can be used for the purpose. Major Winfield Scott Price, of Camden, reputed to be one of the best soldiers in the New Jersey National Guard, and one time offered a high commission to go to China to drill the army there, has taken this work over. Major Price is an officer in the Third Regiment, and should his command be called here, he would have to give up the work. Assisting him are Captain Harry Auten, Company H, Third Regiment, Asbury Park, and Captain Harry Bodine, Company E, Second Regiment, with their company sergeants and cooks.

General Sadler has already taken up the matter of sending the rookies on to Colonel Fraser's command, to complete their training at the border. He does not want to be caught with them on his hands and no one to train them, which would be the case were the other two regiments called out, and this might be at any time. Then again, tentage will be at a premium in such a contingency, and that would again necessitate the use of the hay loft at the State barns for one or more nights, until matters could be adjusted, to say nothing of the problem of feeding that would confront the commissary department.

Still another matter which is causing some trouble with the recruits is the fact that they are near enough to their homes to have a lot of visitors, and these more or less disrupt matters, also. General Sadler feels that the men would get much better training away from home and with the regiment which they have joined.

Troop D, of Plainfield, is the first organization to have its own motor truck. A small machine, for carrying about 500 pounds of equipment, arrived in camp yesterday, and has already been of great service, the camp being about a mile from the nearest railroad station. This truck was purchased by a number of Plainfield citizens, who have formed an organization to see that the troop has everything that it needs. An effort is being made to get someone to give the troop a more modern field kitchen. One other motor truck, which was purchased by the State, was put into service yesterday by the Quartermaster's Department.

When Troops A and C were recruited to full war strength, and given a full complement of supplies, it was found necessary to strip Troop D, of Plainfield, to such an extent that so far as drills are concerned things were very much disorganized with the command. The rookies were given unmounted drills, the older members of the command cleaned up the field where Troops A and C had left. The troop also supplied the mounted orderlies for General Hine's headquarters and the Governor's cottage.

Visitors continued to flock to both camps all day yesterday. Every train from North Jersey deposited its full quota at the Sea Girt station, and the spectators had plenty of opportunity to watch drills on the big parade grounds in the afternoon. Men of the regiments were on the rifle range all day, but up to the present time none of the members of the troops or signal corps have had a chance to do any shooting.

Included among the visitors to camp yesterday afternoon were the following who came to see the Plainfielders: Former Mayor and Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Joseph W. Sandford, Mrs. J. M. Charles, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwait, Mrs. Donald McGee, Mrs. Brown Roiston, Mrs. Lewis Williams, Jr., Mrs. William B. Nash, Mrs. Frederick W. Goddard and Miss Smith.

Trooper Joseph W. Gallagher has been detailed as chauffeur of Troop D's new motor truck. Accompanied by Wagoner P. A. Ransome, he went to New York to bring the machine to Sea Girt yesterday.

Arrival of Equipment Means That Troopers Will Leave Saturday; Expect to Call Second Regiment

(By L. R. F.)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, June 28.—Although it is not known definitely when the Second Regiment, including Company K, of Plainfield, will be ordered to Sea Girt this regiment, with the Third, of Camden, will undoubtedly be brought here for a few days before leaving for the border, so that the preliminary equipping can be attended to. It seems likely that the Second and Third will get orders to move to Sea Girt within a few days and will be under canvas in a week at the most.

New Jersey has put the next movement of its National Guardsmen to the Mexican border squarely up to the Federal military authorities. If Uncle Sam does his part, the State of New Jersey stands ready and willing to furnish some 2,000 or more well trained men, but until the United States government furnishes more equipment General Sadler, speaking for the State, has said that no more troops will be reported ready to move.

In response to the request of Major General Leonard Wood, asking when New Jersey could send more men away, Adjutant General Sadler has stated that within twenty-four hours after the government sends the balance of the equipment needed at Sea Girt, the troops will begin moving. He fixes the time for the Fifth Regiment as Friday, and for the Fourth Regiment and the three mounted organizations—Troops B and D and the Signal Corps—for Saturday.

In his statement General Sadler said: "I have just telephoned General Leonard Wood that all troops now in camp will be able to leave within twenty-four hours after the receipt of the balance of the equipment and horses which are needed. I have been advised that this will probably be shipped tomorrow and may reach Sea Girt by Thursday. To avoid the trouble over the horses which was encountered with the first outgoing troops, the government has consented to send its inspectors to Englewood with our purchasing agent, and no horses that they do not pass will be sent on to Sea Girt. With this settled, it looks as though the horses, or a large part of them, will be shipped tomorrow, and reach here early on Thursday.

"If the equipment and horses are received the Fifth Regiment, of Paterson, may leave Sea Girt on Friday and on Saturday the Fourth Regiment and on Saturday the Fourth Regiment will go. With the Fourth Bank and D, of Plainfield, and the Signal Corps from Jersey City.

"It is not known yet when the Second and Third Regiments of Trenton and Camden will be ordered out, but mobilization is looked for within a week. These regiments will undoubtedly be brought to Sea Girt for a few days before being sent on, so that they can also be fully equipped."

Brigadier General John A. Mather, of the Second Brigade, and his adjutant, Major Harry C. Kramer, were in camp last night trying to arrange to have the calling of their brigade expedited. A number of the officers of the regiments were also in camp, trying to get assignments as instructors for the rookies of the First Regiment which were left behind.

The Fifth Regiment was out for evening parade last night, being liberally applauded by the five thousand or more visitors who lined the field. The regiment made a more business-like appearance than any organization has done in camp in many years. With them marched a machine gun company, a new unit which has been added to all the regiments this year for the first time. The men as yet have no machine guns, but it is expected that these will be supplied by the time they reach the border. The company is composed of about twenty picked men from all the companies in the regiment.

Colonel Austen Colgate, of the Adjutant General's staff, forgot that he was a soldier last night long enough to go to Red Bank to make a political speech in connection with his candidacy for Governor. He was accompanied by Major Nelson B. Gaskill, Jr.

All the horses which are left in camp have been examined and branded, the latter work being done by a detail from Troop D, of Plainfield. The brand is marked "U. S.," being burned into the front left leg, and the hoof of each horse is numbered.

Another camp romance developed yesterday, with Captain Charles E. Hill, of Company M, Fifth Regiment, of Ridgewood, acting as cupid. Private W. T. Scofield was to be married on July first, invitations having been sent out June tenth. The young woman in the case is Miss Lillian Thomalson, also of Ridgewood. When Scofield was called to camp, he asked for a four-day furlough, intending to hasten the ceremony, and the captain was about to grant it, when for some infraction of regulations he refused to do so. The young woman in the case came to camp yesterday afternoon, and after pleading with Captain Hill persuaded him to let Scofield off until July first, with the understanding that the young man will report to the regiment wherever it may be at the time.

George Stanley Dart, secretary of the International Nickle Company, whose home is in Ridgewood, has offered his services to the Fifth Regiment, with three automobiles, going as a driver of one. It is expected that the offer will be accepted. Dart is understood to have resigned his position, which is said to have paid a salary of $5,000 a year, in anticipation of going out.

The men of the Fifth Regiment are being inoculated today with typhoid fever serum. All the men in the troops have had the inoculation for several days, and the Fourth Regiment will be the next one selected for this work.

Trooper Taps Gathered Among Watchful Waiters

Overheard at the camp pump. Here comes that bloomin' idiot Warren Ackerman again. All he does is blow the insides out of that bugle from sunrise till midnight and every time he toots a note it means a different kind of work.

Trooper John Logan (showing Plainfield visitor about the camp)—There comes Gallagher, of Dunellen. He's been appointed chauffeur to the camp officers.

Visitor—Is that so? I didn't know Gallagher could drive.

Logan—Sure, he's a dandy horseman. Why he was brought up with horses and none of them come too speedy for him.

Speaking of Trooper Gallagher it might as well be said now that he is in full possession of what is termed the best job at camp. Since the new camp auto truck arrived he's been put in full charge of it. The Dunellen youth is subject to call any hour during the twenty-four. He takes a spin with the officers at sunrise, gets provisions when he comes back, runs a few errands before dinner, spends a few hours carting equipment in the afternoon, runs his superiors over to Sea Girt after supper, takes care of the car, and during his spare moments keeps himself busy trying to dodge an order. Outside of that Gallagher hasn't a thing in the world to worry him.

Trooper Barry has been on the hospital list for two days. During the rain of Sunday night he was detailed to keep a gun company on sentry duty and contracted a heavy cold that "floored" him. However, he's recovering rapidly and expects to be able to do his share of the work by tomorrow

Trooper (suddenly discovering Uncle Sam's registry mark on the end of a frankfurter which he had purchased from a stand nearby)—"Here's further proof of my claim that this here Sea Girt is one of the slowest places on the face of the globe. Just for excitement they've gone to work and licensed the hot-dogs."

Roger Mellick posed for a picture last night at mess time. Trooper Roger held a tin cup of iced tea in his left hand and a tin plate filled with chow in the other. It was all right for a pose but how in the dickens could he ever have eaten the stuff when he was using both hands to hold it?

Some more rookies were "shot" in the arm yesterday. But after each inoculation they are given a twenty-four hour rest from detail duty and some of them are willing to take a dozen inoculations instead of the required two.

Jimmy Conway got his chance to personally inspect the meat being served in the kitchen yesterday. Jim was delegated to kitchen duty and it fell to his lot to grind up a lot of meat for the supper hash. He's now satisfied that the best is none too good for Troop D. Conway is authority for the statement that the meat is the finest that can be purchased and that last night's dish was real hash made from real meat.

Visitor to group of troopers—"When does Troop D expect to move to the border?"

Ned Stevenson—"Well, us three fellows are going Saturday. I guess that's what you mean by the troop."

Lost—Corncob pipe having a stem with a stovepipe hook and guaranteed to make the smoker see a three-ring circus after each puff. Cook Irby will give "seconds" on grub to the trooper who finds and returns it to him.

Cook Irby has a habit of losing things. The other day he left a pair of perfectly good three for a quarter socks lying around and Jim Conway kidnapped them. Now Jim was a little short on footwear and slept in them last night so as to be sure that they didn't find their way back to Irby's bunk. But there was something about those socks that gave Irby a clue and he wandered into Conway's tent and took them right off the latter's feet while he was snoozing.

Conway told us to publish the above. He's short on socks and thought maybe if his friends back home knew it they'd send him some down.

The men in Troop D are still without decent bathing facilities. It looks as though they would have to continue to be content with appearing in the role of September morn at the pump every time they want a bath.

Visitors continue to stream into the camp every day. If some other Plainfield boys could only see the goodbye demonstrations staged once or twice each day between fair visitors and gallant troopers it would prove the biggest advertisement the recruiting office ever had.

The best part of being a soldier is the goodbye part. And the best part of the whole thing is that the Plainfield troopers have had a solid week's enjoyment "goodbyeing."

One trooper was caught glancing at the date line of a tent mate's Daily Press yesterday afternoon to find out the day of the week.

ON THE WAY TO MEXICO WITH THE PLAINFIELD BOYS; FIRST NEWS LETTER FOR THE PRESS

INTERESTING MISSILE DROPPED FROM TROOP TRAIN AT TRENTON AND FORWARDED BY MAIL TO THE DAILY PRESS.

GIVE MUCH PRAISE FOR OFFICERS OF TROOP D

Local Guardsmen Well and Happy—Enthusiasm Keen on Board Train—New Companions Are a Congenial Bunch—Plenty of Excitement Enroute to Border—Wants Letter From Home Friends.

On The Way To Mexico

The Plainfield Daily Press has made arrangements to secure a daily news letter from one of the Plainfield boys in Troop C, of Newark, now on the way to Mexico. This service may be interrupted occasionally for the troopers find it difficult to mail letters from some points and there is restriction against the guardsmen corresponding for newspapers. However, the Daily Press intends to keep in close touch with the movements of the Plainfield boys in Mexico and it is likely that some information of an interesting nature will be available every day. The following story was written aboard the mobilization train between Sea Girt and Trenton and dropped off the train at the latter place. It was evidently picked up and mailed by some Trentonian and arrived here this morning.

(By Staff Correspondent)

On the way to Mexico—12:22 o'clock—June 27.—After an all night wait at Sea Girt we finally pulled out of the depot at 11:10 this morning. We are all feeling fine and brimming over with enthusiasm. Walter Glaentzer, one of the Plainfield boys, has quit the expedition and I expect he has returned to Plainfield by this time. We were sorry to lose him but it was probably better for his sake for he would not have been happy.

One thing we regret and that is that we had to quit Troop D, the finest group of men at Sea Girt. We feel particularly bad because we had to leave Corporal Roland Cox and Sergeant Walter L. Righter, the two best men in the State of New Jersey, behind. If anyone will deny this statement the Plainfielders on the way to Mexico will lick the tar out of him when they get back. But we are hopeful of having a big number from Troop D with us in Mexico and we'll have some grand reunion when they blow into Fort Bliss.

There was but one subject for conversation between Sea Girt and where this letter was thrown off the train. That was the treatment accorded the departing guardsmen by Mess Sergeant J. Hartley Mellick. He's a prince and in the same class with Cox and Righter. We were given nothing to eat by our new troop friends all yesterday afternoon and Sergeant Mellick saw to it that our appetites were satisfied before we left for Mexico. When he found out we were hungry he issued orders to his cooks to make any sacrifice necessary in order that "his Plainfield boys" didn't go away hungry. Mellick dished out enough grub for twenty-four hours last night and we certainly do appreciate it. We are now eating a part of it. Cook Kirby warned him that there would not be enough to go around among those in Troop D left behind if so much was given to the men leaving. Hartley replied: "To h—— with that. My orders are that this bunch shall not want for food. If there is not enough to go around give the other Troop D men eggs and if you are tired go on to bed and I'll do the cooking myself."

That's the kind of a fellow Hartley Mellick is. True blue. Every man in Troop D is of that calibre and if they come South us for Troop D 'till the world comes to an end.

Talk about being tired. Well, we're all in. But we are determined to make the best of a five days' trip in these day coaches and no one is complaining. Up to this time we haven't had a chance to get a wink of sleep. Hundreds of people line the tracks in every village and town and of course us live ones have to stick our heads out the window and bid them au revoir (not goodbye).

This crowd is a good one, too. We have a "cow-puncher" sitting along side of us by the name of "Bud Fisher." He's a bear. He knows Adele Von Ohl, of Plainfield, and a lot of other people we do. You should have seen him riding a horse yesterday afternoon. In twenty minutes he made sugar out of dynamite.

This letter is being written under difficulties so don't expect too much. The rest of the fellows are doping me with stuff to put in it and there is so much excitement that I can't seem to find words to express my feelings.

Tell the boys back home to send letters along to Fort Bliss. We expect to see a bundle of stuff from Plainfield waiting for us when we get there. Don't disappoint.

Well, that's about all this time. We'll keep you posted each day. You will also find enclosed in this news letter a set of health instructions we had handed to us on the train a short time ago.

COMPANY K OFFICERS VISITED STATE CAMP

Captain Peterson and Lieut. Conklin Optimistic Over Moving Plans.

Captain Charles Peterson and Lieut. James Conklin, of Company K, Second Regiment, made a "feeler" visit to Sea Girt yesterday and in an interview with a Daily Press reporter this morning the guard head declared that he believed Company K would be at the mobilization camp in another week. All depends on the movements of the infantry now at the Sea Girt camp.

The Fourth Regiment will have to move before room is made for Company K and the Second Regiment and General Sadler has issued tentative orders to the effect that the Fourth would get under way Saturday.

Every one of the ninety men now in the local company, according to Captain Peterson, is ready for the call and when the company is started he says that there are twenty-four men who have served previous enlistments that will return to the colors. If possible the company will be recruited to war strength of one hundred and fifty and for that purpose the recruiting office at the armory on Front street will be open every night this week and possibly longer.

NINE MORE TROOPERS ENLIST FOR SERVICE

Local Office Busy—Men Familiar With Horses Particularly Acceptable.

Six more Plainfield young men left for the Troop D camp at Manasquan on the 9:12 train this morning. The latest recruits are G. R. Young, M. D. Dilts, H. G. Brown, G. B. M. Snyder, Myron S Davis and Louis J. Cahill. The following will leave tomorrow morning: J. R. Garretson, of Dunellen; George R. Bray, of Woodfern, and Richard D. Walker, of New York.

The local recruiting office at 1120 Putnam avenue, is still in operation under the direction of Lieut. Daniel Runkle and considerable more men are needed. Persons who have had experience riding horses will be particularly acceptable. Application should be made at once for the Troop is likely to leave for the border Saturday and it is necessary that the men have a few days' training before departing.

TROOP D MEMBERS WILL BE SHOWN IN "MOVIES"

Henry Brynairski and Paul Collier, of Plainfield, visited the camp yesterday and took a number of pictures. Brynairski operated a motion picture camera and snapped a number of fine scenes during the morning and early afternoon. It is probable that these will be shown at Proctor's Theatre in the near future, thus affording those who have not had the opportunity of visiting the camp, a chance to see just what kind of a busy life the troopers lead at Sea Girt.

Collier took a number of views of the camp, troopers, officers and horses. Hundreds of cameras have been in evidence since the boys arrived at Sea Girt and proofs of the pictures are now beginning to arrive in camp in large numbers. Collier and Brynairski made the trip to and from the shore in Edward Harding's automobile.

FOURTH REGIMENT AFTER MUSICIANS

Members of Dutch Arms Band Invited to Join by Rev. J. Madison Hare.

Rev. J. Madison Hare, of Scotch Plains, chaplain of the Fourth Regiment of Infantry at Sea Girt, this morning sent a request to the Daily Press office for musicians. Dr. Hare says that members of the Dutch Arms Band, of Plainfield, and other local musical organizations will be particularly welcome in the Fourth Regiment.

A number of musicians are needed and those desiring to enlist should first seek Dr. Hare at the Sea Girt camp and make themselves acquainted. It was learned here today that a number of the Dutch Arms band players have been contemplating enlisting and will welcome this opportunity to get in with the Fourth Regiment, which will probably leave Sea Girt Saturday morning.

PLAINFIELDERS MOTORED TO TROOP HEADQUARTERS

An automobile party composed of L. S. Ayer, David Doyle, William Day, John McVicker, Phillip Mathews, Lewis Matlack, Sr., Joseph Mathews and John McCarthy arrived at the Troop D headquarters late yesterday afternoon, coming primarily to see Trooper Ising, of Dunellen, an employe of the International Motor Company shop in Plainfield where all of the autoists also hold positions.

The men spent an hour inspecting the camp and were greatly pleased with it. Another auto party was composed of the family of S. Frederick Smith, of East Ninth street. Mr. and Mrs. Smith and their two children spent the afternoon at the camp.

TROOPERS GET "SHOTS."

The rest of the Plainfield troopers who were not inoculated last week were given their little scratches of "war" yesterday by the camp physician. The little badge of protection against typhoid is administered twice to each man and each "shot" carries with it a twenty-four hour rest for the patient.

GOOD HORSES ASSIGNED TO PLAINFIELD TROOP

All of the Plainfield boys were given their horses at Manasquan yesterday afternooon. These were branded with the "U. S." mark on the left shoulder and the front left hoof was numbered in each case.

A detail including ten Plainfield troopers are assisting in the marking and branding. The horses are all fine animals and the local cavalrymen are mighty well pleased with their mounts. One in particular, that belonging to Lewis Alberts, a Hoboken boy with Troop D, attracted considerable attention in the corral yesterday. Alberts sold the steed to the government for $160, but will have the privilege of riding it and buying it back after the service.

—Until you have canvassed the readers of this newspaper on the matter, do not decide whether or not this may be a "poor time to sell" that property.

JACK MARTIN STILL WARMS THE BENCH

Jack Martin is still "benched." In the double bill between the Brewers and Indianapolis, Stutz performed in short field, handling everything that came his way, and hitting the ball four times. He made quite a "hit" with the fans, but the sport writers have not been raving over him. However, the president of the club thinks that the rejuvenation of the team has worked wonders, perhaps, because the boys captured two stray games the other day. We wonder what he will say about yesterday's defeat at the hands of St. Paul.

—Do the available household workers of this city, who read the classified columns of this newspaper, know that you need a good servant?

—A good many of the readers of this newspaper are "probable buyers" of your property. Do they know that it's for sale?

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 28, 1916.

AFTER THURSDAY.

In giving Carranza until Thursday to answer the demand for the release of United States troopers held as prisoners, President Wilson is only sparring for time. He knows what the answer from Mexico will be. It may be another lying charge of aggression against Capt. Boyd and his troops, or it may be a defiant declaration of imaginary Mexican power to handle its own affairs, but it will mean war however it is worded. Unless Carranza abjectly apologizes for the Carrizal attack things are going to happen fast after Thursday. Mr. Wilson has about used up his stock of note paper and must resort to ammunition if he is to talk "Mexican." The only language that is understood south of the Rio Grande these days is "Colt talk." When the time limit on the American ultimatum runs out Gen. Funston will have 25,000 additional troops. They are not well trained but they are equipped for patrol duty and can be used in guarding the border so that enough men can be relieved to guarantee the safety of Pershing's line of communication. This will relieve the danger of his being cut off from his base of supplies, and will permit him to march on Gen. Trevino's prison at Chihuahua City, where the eighteen American troopers are held prisoners. And once he starts there can be no ending in Mexico until the country has been cleaned of bandits, its people taught to respect the American flag and a stable government set up.

OFF TO EL PASO.

The Plainfield troopers who left yesterday with the First New Jersey Regiment have gone into the heart of the Mexican trouble. El Paso, where they have been ordered to report to Gen. Funston for border duty, is just across the river from Jaurez. It is the center of revolutionary plots, and just now is headquarters for the American army. If a declaration of war is made against Mexico one of the first moves of the United States army will be to take Jaurez and for this the troops in El Paso will be called into duty. Their chanees for action would not be better anywhere else except with Pershing in the heart of Mexico. This is a compliment to the New Jersey troops that should be appreciated by the entire State.

* * * * * *

It is indeed strange that in these days of flag-waving, cheering for United States troops and yelling whenever Uncle Sam is mentioned a representative committee should be forced to go begging over the streets to raise $500 for a patriotic celebration commemorating the anniversary of our independence. If Plainfield people do not respond more generously to the appeal of the Fourth of July celebration committee some everlasting growlers will charge that their patriotism ends at the root of the tongue. This would not be a true statement, for Plainfield has shown in patriotism in many ways these past two weeks, but it should realize the need of a rousing celebration on the Fourth of next month and give accordingly.

* * * * * *

At least one of those who watched troop trains rushing through Plainfield yesterday with eager young boys, white-faced and tender-muscled, thought of the sacrifices that were necessary to tear these men away from home and business on such a mission. Only one week ago the call went out—one week and a day, and already they have come from offices, from factories, even from schools, and are going into the hardships and the dangers of a war on foreign soil. It took longer than this to mobilize trained, seasoned troops of the regular army on the border.

* * * * * *

It is going to be awfully hot for Caulfield, Reinhart and the rest of the boys down on the Mexican border, but they promise to make it just as hot for some people who have been in that climate all their lives.

Bryan has indorsed Wilson, Roosevelt is supporting Hughes and Villa is fighting under the flag of Carranza. May we not hope to see King Albert and the Kaiser lie down together?

JUDGE J. W. WESTCOTT WILL MAKE ADDRESS

Senator Martine is Also Invited to Speak at Independence Day Celebration.

An invitation was sent yesterday to United States Senator James E. Martine to be one of the orators for the Fourth of July celebration being planned for this city by the Public Recreation Committee. Judge John W. Westcott who nominated President Wilson at the St. Louis convention, has consented to speak on that occasion.

The celebration will be a cosmopolitan affair. The great community chorus choir under the leadership of Clifford A. Braider and the executive direction of F. T. Dickerson, is being perpetuated from the recent Biederwolf campaign for all singers. The chorus will hold a rehearsal tomorrow night.

The committee is still in need of funds, it being estimated that about $3,000 more will be required to make the celebration a complete success. It is important that this money be in hand by the end of the week. Money and checks may be sent to DeWitt Hubbell at the Plainfield Trust Company.

Fourteen years later to a day, the archduke and his wife, who bore the title of Duchess of Hohenberg, were assassinated, leaving three children.

1914—THE WAR—

Murder at Sarajevo, Bosnia, of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, and his wife, by a Serbian student, seized upon by Austria as the basis of an ultimatum to Servia and regarded as the initial event of the Great War. Austria charged Servia with official complicity in the crime. Her stern demands upon the little kingdom, made with the support of Germany, brought to a critical issue the Slav-teuton interest in the South of Europe, and by virtue of alliance France and Great Britain were brought into the conflict on the side of Russia.

Let Us Forget.

Backward, turn backward, O time in thy flight;
Let us forget, if for only a night.
The items that smear o'er the newspaper page,
The stories which tell of a strenuous age.
Let us forget the most grave foreign news,
All the magazines and the reviews,
All the telegrams and motor cars,
All the doings of old war god Mars,
All the inventions for saving time,
All the fierce scandals and later-day crime,
All the graft that is meant to ensnare,
All the graft that we find everywhere,
All the boosts that we find in the coal,
All the charges of trust food control,
All the wars and turmoil and strife.
Ah, for a taste of the old simple life
That was enjoyed in our grandaddy's day,
Let us live in the old-fashioned way.
Surely this is but a humble request;
Please, Father Time, won't you give us a rest?

Grandma Whipple has been quite poorly this spring and has not been able to do much excepting to shingle the Hardshell church, stump forty acres for Anse Frisby and run the mud scraper between times.

Ame Hilliker, our popular and congenial groceryman, also hides, tallow, lumber, lath, shingles, lime and plaster and notary public, has presented Grandma with a new cob pipe, which ought to improve the atmosphere of this section considerable.

Mr. Ren Binks, the graceful and accomplished station agent down to the railroad deppo, hung out a red light to stop No. 17 the other evening and three traveling men rushed into the deppo to buy a drink of him, thinkin' it was a drug store.

Mr. Hod Purdy, the eminent turfman, says there is a sure way to make money follerin' the horses, and that is when the horses are hitched onto the front end of a plow. Hod defines race suicide as sittin' in a low sulky behind a trottin' horse that kicks.

Mr. T. Wellington Butts has got a new gold tooth and he stands out in front of the barber shop all day in the sun and throws reflections into Miss Amy Pringle's millinery window across the street with it.

A Needed Reform.

The practice of throwing water out of the second story windows of our business houses should be stopped, says the Tywoppity correspondent of the Kansas City Star. The other day a deluge descended upon a gentleman from Kansas City who was practically on the point of purchasing property in our prosperous little burg, causing him to drop the deal and depart in considerable dudgeon.

What? Eliminate 'Em Altogether?
(Salt Lake Tribune.)

"In Joyland," a musical comedy in which Clara Belle Jerome, William Seymore and eight girls appear, is pleasing, although there is one dance in which unusually abbreviated skirts are worn that might be eliminated with advantage.

WHAT STRONG HAND IS BACKING HIM?

- Proctor's Theatre -

Robert B. Mantell, the noted tragedian and one of the most prominent stars to forsake the stage for the screen, appears today at Proctors' in a powerful Fox production entitled "The Spider and the Fly," in which he is supported by an excellent and well balanced cast including Genevieve Hamper, Stuart Holmes, Claire Whitney and Walter Miller. Mr. Mantell portrays in thoroughly convincing fashion a man ruined by drink and the wiles of a vampire, and deserves great credit for making this character of genuine sympathetic appeal, when one considers that he is forced to depict it in gruesome detail. The locale is French and the locations and sets are exceptionally good. In addition today the program includes the 18th episode of "The Iron Claw," and also several laugh provoking comedies, prominent among which is "Too Many Chefs," and "Terry's Tea Party."

Tomorrow H. B. Warner, the popular Broadway star who made such a wonderful success in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," on the stage, and has starred in such splendid Triangle plays as "The Raiders" and "The Beggar of Cawnpore," appears in an intensely interesting Thomas H. Ince production entitled "The Market of Vain Desire," dealing with the ever apparent effort of some American mothers to have their daughters marry a title. The number of American heiresses who sell themselves or are sold by scheming mothers is ever increasing. H. B. Warner in "The Market of Vain Desire," presents this subject in a vital way that will reach down and "get" you. You'll see yourself or your daughter in Clara Williams, who plays opposite Warner. In addition tomorrow a world famous Keystone comedy will be shown and there will be various other photoplays.

Among coming attractions are "Where Are My Children?" which will be presented at Proctors' on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 3, 4 and 5, and Anna Pavlowa, the internationally famous dancer who will be seen at Proctors' shortly in "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

--Astor Theatre--

Today Bluebird photoplay presents Rupert Julian in "Naked Hearts," featuring Francelia Billington, Zoe Bech and a number of others well known to the theatregoing public, as well as Mr. Julian. She was engaged to a foppish lord, whom her father had chosen for her. On the night of the engagement party she was ready to elope with the man she loved, to whom she had given her heart, and actually arrived at the trysting place, when something happened that changed the whole course of her life and led her finally behind convent walls, from which she was never to emerge. Meanwhile war had cast its shadow upon her life, time worked many changes, homes were wrecked and events that followed altered the verdict of fate so completely that what promised to become the story of happy lives and peaceful homes turn into the deepest tragedy.

What is said to be a particularly forceful melodrama is the five-part Kleine production, "Bondwomen," released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, and will be shown here tomorrow. In "Bondwomen" the plot deals with the problem as to whether the husband ought to assume a guardianship over the household affairs and expenses, or ought to delegate that responsibility to the wife. Dr. Ellis insisted upon holding the purse strings in his household, much to the embarrassment and chagrin of his wife, who insisted that he was not doing his professional career justice in permitting of domestic affairs to occupy so much of his time. Maude Fealy, in the titular role in "Bondwomen," rises to great dramatic heights, interpreting her "lines" in masterly fashion. Not only is she flawless in work, but may be considered as brilliant. She is supported by a company of unusual excellence. In addition to this wonderful photoplay we will show the fourth episode of "Gloria's Romance," featuring Billie Burke, the ever popular star. Follow the crowds to the Astor Theatre, where the cool breezes blow at all times, no dampness of any sort, but cool and invigorating air, and a comfortable seat to see the best photoplays in town.

Swimming—Every boy likes to swim. Arrangements are being completed to allow the campers the use of a big lake to learn to swim. Every precaution will be observed. The camp director has both the life saving and swimming merit badge and in addition has passed the American Red Cross life saving test before Commodore Longfellow, the author of Life Saving in the Boy Scout Handbook. An opportunity will be offered for boys to learn to swim under safe conditions and for swimmers to pass the life saving and swimming tests for merit badges. No precaution will be neglected to insure safety while in and around the water. No one will be allowed in the water except at stated times and in the presence of the director.

The money must accompany the application. Address, A. V. Searing, Jr., 127 West Second street, Plainfield, N. J.

Action was taken at the final session of the New Jersey Pharmaceutical Association held Saturday toward making a college diploma a prerequisite to appearing before the State Board of Pharmacy for examination. BOYS IN MEXICO CRY FOR MAGAZINES

Y. M. C. A. Will Receive Them Here and Distribute Among U. S. Troops.

The following extract from a secretary's letter written from "Somewhere in Mexico," has been received at the local Y. M. C. A. with an appeal for al old magazines obtainable to be sent to the troops in Mexico. It is a fact that while a soldier at an established army post thoughtlessly reads the current literature provided for him, his comrade in arms with the army in Mexico looks upon an old magazine as a veritable Godsend.

All contributions of this sort may be sent to the local Y. M. C. A. building, on East Front street, from which point they will be shipped to the Army and Navy Department of the International Committee, and then forwarded to the troops in Mexico.

Extract from Secretary's letter written "Somewhere in Mexico:"

"This is my third day from Columbus and the dust is so thick that you cannot see twenty feet in front while on the ride. I have visited to date three encampments and everywhere there is a cry for reading matter. All along the line I was met with open arms, it being the first time in two months that there had been reading matter or stationery available. The reading matter and stationery which we have supplied will be big factors in keeping the boys in touch with the outside world and counteract very materially the feeling of disgust and discontent that is evident among the men with whom I have talked."

ORGANIZE PLAN FOR AID

Already Plainfield has sent a Ford motor truck to Troop D, and many other things might be bought for the "boys" if the money was available.

Mayor Calkins was elected chairman of last night's meeting to serve until a permanent organization is effected. He will name a steering committee, the duty of which will be to choose officers. As soon as this work is done a public mass meeting will be called when the officers will be ratified. R. S. Rowland was elected temporary secretary.

The Laugh That Failed.

"Laugh, and the world laughs with you," quoted the humorist with the unbarbered hair, as he handed the editor an alleged joke of the Joe Miller vintage.

"Yes," replied the editor. Then, after glancing over it, he handed it back with the comment, "But this is no laughing matter, I'm sorry to say."

Whereupon the man of humor, with head bowed down, wandered slowly hence into the unexplored hither.—Indianapolis Star.

TREACHERY MARKS CAPTAIN TELLS

Morey, Wounded, Thought First of His Duty and Expended His Last Strength in Writing Full Report to Superior.

WOUNDED and he believed dying beneath the blazing sun of the Mexican desert, his command scattered and no relief within fifty miles, the one thought of Captain Lewis S. Morey of Troop K, Tenth United States cavalry, was of his duty.

Shot through the shoulder in the one sided battle of Carrizal, Captain Morey devoted all his energies to writing a report of the action which should tell General Pershing of the fate that had overtaken the scouting party and intrusted it to three unwounded troopers who were with him.

Text of Morey's Letter.

Captain Morey's letter follows:

To Commanding Officer at Ojo Frederico—My troop reached Ojo Santo Domingo at 5:30 p. m., June 20. Met C troop under Captain Boyd. I came under Captain Boyd's command and marched my troop in rear for Carrizal at 4:15 a. m., reaching open field to southeast of town at 6:20 a. m.

Captain Boyd sent in a note requesting permission to pass through the town. This was refused; stated we could go to the north, but not east. Captain Boyd said he was going to Ahumada at this time.

He was talking with Carranza commander. General Gomez sent a written message that Captain Boyd could bring his force in town and have a conference. Captain Boyd feared an ambush. He was under the impression that the Mexicans would run as soon as we fired.

We formed for attack, his intention being to move up to the line of about 120 Mexicans on the edge of the town. We formed, C troop on the left in line of skirmishers, one platoon of K troop on right of line and another K troop platoon on extreme right, echeloned a little to the rear.

When we were within 300 yards the Mexicans opened fire, and a strong one, before we fired a shot. Then we opened up. They did not run. To make a long account short, after about an hour's fire, in which both troops had advanced, C troop to position of Mexican machine gun and K troop closing in slightly to the left, we were very busy on the right keeping off a flank attack. A group of Mexicans left town, went around our rear and led our horses off at a gallop.

At about 9 o'clock one platoon of K troop, which was on our right, fell back. Sergeant said he could not stay there. Both platoons fell back about 1,000 yards to the west, and then, together with some men of C troop who were there, these men scattered.

I was slightly wounded. Captain Boyd, a man told me, was killed.

I am hiding in a hole 2,000 yards from field and have one other wounded man and three men with me. MOREY, Captain.

DEAD AMERICAN AIR MAN HAILED AS HERO BY FRENCH

"Bravest of Fliers," Papers Say of Chapman—His Devotion to Cause.

The French papers all published sympathetic notices regarding the death of Victor Chapman, the American aviator who was killed in an aerial battle with two German aviators. The papers point out that it was by Chapman's heroism that his comrades were able safely to return to the French lines.

Kiffin Rockwell, a fellow student in the aviation school and Chapman's roommate at the front, writes:

"I was on guard duty, so did not go out when Captain Thenault, Norman Prince, Lufbry and Chapman went reconnoitering over the German lines, where they attacked five Germans. The first three returned, and we were beginning to get anxious about Victor when a pilot telephoned that he was present during the fight and saw one machine suddenly dive straight down and then break to pieces in the air, as if its cables had been severed by bullets.

"Unquestionably Victor had more nerve than all of us put together. We often begged him to be more prudent. He would engage every German he saw, regardless of the conditions and odds. I am sure he was wounded, if not killed, in the air. Several saw him right atop a German shooting at him, but always within the German line.

"There is so much fighting here it is impossible always to tell when a machine is brought down. Victor's wound in the head was not healed, but he insisted upon flying and refused to rest. Since going to the Verdun front he had been twice recommended for citation in the army orders and for the military medal."

MEXICAN WARS; OF CARRIZAL FIGHT

Alamo Disaster Recalled. How 200 Americans, Refusing to Surrender, Were Killed by Army of 5,000 Mexicans.

JUST as treachery marked the fighting in Mexico in the recent encounter, it marked it in all previous wars. The Mexicans seem a treacherous lot; they like to take advantage of the weakness of the enemy. In this connection it is interesting to recall the fight at the Alamo.

Since 1822, when Mexico threw off the yoke of Spain, the few American colonists in Texas had endured much at the hands of the new government. A climax was reached when Santa Anna seized Mexico City, overthrew the Constitutionalists and made himself dictator. He was the particular enemy of the Americans and ordered the arrest of some of the most prominent among them. This brought about clashes between them and the Mexican soldiers. Friends came from Missouri and Louisiana to help, until finally they organized a little army and, with Ben Milam at their head, marched upon San Antonio. After a stubborn house to house fight they took the town on Dec. 7, 1835.

Here they were joined by Davy Crockett and others, and here they awaited the coming of the enraged dictator, fortifying themselves as best they might in the old mission church and its outbuildings.

Attacked by 5,000 Mexicans.

When Santa Anna arrived at the head of his 5,000 men he summoned the 200 Americans shut up in the Alamo to surrender. Their only reply was a shot from the cannon that William Travis commanded. The Mexicans immediately laid siege to the old church and for ten days pressed it with vigor. Its defenders, hopelessly outnumbered and with no chance of re-enforcement, prepared to fight to the death. On March 6, to the sound of the "Deguillo" (No quarter), the Mexicans advanced for the final assault.

Their ammunition exhausted, but fighting with clubbed muskets or anything else that they could find, the heroic band of Americans fought on until, little by little, they were killed to a man, Travis athwart his cannon, Crockett upon a heap of Mexican soldiers in front of the main church door, Bowie, sick upon his cot, defending himself with his famous knife. So "Remember the Alamo" became the watchword of Texas freedom.

CIVILIAN SAILORS WILL HAVE AN EASY TIME

Practice Cruise Will Not Include Shoveling Coal and Rough Work.

In view of the fact that the men who are enrolling for the civilian naval training cruise this summer are invariably men of brains and above the ordinary average of intelligence, it has been thought useless to inflict on them the menial duties of a sailor which any untrained man can perform.

"It would be silly," said Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, "to take up the four weeks those men are on shipboard in teaching them how to shovel coal, for instance. We expect the men who go on this cruise will nearly all be capable of some day being petty or commissioned officers, and it would be a waste of time to set them to washing dishes or doing similar labor."

Generally speaking, it is intended to organize, mess, berth, etc., these volunteer men after the methods employed with the midshipmen on practice cruises and get them into the habits of ship life as far as seems necessary; also to drill and instruct them at the lighter guns of the ship batteries as well as in signaling, boating of all kinds, fire control and torpedo defense stations, quartermaster's duties and marine electrical engineering, including radio work.

It is also intended to have frequent emergency drills, such as fire quarters, general quarters, and to have sufficient field artillery and naval drills on shore to give them a rudimentary knowledge of the handling of arms.

An effort will be made to have naval officers of long experience deliver talks to the volunteers on subjects bearing upon the navy's work during the period between Aug. 29 and Sept. 5.

The whole idea of the cruise is not to inflict hardship upon the recruits, but to make it as interesting to them as possible. To that end the navy department has decided to cut down the number allowed on the different ships so that there will be no overcrowding or discomfort in the way of hammock room or delay in serving food. While the regular crew of the ships will be only 40 per cent of sailors, the commissary department, including the cooks, messmen, etc., will be 100 per cent civilians. This will insure good cooking and quick service.

It was at first thought that 4,000 men could be taken on the nine ships but that would make an average of nearly 500 men to a ship, which would result in severe crowding. The department has now decided to limit the entire number taken to 2,500, and certainly not over 3,000.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Tale of A Flying Trunk.

With a Whiz It Flew Right Up.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WHEN time for the bedtime story came daddy told Jack and Evelyn this: "There was once a merchant who was so rich that he might have paved his whole street with silver coins. But he knew better than to waste good money like that. He was so clever that every time he spent a penny he got a dollar in return, and then he died.

"His son got all his money and spent it having a merry time. He went to a masquerade ball every night, made kites of bank notes and played ducks and drakes with gold coins instead of stones. Soon all the money was spent. He had nothing but one penny left and no clothes except an old dressing gown and a pair of slippers. His merry friends no longer cared for him and passed him by in the streets. But one kindly sent him an old trunk with the message, 'Pack up.'

"Now, this was not very good advice for a young man who had nothing left to pack. Having nothing to put in the trunk, he got in himself. It was the funniest kind of a trunk. If you pressed the lock it could fly. And this is just what happened. Getting in, the young man accidentally hit the lock with his knee, and with a whiz it flew right up the chimney, high above the clouds.

"The bottom of the trunk creaked terribly, and the young man was afraid that it would go to pieces. A nice fall he would have had from the clouds! But the old trunk held together and went whizzing through the sky like a huge bird till at last it came to the country of the Turks. Little by little it came to earth, and finally the young man jumped out and hid his funny old trunk under some dead leaves. Then he walked into the town. He could easily do this, you see, Jack, because all Turks wear dressing gowns and slippers. Soon he met a Turkish nurse with a funny little brown Turkish baby. 'I say, nurse,' the young man spoke to her, 'what is that big palace close to the town where all the windows are so high up?'

"'That's where the king's daughter lives,' said the Turkish nurse. 'It has been prophesied that she will be made very unhappy by a lover, so the king and queen never allow any one to visit her unless they go too.'

"'Thank you,' said the merchant's son. Then he went back to the wood and uncovered his funny old trunk, got in it, pressed the lock with his knee and flew right on to the roof of the palace. From the roof he crept right into the princess' window."

"Oh, daddy, was the princess afraid?" asked Evelyn.

"My dear, that's another story!" cried daddy, kissing her good night.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Does Not Know That Her Headlong Extravagance Explains Ralph's Longer Working Hours.

"You are not going away again tonight, are you?" asked Ethel Gordon as Ralph took his hat after dinner and started for the door.

"Yes, I have some work to do at the office," said Ralph, trying to speak frankly. He was naturally so fair and open that the fact that he was keeping something from his wife made him feel and act guilty. He had been asked to do some outside work, and had eagerly grasped the opportunity to earn some extra money. It was work that could have been done just as well at home, but after thinking the matter over carefully he had decided not to tell Ethel anything about it. For he reasoned if she knew about it, the money would go as all the rest did and he determined to save at least this extra sum and have it to fall back on in an emergency.

"It is very queer that you have to work three evenings in one week," complained Ethel. "As if it was not bad enough to live in this dead little hole, I must spend my evenings alone besides."

"Oh, this is only a temporary thing," explained Ralph, patting her shoulders.

"I should think if the firm is so dreadfully in need of your services they might pay you enough to live on." Her husband tried to draw her to him, but she pulled away petulantly. "I suppose I should be used to being alone, for you retire into your paper or book and are utterly oblivious to my presence most of the time anyway, but it is a little more tolerable to know that there is someone to speak to, if a great occasion should arise. At least I can see you."

"Oh, come, girlie, you have red in your paint brush tonight for sure," chaffed Ralph, trying to restore her to good nature. It was of no use; she persisted in her angry gloom.

"Don't you want me to take you over to Mrs. Morton's to stay till I call for you?" he asked, after a pause.

"No, they want to be together, alone in their home. He loves his wife and does not trump up excuses to leave her alone," replied Ethel bitterly.

"Ethel, why do you say such things to me?" Ralph turned on her fiercely. "You know your insinuations are utterly false." He did not urge her to go to the neighbor's, however, for it occurred to him that it might be awkward to explain to the junior partner just why it was necessary for him to leave home to do this work.

"Well, I will run along and so be able to get home the sooner, and you may be sure I shall get here at the earliest possible moment," continued Ralph after an uncomfortable silence. He stooped to kiss his wife good-bye, but she turned her face away with a hateful gesture. Ralph swung out of the door full of fierce wrath.

"If it does not beat the world!" he thought. "Everything I try to do is hindered. I am like a swimmer trying to save someone who weighs him down. She clings around my neck and hampers me so that we shall both go down. Why will she make it so hard for me, for herself as well? If she would only see, but she will not."

Ethel meanwhile was dissolved in tears of self pity.

"Oh, I might be having a lovely time in dear old Milwaukee now, instead of moping here alone. I simply hate this dead little town, and Ralph is so cross, so indifferent. To think that I of all people should have this dreadful fate." She wept several large tears into her cobweb of a handkerchief. It disfigures one to cry long.

THE BENCHING OF JACK MARTIN.

The announcement that Jack Martin has been benched by the manager of the Milwaukee baseball team came as a surprise to the local lad's many friends. And the fact that the head of the Brewers has given no reason for his action makes the situation all the more unusual. There are few shortstops who can handle the ball to any better advantage than Jack can, but, it has to be admitted, that there are quite a few shortstops who can outhit the local boy. However, Davy Bancroft and Ray Corhan are not listed among those who have anything on Jack and any talk of his replacing either of these two can be regarded with some credence. While it does seem improbable that Miller Huggins is looking for Martin, the fact remains that St. Louis could use him. Hornsby, the "Saints" second-sacker, is a fast man and would find Jack a helpful mate. Take it from us, Jack Martin will not remain long idle nor will he consent to any bench-warming stunt.

HENRY WINTER SHOULD MAKE GOOD "UMP."

At the City League meeting on Saturday night, Henry Winters was made an umpire and will get his first chance to act in that capacity on July 4, inasmuch as Umpire Coriell has asked for a short vacation. Winters will make a good umpire as he possesses a complete knowledge of the game, having been a player himself up until his recent release by the Tabs.

SUNDAY BASEBALL AT AVON OVAL.

While baseball, now, is not what it used to be in this city, interest in Sunday pastiming at Avon Oval has increased to a great extent. Jim Scott, manager of the Tabs, who play at the Oval on Sundays, has arranged a good schedule and has been bringing some good teams to this city. As long as the fans continue to appreciate Jim's efforts to give them some good Sunday amusement, the high standard of attraction will be maintained.

JUNIOR "MET" CHAMPIONSHIP.

Now a well established fixture, the fifth junior championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association which started yesterday at Englewood, will attract its share of attention, even though its dates conflict with the pretentious national open championship at Minneapolis and the Connecticut amateur championship at Greenwich. The junior title affair will lose some of its importance by the absence of Philip Carter, who won the event the last three times, and Reginald M. Lewis, runner-up last year, both of whom are now over the age limit of twenty years.

ATLANTIC LEAGUE THROUGH.

Heroic attempts to bring the Atlantic League back to life have failed, it seems. About a week ago Pottsville and Wilmington quit. Monday night Paterson decided it had lost enough money. Paterson has had seven rainy Sundays and six rainy Saturdays. This leaves only three teams, Reading, Allentown and Phillipsburg-Easton. In all probability some of the teams will try to keep together and travel as semi-professional organizations. The Atlantic is one of the first of the Eastern minor circuits to go out of business. Those who have been watching a number of other circuits predict they won't last the season out, unless there is a marked change in the weather and a sudden development of enthusiasm.

REJUVENATION OF ST. JOSEPH'S.

Now that Francis McDonough and his brother Andy have brought about that long sought reorganization of the St. Joseph baseball team, borough fans will have something to talk about. At the helm of the North Plainfield club is one who knows his business and for field general the team has a promising lad, whose duty it will be to lead the North Plainfield High School diamond artists to victory next year. Success to the "Saints."

EDDIE CONSHAY'S COME-BACK.

Eddie Conshay certainly did pitch a splendid game of baseball Saturday. There were many fans at the game who were quite certain that Eddie was all through as a pitcher. The Tabs, perhaps, think they have a quartet of easy battles with the Farmers ahead of them but such is not the case—not if Edward Conshay pitches.

MRS. L. C. STOCKTON MAKES LOW GROSS SCORE IN PLAY

Mrs. L. C. Stockton, of this city, made a low gross score of 91 at the Essex County Country Club links yesterday in a medal play golf handicap for women. For the net prize there was a tie between Mrs. S. A. Herzog, of Fairview, with 93—5—88, and Mrs. E. C. Koempel, of Glen Ridge, with 95—7—88. Mrs. Albert Mac Donald, also of this city, won the putting competition.

The women wil hold their next one day tournament at Hackensack on July 6.

CLIFTONS, OF NEWARK, PLAY HERE SUNDAY

Crack Essex Aggregation Will Meet Local T. A. B. S. on Avon Oval.

Jim Scott, manager of the T. A. B. S. baseball team has secured an excellent attraction for this Sunday. He will lead his charges against the Clifton A. A., of Newark, on Avon Oval this week and as the Cliftons are highly regarded in and around Newark, the contest should be an unusually interesting one.

According to the Abstainers' press agent, Manager Scott intends putting a strong team on the field, and although no definite changes in the lineup have been announced it is thought that several are contemplated. In the "prelim" the East and West End Tabs will do battle. These lads are under the respective leadership of Alexander McDonald and Michael Montferrant. It is thought that Jupiter Pluvius will be kind enough to withhold his weeping until this "East vs. West" series gets started.

BALTIMORE 'PRO' LEADS IN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

"Alex" Campbell Shows Way in First Half of Field in West.

"Alex" Campbell, of Baltimore, with a score of 144 for the thirty-six holes, was the low man in the first day's qualifying play in the national open air golf championship at the Minnehaha Club links yesterday. He beat out Louis Teller, of Brookline, Mass., formerly French champion, by making the thirty-fifth hole in 2 and the last in 4. Campbell's play was steady throughout the day. Twenty of the thirty-six holes were made in 4's. Only once did he rise to a 6.

Teller also gave an excellent exhibition of consistent work making twenty-three holes in 4 each, but he got into trouble at the twenty-second and thirtieth holes, requiring 6 strokes for each. His total for the day was 145.

J. S. Worthington, an amateur, of Mid Surrey, England, with 146, seemed for a time in a fair way to finish the lower scorer of the day. He ended the morning round with 71, rising to 75 in the afternoon.

"Jack" Hutchinson, of Allegheny County Club, Pittsburgh, and H. C. Legg, an amateur and member of the Minikahda Club, tied for fourth honors with totals of 147.

Walter Hagen, who was national open air champion two years ago, was in the 149 class with James Ferguson, Spring Lake; "Fred" McLeod, Columbia, and "Jack" Dowling of Scarsdale.

Those who scored 161 or better constituted the thirty-two who qualified for the decisive competition of Thursday and Friday.

The second half of the field will qualify tomorrow.

NIGHT TENNIS PLAYING AT COUNTRY CLUB

In the finals of the women's handicap doubles played at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday, Mrs. D. H. Barrows and Miss Marion Brown defeated Mrs. M. J. Dumont and Miss E. Beers, the scores being 10 to 8 and 6 to 2. There will be a team match on the courts of the local club today, the visiting team being from Westfield.

The work of equipping one of the tennis courts of the club with electric lighting for day and night play has been completed and it is expected that the court will be ready for use beginning June 27. Plans are being made to celebrate July 4 by staging some exhibiton matches on this lighted court. This will be the formal opening of the night season.

EDNA WILDEY SETS RECORD FOR TOURNEY

Local Woman Takes Twelve Straight From Miss Florence Sheldon.

Although there was nothing in the opening of the women's invitation tournament on the Sleepy Hollow Country Club courts yesterday that could be called an upset, there was a good deal of surprise about the ease with which the favorites disposed of strong opponents. Miss Edna Wildey, of this city, for instance, took twelve straight games from Miss Florence Sheldon, who was expected to extend the winner all the way; Miss Marie Wagner dropped only two games to Mrs. Albert Humphries and Mrs. H. Stuart Green only one to Miss Caroma Winn. In each case the matches were much closer than the one-sided scores suggest, the losers forcing many games to deuce.

A field of thirty-four was reduced to eight survivors, play being fast all afternoon. Among those to advance with Miss Wagner, Mrs. Green and Miss Wildey was Miss Ina Kissel, winner of the Middle States championship tournament, who is now awaiting a challenge round match with Miss Bjurstein.

Miss Wildey also won by default.

ROYAL GIANTS WILL PLAY MULLIN BOYS

Game Will Be Staged on Parker Field This Saturday Afternoon.

Vincent Mullin's Plainfield A. A. will meet the Plainfield Colored Giants, proteges of William "Midge" Kline, on Parker Field this Saturday. This game will be the first one indulged in by the Giants and, consequently, Manager Kline will do his best to get off to a creditable start. Of course, Manager Mullins is just as anxious to annex a victory and the ambition of the two is sure to produce keen rivalry and an exciting contest.

While neither manager has announced his lineup, there is every reason to believe that no "padding up" will be done. Kline claims to have a crack team, which, by the way, has not taken to the road as yet, but it is not thought that he takes the A. A. club seriously enough to warrant the use of the stars he claims to have hitched up to contracts. It is very probable that he will use Sidney Butler on the mound, with "Senor" Maiden, "Tunk" Kline, Barnes, Johnson, Coleman, Hall and others in the lineup. Mullin has made no definite announcement as to whom he will use but it is thought that Rice and Stites will compose his battery. The rest of the club's lineup will remain intact.

One week from this Sunday the Plainfield A. A. will play a team in South Plainfield.

JOHN P. STEVENS PLAYS AT ENGLEWOOD CLUB

Large Entry List in Junior Metropolitan Golf Championship.

Considering the amount of budding golfing talent that was disclosed in the Pater et Filius tournament at Sleepy Hollow, it would have been surprising if something in the nature of a record had not been established yesterday at Englewood Country Club in the annual junior championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association. Vincent K. Hilton, of the Greenwich Country Club, was the youth on whom interest centered. Hilton played excellently and in the medal round had the easiest kind of a victory, returning a card of 78. This left him eight strokes ahead of Harry Scharff, of the New York Golf Club, who finished in second place.

In the qualifying round, championship division, John P. Stevens, Jr., of this city, 43—51—94.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Attention—This department, which will be conducted daily, will contain comments relative to the work of each of the City League baseball teams, it being our purpose to devote one day a week to each of the six teams, and to have, from time to time, some member of each team contribute his views in the form of snappy notes. All independent teams will be taken care of by this department and will receive their share of publicity.

Lou Slocum is one of the best flingers in this city and it has been largely through his efforts that the Netherwood club has attained the first position in the league standing. Lou has been ably assisted by Russ Stewart.

Behind the bat, the East Enders have a "find" in Johnson, a former Bound Brook Bee. Johnson has a perfect throw to the bags and can hit the ball heavily and opportunely. In the event of the absence of Johnson, Bill Dodd handles the catching assignment and tends to the job in a creditable manner.

The Coughlan brothers, besides being the engineers of the Netherwood system, are both classy baseball artists. Eddie, formerly a member of the Bound Brook Bees, is a careful guardian of the difficult station and can hit the pill to all corners of the lot. Matty, while not the slugger that his brother is, can be ranked with the best of utility men and regular outfielders.

Venezia, another Bound Brook product—it appears that they all are—is a player upon whom Manager Johnny Coughlan can well depend. Venezia is a regular Frank Baker with the willow, and has been a tower of strength to the East End clan. In the outfield the B. B. lad has handled many difficult chances.

Haberman and Smith, the latter a new man and the former an outfielder, can be expected to do their share toward elevating the team with which they have cast their lot.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

CARRANZA RELEASES TROOPERS BUT DEMANDS THAT U. S. ARMY BE ORDERED TO LEAVE MEXICO

SIX MORE AMERICANS ARRESTED BY HIS SOLDIERS YESTERDAY—THEY ARE ACCUSED OF BEING SPIES.

MEXICANS ANGRY OVER LATEST MOVE OF CHIEF

Special Train for Men on Way Back to Headquarters in El Paso—Mormon Scout Insists Capt. Boyd Was to Blame—Mediation Will Probably Result From Granting of Demand of Wilson, Although Preparations Still Continue.

El Paso, Texas, June 29.—The twenty-three prisoners captured by Mexicans in the fight at Carrizal have been released by Carranza and are on their way here. Official notice of their leaving Chihuahua early this morning has been received by Gen. Funston. They are traveling on a special train under heavy guard to prevent attack from Mexicans who resent the latest act of the first chief of the de facto government.

Carranza ordered Gen. Trevino to release the prisoners in order to prove to the United States that he was willing to meet the American government half way, according to an official explanation, but at the same time he is writing a note to President Wilson in which he demands that American troops be withdrawn from Mexican soil at once.

Mediation will probably come out of the release of the prisoners. Whether it will result in a peaceful settlement of the situation cannot be told, but demands made by the U. S. in the ultimatum of last Saturday are met in the release of the prisoners and until a fresh cause for hostilities is given the armies will rest on their arms. Meantime preparations for hostilities are not to cease. Militiamen will be rushed to the border as fast as possible so that the work of guarding U. S. soil can be turned over to State troops in case a hostile invasion of Mexico is made necessary at a later date.

Six American citizens were arrested at Gonzales Junction yesterday, according to advices received here from Mexico City. They are in the custody of Carranza soldiers and are charged with being spies. They will be taken to Mexico City.

American border patrols have been strengthened and El Paso today is an armed camp, the army officers believing that the news of Carranza's backdown to the American Government will be followed by a mutiny in his army, and that many of his subordinate soldiers, in their rage, will make an unprovoked attack upon Americans. Gen. Gonzales, in Juarez, has taken steps to prevent any uprising there.

Dispatches from Chihuahua City said the American prisoners were kindly treated and were under heavy guard to prevent attack by Mexicans.

The news that they are to be freed was telegraphed here to Consul Garcia by Gen. Jacinto Trevino, who was quoted only yesterday as saying that if the Americans wanted the prisoners "they would come and get them." Trevino announced that he acted under direct orders from Gen. Carranza.

"It is plain," said Garcia, "that the American Government will not contend its commander at Carrizal was blameless. Therefore my Government is willing to meet the American Government half way." All people should work for peace. War would be hell on earth while it lasted—and it would last a long time.

"The Americans would face a united people who would fight to the end. We have 200,000 men trained to a style of warfare that makes the best use of our peculiar natural conditions. The Americans would encounter heavy losses.

Scout Blames Americans.

Mexico City, June 29.—Publicity is given here today to the story of the Carrizal fight as told to Gen. Trevino by Lem Spillsbury, the interpreter for Gen. Pershing who was captured. Spillsbury was quoted as saying, in part:

"I left Casas Grandes Sunday morning as interpreter for Capt. Boyd. There were seventy-six men of the Tenth Cavalry. Capt. Boyd sent a messenger into Carrizal, stating that he was on a peaceful mission and requested the authorities to allow him and his forces to pass through to Villa Ahumada.

"Gen. Felix Gomez sent Lieut. Col. Rivas, with eighty men, to inform us that he had been instructed to check our advance until received further orders.

"Capt. Boyd's answer was that he had been sent to pursue a gang of outlaws who had committed a robbery at San Domingo. He also alleged he was pursuing a soldier who had deserted. Lieut. Col. Rivas replied there were no bandits and that in order to pass the American troops would have to fight their way through.

"After further talk, Rivas returned to town and Gen. Gemoz sent a note to the Americans, asking them to come into town to confer with him. Boyd did not follow this request, and Gomez repeated the order that American forces would not be allowed to move from their former positions, according to Gen. Trevino's instructions."

THREAT OF SUIT IN JOINT SEWER WORK

Contractors on Trunk Refuse Offer of $8,000 for Extra Work Done.

At last night's meeting of the joint sewer commission of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen, Councilman Hylan reported that the Caldwell-Wingate Company had refused to accept the offer of $8,000 for extra work and delays on the trunk sewer contract. He told of a meeting held at which attorney for the commission and for the contractors were present with Mr. Hylan.

The commission attorney is confident that an appeal to the court would not be effective, while the attorney for the contractors is equally positive that a suit would result in a verdict against the board for a larger amount than that offered. His objection to the proposal of the commission is that to sign the agreement proffered would tie the hands of the contractors so that in an emergency which might arise they would lose everything.

Mr. Hylan reported that there was merit to both sides of the controversy and he recommended that the commission take the matter under advisement for one month in order to prevent costly litigation if it is possible. This was done. The board approved bills amounting to $13,479.36.

DEATH OF NOTED RAILROAD EXPERT

Joseph O. Osgood, of the Borough, Succumbs to Attack of Heart Trouble.

HAD HONORED CAREER

For Sixteen Years He Was Chief Engineer for the New Jersey Central—Funeral at All Souls' Church Tomorrow Afternoon at 2:30.

The funeral of Joseph Otis Osgood, of Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, whose sudden death occurred in the Broad Street Station of the New Jersey Central at Newark yesterday afternoon, will be held at All Souls' Unitarian church on Park avenue, at 2:30 o'clock tomorow afternoon. The interment will be at Milton, Mass., and will be private at the convenience of the family.

Mr. Osgood was stricken with heart trouble shortly after leaving a session of the New Jersey State Public Utilities Commission, where he attended a grade crossing hearing. He had complained of feeling ill before leaving the hearing, but walked to the Broad Street Station intending to return to his offices in New York. He was ascending the steps to the terminal tracks when he fell into the arms of A. E. Owens, his first assistant in the New Jersey Central's engineering department, and passed away before a physician could be summoned. The body was removed to the family residence at 17 Myrtle avenue, later in the afternoon.

Mr. Osgood, who for sixteen years had been chief engineer of the New Jersey Central, was born at Cohasset, Mass., sixty-seven years ago. He was the son of a Unitarian minister and the eldest of nine children. He was a student at the Boston Institute of Technology, leaving there to take up railroad engineering. He held various positions with eastern railroads and then took a position as chief engineer for the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern division of the New York Central. He then lived in Cleveland, Ohio. He resigned in 1889 to take a position as consulting engineer for Kountze Brothers, New York. He then removed to this city. In 1900 he was made chief engineer of the New Jersey Central.

During his service with the company he planned and directed the building of its new terminal and slips in New York and Jersey City and the many improvements along the main line and branches, the building of thirteen new bridges in this vicinity, the reconstruction of the big "lift" bridge over the Newark Bay and for some time had been working on plans for a new steel and concrete bridge over the Newark Bay to parallel the present structure as well as plans for the new terminal station at Newark.

Mr. Osgood was always interested in local affairs, although he never engaged in politics. He served on several commissions, notably the one to investigate water conditions in Plainfield. He was a member and official of All Souls' Unitarian church. For three years he was a director of the American Society of Civil Engineers, an honor conferred only on those whose ability is unquestioned.

There survives a wife, one son, Joseph O. Osgood, Jr., three daughters, Mrs. Stephen Haff, the Misses Ellen and Laura Osgood, all of North Plainfield. There is also an adopted son, Joseph Osgood Sewall, who is a member of Troop D, First Squadron, Cavalry.

The couple left for a wedding trip and on their return will reside at 315 Netherwood avenue. The wedding was quiet because of a recent death in the family of the groom.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL.

Freedom Commandery, Knights of the Golden Eagle, held a strawberry festival on the spacious lawn at 24 Grandview avenue last evening. The affair was well attended and the many present enjoyed musical selections played on a victrola.

TEN TROOP D GUARDSMEN REFUSE TO TAKE SOLEMN OATH BINDING THEM TO FEDERAL WAR SERVICE

SOME BALKED BECAUSE OF GOOD REASONS WHILE OTHERS DEVELOPED CONSPICUOUS CASES OF "COLD FEET" WHEN TIME CAME.

CAPTAIN DELIVERS IMPRESSIVE TALK TO MEN

Plainfielders Are Now Under Government Orders Preparing for Move to Mexican Border Saturday Morning—Relatives Flock to Camp to Bid a Fond Farewell to Loved Ones—Oath Taking a Solemn Event.

MOBILIZATION CAMP, SEA GIRT, Thursday Afternoon—Eighty-two Troop D guardsmen lined up before Captain Albert Borden here at sunset yesterday afternoon to hear the solemn oath binding them to Federal army service. Prior to the administration of the pledge Captain Borden impressed on his men the seriousness of the act and urged each to consider it thoughtfully and carefully as read. The oath follows:

"I do hereby acknowledge to have voluntarily enlisted on this 28th day of June, 1916, as a soldier in the National Guard of the United States and of the State of New Jersey, for the period of three years in service and three years in the reserve, under the conditions prescribed by law, unless sooner discharged by proper authority. And I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America and to the State of New Jersey, and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever, and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and of the Governor of the State of New Jersey, and of the officers appointed over me according to law and the rules and articles of war. This oath is subscribed with the understanding that credit will be given in the execution of this contract for the period which I have already served under my current enlistment in the Organized Militia of the State of New Jersey."

The captain then alluded to the discussion that has been going the rounds since the men opened camp here relatives to the terms and merits of the oath and called upon those who did not desire to become a part of the Federal National Guard to pace two steps back from the line of formation. Eleven responded, some of the men afterwards proving that family matters and other conflicting circumstances had prompted them to resign themselves from service. The number also included recruits and veteran members of the troop who had developed plain everyday cases of "chilled feet." On man later changed his mind and took the oath this morning. The ten remaining will be sent to their home here this afternoon.

The physical tests reduced the troop quota to a still smaller number, but every man eliminated because of physical defects was noticeably saddened and fellow troopers spent a portion of this morning endeavoring to console these individuals. This particular group had firmly made up its mind to support Uncle Sam at the border and when rejected they were downcast and sick at heart. Among them was Edward W. Jeffcott, of 325 Franklin place, Plainfield, the only man who has suffered an injury since camp was opened. He was thrown from his horse and sustained a severe injury to his knee, this defect proving sufficient to bar him from service. J. Rex Shoemaker was singled out because of an injured hip but he is taking desperate steps to get in condition for a second examination and still holds out hope of being accepted. Edward W. Feickert was barred because of defective eyes; as was also William P. Smith. Jacob Van Deventer and Lucius T. Koons were found to have weak hearts. A. W. Ransome has been suffering from stomach trouble for several days and was advised not to take the tests. He is trying to condition himself physically for examination later and may be among those accepted at the last minute.

After the men had been sworn in Captain Borden delivered a short, impressive and instructive lecture to his men. He declared that the men were now full-fledged government servants, under orders from the United States government. He urged the men to bear in mind that henceforth no favoritism would be shown and every command must be lived up to to the letter. Captain Borden dwelled briefly on the matter of saluting fellow troopers and officers, telling the men that this bit of militarism was a thing that would come naturally to enlisted men and a thing to be proud of wherever executed.

Today at the camp the men seemed to be inspired with a new sense of duty. They have been brought to feel that they are now qualified servants of the government and a sense of patriotism and duty flows through every vein. All are anxious to entrain for the border and the officers and troopers are busily engaged this afternoon in putting on the finishing touches of "preparedness." The men remaining in Troop D, of Plainfield, and Troop B, of Red Bank, are an unusually fine appearing detachment and the petty squabbling over the terms of the oath and Uncle Sam's requirements for service, that have been so much in evidence recently, has entirely vanished.

Visitors began to flock to the camp in large numbers this afternoon and it is expected that a record throng will be entertained tomorrow. Relatives and friends of those who have qualified flooded the camp with messages today and the troopers are eagerly anticipating the arrival of loved ones to bid a fond "au revoir." The troopers all balk at the word "goodbye." They balk at using the significant word and admonish those who employ it.

CHURCH SUPPER A SUCCESS.

The supper given under the auspices of the women of St. Patrick's church last night in the parish hall proved to be more of a success than anticipated by the large committee in charge. Between the hours of 6 and 9:30, over three hundred people were served. A large number of the younger girls of the church assisted in the capacity of waitresses and looked after the needs of all the attendants. The tables were prettily decorated for the occasion with candelabras and rambler roses. During the evening piano selections were played by Mis May Voorhees.

SLOWLY RECOVERING.

Robert H. Loughlin, of 122 Madison avenue, who was quite painfully injured a few days ago when he was knocked from his bicycle and run over by a horse and wagon owned by Cornelius McCarthy but driven by a young boy, is still detained at his home and it may be several days before he will be able to get about. The accident to Mr. Loughlin occurred at the corner of West Third and New streets.

FIRE DESTROYS AUTO.

An automobile belonging to Maxwell Underhill caught fire on Mountain Boulevard, Watchung, yesterday, the cause being a leaky gas tank. The Watchung Chemical Engine company responded to an alarm and extinguished the fire.

MISS CONNOLLY THE BRIDE OF FREDERICK A. O'BRIEN

In St. Mary's church at 7 o'clock last evening, Miss Elizabeth J. Connolly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Connolly, of 527 West Sixth street, became the bride of Frederick A. O'Brien, of Perth Amboy, Father Joseph S. McDonald performing the ceremony. Miss Mary Kyle, a cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and Mr. Van Syckle, a cousin of the bridegroom, was best man. The bride was gowned in blue taffet and Georgiette crepe. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The couple have gone on a honeymoon trip to Atlantic City and upon their return will reside in Perth Amboy, where the bridegroom is a chemist.

Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur is confined to his home on Westervelt avenue with a severe attack of acute indigestion. He was reported today as being considerably improved.

Scotch Plains and Fanwood

INTERESTING STORIES CONNECTED WITH NAMING OF SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD

After the colonies at Elizabeth and Piscataway, the settlement of Scotch Plains, embracing that section now covered by Westfield and Plainfield, was one of the first in this section of the State. It was early in the eighteenth century that a band of Scotchmen arrived and made their homes. As late as 1776 the colony was known as "Scotts' Plains," probably because Scots made the settlement on the plain just before the first ridge of the Watchung mountain is reached. As time passed the pronunciation of the place sounded so much like "Scotch Plains" that it came to be written that way.

Fanwood came into existence about thirty-five years ago, when an act of the State Legislature set it apart as a borough of Fanwood township. At the time there was a great deal of discussion as to a suitable name. For several years prior to that time there had been a young woman by the name of Fanny Wood spending the summer at the only summer boarding place. She was a magazine writer of considerable note and on various occasions wrote articles with the borough as the setting for her story. When the C. R. R. of N. J. placed a station here the idea was hit on of placing her name on it. The second sylliable of her maiden name was cut off and the word "Fanwood" resulted.

BOY SCOUT CAMP OPENED ON TERRILL ROAD TODAY

The Boy Scout camp for the Scouts of Plainfield and this place opened for the summer today. Located on the property of William Coriell on Terril road, the camp has been greatly improved over last year through the efforts of Edward Harding and Louis Hosmer, two local men, and a number of Plainfielders.

During the remainder of the summer there will be about fifteen boys at the camp all summer, a new batch coming each week. A wireless and other new features will serve to entertain the youngsters; and swimming, woodcraft, and the scout requirements will be taught by instructors.

SEWAGE AND SIDEWALKS BOTHERING THE BOROUGH

Two things that are causing the borough officials considerable thought are the sewage and sidewalk conditions, and steps to try and relieve matters are now in progress. It is understood that until the coming of the sewer Fanwood will be more or less troubled, but the Council has decided to make residents conform with certain regulations to make them better matters. Property owners are no longer to be allowed to have open drains running into the gutter, and as a means of stopping the practice the police have been instructed to report all instances where that practice is indulged in and then the matter will be taken up directly with the parties concerned.

Many complaints have been received as to the condition of the sidewalks. There is supposed to be a standard style of walk, but as it is only of dirt it is constantly in a wretched condition. A meeting of the street committee is to be held in a few days and it is possible that following it the street commissioner will have all walks repaired that are in need of it and then send the bill to the property owner.

Town Topics

During the past few days the authorites of Scotch Plains and Fanwood have been enforcing the ordinances governing junk dealers with excellent results, and rumor has it that certain other ordinances that have been passed by the local governing bodies and then put on the shelf are again to be brought out and enforced.

It seems that after several weeks of rowdyism about the Boy Scout camp on Terril road, the borough authorites have succeeded in breaking it up by bringing one youth into camp. Considering the amount of damage wrought and the way in which it was done some have thought the light sentence imposed was not severe enough to prevent a reoccurrence of the matter.

While we are daily hearing of plans that are being made by nearby places for a "safe and sane Fourth," nothing seems to have induced local people with starting the same move here, and youngsters continue buying fire crackers and other dangerous noise makers with little or no thought on the part of parents to the possible result. Other towns have public celebrations made possible by general contribution, somthing that is not impossible here, and something which seems to be decidedly more patriotic than the old-fashioned way of celebrating. It seems to be another case where everybody is willing to help, but don't because there is no one to start the ball rolling, in affliction that seems to be coming more and more prominent every day.

One week from today local citizens will have a chance to vote on a proposition that the local Board of Education hopes will relieve the school situation. Despite the work of many Fanwood residents, the board has not seen fit to place a school in Fanwood, and as a result from several quarters of the borough has come the announcement that there will be no support for the addition planned to School No. 1. Those who take that stand are evidently on the wrong track and cannot understand the real conditions as they stand. Whatever the Board of Education decides to do they must do as quickly as possible, especially as they are being pushed by the State authorities. Whether a school in Fanwood is built or not the alterations and repairs to School No. 1 must be done anyway and if they are not done with the vote of all the people the State will see that it is done without. Because the borough school idea is not going to materialize at the coming election is not a sign that it will not at all and the sooner local people get working on the question again the sooner it will come up for vote.

It now looks as if preparations for the second annual "community picnic" are to practically cease until the return from military service of the Rev. J. Madison Hare. Mr. Hare is the prime mover in the idea and without him it is probable that the affair would not be more than a partial success. No one can help but admire him for his patriotism but all want him back in Scotch Plains, too.

JR. O. U. A. M. CAMPAIGN.

The meberp of Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., are conducting a membership campaign that they hope will eventually result in their having seventy-five members. There are over fifty in the local council at the present time and considering the way it has grown within the past few years it is probable that the desired number will be secured.

FRANK NORTON, WELL KNOWN HERE, COMMANDS REGIMENT

Frank Norton, a brother of Charles Norton, of Midway avenue, and a brother of the late Thomas H. Norton, is colonel of the Twenty-third Regiment, N. Y. N. G., and is waiting with a thousand of his men an order that will start them on the way to the Mexican border. The men are impatiently waiting in their armory at Bedford and Atlantic avenues, Brooklyn, and as Mr. Norton expresses it, "Don't you be surprised if you hear that the roof of the armory has been blown off by their enthusiasm."

Mr. Norton has risen to the rank he now holds only after thirty years of work in the National Guard. He is well known locally, having visited here on a number of occasions, and if the regiment goes for the border its movements will be watched with interest.

IN BOROUGH POLICE TOILS.

Joe Green was picked up yesterday afternoon by Marshal Logan for being delinquent in the payment of the installments of a fine Recorder Sheelen placed on him a week ago. Green pleaded that lack of work made him unable to pay and so he was given until Saturday to pay up before the county jail would be visited.

CONCERN CHANGES HANDS.

Announcement has been made that the Peoples' Ice Company, operated for nearly ten years by Joseph Smith, has been taken over by Robert E. Myers and Warren Macauley, who will conduct an up-to-date business. An office will be established in Scotch Plains shortly and delivery will be made every day.

LOCAL SCHOOLS CLOSE.

After making up much of the work that was lost through poor attendance during the winter, the local schools will close tomorrow for the summer vacation, opening about September 12 again. During the past week the heat has been so intense that the children have only had one session.

VISITED SEA GIRT.

A party of local people, including Mrs. A. D. Reeken, went to Sea Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Westcott and Girt today to visit the Rev. J. Madison Hare. Mr. Hare is chaplain of the Fourth Regiment, and may leave for the Mexican border at any time.

GOING TO PLATTSBURG.

Leslie Hatfield, of North avenue, will leave July 5 for Plattsburg. Mr. Hatfield is enthusiastic over the preparedness program and says if volunteers are asked for at the training camp he will enlist.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN ILL.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

What size carburetor should be used for an eight cylinder engine of 600 cubic inches displacement? And what size for a four cylinder 300 cubic inch engine?

The question of a carburetor size for cars coming under either of these classes varies considerably. Even though two cars have the same displacement, the bore and stroke, length of valves, etc., may differ, and these are factors in determining the proper size. The same holds good with cars of any displacement.

How much gasoline should a motorcar engine use per horsepower per hour?

The quantity varies considerably, according to engine design, but a fairly reliable constant on which a number of authorities agree is one-eighth gallon of gasoline having a specific gravity of 0.75 per actual horsepower per hour.

What proportion of length of connecting rod to length of stroke is good practice in long stroke engines?

About two to one.

What causes gasoline to drip from my carburetor only for a few seconds after stopping the motor?

Probably the float is not properly adjusted.

Kindly give your opinion as to the value of benzine to be substituted for gasoline. Is it dangerous to use, and will it injure the motor more than gasoline?

Benzine is a richer fuel than gasoline and if properly carbureted is said to give more power. It starts easily in summer, although not as easily as gasoline. In winter it is advisable to use gasoline. Benzine is not so volatile as gasoline, but owing to the greater number of heat units it contains it will develop more power. It does not evaporate as readily as gasoline. There should be no danger from using it if handled judiciously.

A disadvantage incidental to its use has been that, owing to its being richer in carbon than gasoline, it would deposit more of this substance on the piston head and interior of the combustion chamber. While this may be true of a poorly refined benzine and when the mixture proportions are not correct, it applies equally well when low grades of gasoline are used and when the mixture of gasoline vapor and air supplied the cylinders is too rich.

Would there be advantage in having a concave topped piston? Would it give more force on the explosion stroke?

Theoretically the more nearly spherical the combustion chamber is the greater the efficiency of the engine. Hence a concaved head is a step in the right direction.

Does a V with two cylinders, set at 90 degrees, fire regularly—that is, every 360 degrees? Also do eight and twelve cylinder V motors fire at regular intervals? Are the cylinders of an eight always set at 90 degrees and those of a twelve at 60 degrees, and why?

A V engine with two cylinders set at 90 degrees would fire every revolution in one cylinder or the other. In a four cycle motor each cylinder must fire every two revolutions. Assuming that the piston is at the top of its compression stroke, just at the point of going down on the combustion or working stroke, it will come up again at the end of the exhaust stroke. These two functions take one revolution. Then it goes down again to draw in the new charge and comes up to compress this. Another 360 degrees have now been covered, when the engine is again ready to fire in this cylinder.

In an eight the firing occurs every 90 degrees, so that all eight will fire in two revolutions for reasons above. In a twelve one cylinder fires every 60 degrees, so that all twelve will fire in 720 degrees, or two revolutions. If they did not fire regularly the balance would be upset.

The cylinders of an eight should be at 90 degrees so that one cylinder can fire every 90 degrees, and the cylinders of a twelve should be at 60 degrees for the same reasons. This is always done.

Why is it that six and eight cylinder motors are not used in trucks and in racing cars?

The eight cylinder motor is a comparatively new development, but it may soon break into racing motor design. Sixes have been and are used in both racing cars and trucks. The main objects of added cylinders are greater smoothness and flexibility, and these are not regarded as a necessity on a truck or racing car either, for that matter.

What are the advantages and disadvantages of the automatic spark control over the manual control, and is the automatic control as used by leading motorcar manufacturers reliable and positive in its action, or is it likely to get out of order easily and thus disorganize the system?

For the inexperienced driver the automatic advance is of especial value since it properly takes care of the ignition requirements at all engine speeds. One who is not a very good driver is apt to have the spark retarded too far when going at high speed, or have too great an advance for pulling and slow running. On the other hand, the automatic advance is mechanical and cannot take care of every contingency as well as an experienced driver can. There is also more of a chance for it to get out of order than the manual advance, and being less dependable and more of a complication, most makers adhere to the hand advance. In fact, you will find very few cars in which there is not provision for spark regulation by the driver.

Can you tell me why gasoline, flowing through a chamois skin, is liable to cause static electricity and explode if the funnel through which it is flowing is not grounded on the tank?

Unlike water, gasoline is not a conductor of electricity. It is a well known fact that a spark of electricity may be generated by the friction of rubbing two nonconductors together. If a nonconductor is in contact with the ground or a large metallic body the amount of static electricity generated is absorbed and does not make its presence known. However, if the nonconductor is in contact with only a small amount of metal, such as the funnel or faucet, this metal becomes highly charged with electricity and will discharge with a good sized spark if another metallic substance is brought in contact with it or very close to it. Let us assume that you are about to fill your tank. The funnel is in the tank. Within the funnel is the chamois strainer. The gasoline is turned on, and as it pours through the chamois it generates static current. Static electricity may be defined as electricity at rest. The funnel being charged with static electricity, if fitting securely into the mouth of the tank, is grounded, and no spark results. Let us suppose that you did not allow the funnel to rest inside the nozzle of the tank, but that you or some one else held it in midair, so that it rested free of the sides of the tank. It has been seen that gasoline, a volatile liquid, passing through chamois, forms static current, which charges the funnel. When the amount of electricity is sufficient to jump across from the funnel to the tank, which is the nearest ground in this instance, a spark is caused, which passes across the opening between the end of the funnel and the opening into the tank through which gasoline vapor is rising, and an explosion results.

Is it possible to have too much crank case compression, and what is the cause?

In a properly designed four cycle engine there should not be any crank case compression. That is what the breather is for to relieve any compression that might result from expansion of the air in the crank case due to the heating up of the engine.

Is it possible to run a motorcar by an electric motor which is fed with current from a dynamo under the hood or possibly a small storage battery to assist on hills?

The arrangement suggested is very good except that the specifications given do not mention any method of driving the dynamo. It might be suggested that the running of the car might be used to turn the dynamo over, the dynamo driving the electric motor and the motor driving the car. This would be an ideal condition if it were possible, but it approximates too closely to perpetual motion.

What could be the cause of a light tapping sound in my car? It can only be heard at a speed of thirty miles per hour or above. It is apparently in the cam shaft or valves, as it seems to occur once every two revolutions of the motor.

This is probably due to the spark being too far retarded when you are running at high speed. Try advancing it more at these speeds. If it were the cam shaft or valves you would hear it at low speeds also.

Which will wear the longer under ordinary conditions—the right or left front tire?

There will be very little difference in the wear of the two front tires. The fact that the driver usually sits on the left side and frequently is the only extra weight in the car would tend to cause slightly more wear on the left tire. On the other hand, the fact that most of the turns are made to the left when turning around would allow the right tire to travel the greater distance, and on this basis it would wear more quickly. Taken all in all, the wear is about equal in ordinary cases.

Can you tell me how to recharge dry cell batteries?

Dry cells cannot be renewed in the sense that storage batteries can be recharged. When a dry cell becomes exhausted it is possible to regenerate it so as to get a few additional miles out of it. To accomplish this punch a few holes in the zinc retainer and dip into water. Rejuvenating dry cells invariably consists in increasing the moisture of the cell.

OLD TIME SUNDAY LAWS.

Rigid Rules For Harvard Students Two Centuries Ago.

In "The Story of Harvard" Mr. Arthur Stanwood Pier gives an account of the strict regulations formerly set down for the guidance of the Harvard undergraduates by the president and the fellows of the corporation. The old laws, intended to enforce upon the undergraduates a more religious and studious life, would be considered repressive and tyrannical today.

"All the scholars shall at sunset in the evening preceding the Lord's day retire to their chambers and not unnecessarily leave them, and all disorder on said evening shall be punished as violations of the Sabbath are. * * * And whosoever shall profane said day—the Sabbath—by unnecessary business or visiting, walking in the commons or in the streets or fields, in the town of Cambridge, or by any sort of diversion before sunset, or that in the evening of the Lord's day shall behave himself disorderly or in any way unbecoming the season, shall be fined not exceeding 10 shillings.

"That students may furnish themselves with useful learning, they shall keep in their respective chambers and diligently follow their studies, except half an hour at breakfast, at dinner for from 12 to 2 and after evening prayers till after 9 of the clock. To that end the tutors shall frequently visit their chambers after 9 o'clock in the evening and at other studying times, to quicken them to their business."

It does not seem that under such a system of vigilance and visitation the students could fall into very dissolute ways. But a few years later George Whitefield, the famous evangelist who so stirred up New England, visited Harvard college and expressed his displeasure at the dissipated habits of the young men. He declared conditions at Oxford were no worse, a charge so damaging that it greatly disturbed and incensed the college authorities.

MIXED IT WITH MYSTERY.

But the Secret of Portland Cement Was Solved by a Busybody.

Portland cement may be defined as a product made by burning limestone and clay, which have been mixed so as to form a certain composition, and grinding the resulting "clinker" to powder.

In the early days much mystery surrounded the manufacture of Portland cement when it was first discovered by a bricklayer of Leeds, England. He found that by mixing water with a compound of Thames chalk and Medway mud he could compound an artificial water cement and determined that no one should discover his secret. When employed in manufacturing his raw mixture he is said to have attired himself in a long black gown and the pointed hat of the mystic and to have recited mysterious incantations during his operations.

But a curious onlooker who determined to ascertain his ingredients and methods had a sample analyzed by a chemist, whose result showed 90 per cent phosphate of lime. Thinking that he had solved the secret, he began to calcine all the bones he could gather up in the village, much to the discomfort and objections of his neighbors, who finally induced him to desist. Following, however, the old system of cut-and-try, he finally solved the problem and eventually produced a cement equal to that of the original compounder, and the great industry began to thrive at once.

In this country the Portland cement industry had its beginnings in the Lehigh valley in Pennsylvania, chiefly in Lehigh and Northampton counties, where John W. Eckert, a chemist, discovered that there occurred a limestone composed of approximately the correct ingredients necessary for the manufacture of Portland cement.—Smithsonian Institution Bulletin.

WILL TOUR COUNTY.

The candidates of the National Prohibition party will tour Somerset county, by automobile, tomorrow, in the interests of the party. Their route is planned as follows: Leave Raritan, 7 a. m.; Somerville, 8 a. m.; Bound Brook, 9 a. m.; Plainfield, 10 a. m.; with stops at the postoffice corner and on Somerset street, near the firehouse at 10:30 a. m. The party candidates for United States Senator and Governor, Prof. Barbour and Dr. Harry Vaughn, respectively, will be the speakers.

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION.

The damage suit brought by the International Motor Company against Charles Munn, of Garwood, in the District Court this morning, resulted in a verdict of no cause for action. The plaintiffs claimed that Munn ran into one of its motor trucks. The case was heard by Judge Walter L. Herfield and a jury. Welcome Benner, of Elizabeth, represented the defendant and Mr. Emery, of Newark, was counsel for the plaintiff.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

PULP FOR PAPER.

It Is Now Mainly Obtained From Wood and Vegetable Fibers.

Paper derives its name from the fact that it was originally made by the Egyptians from papyrus, a rushlike plant formerly common in Egypt along the Nile. Today paper is largely made from vegetable fibers and cellulose.

When it was found that the fibers of the cotton and flax plants were best adapted for making paper and the uses of paper were few the ragman did a flourishing business in buying old rags to keep the paper manufacturers supplied with raw material. The rags were first allowed to rot to remove the substances incrusting the cellulose and were then beaten into a pulp to which water was added. The pulp was then placed in a sieve and drained and subjected to heavy pressure which united the fibers and produced paper. By the modern method the rags are boiled with caustic soda, which separates the cellulose fibers and placed in a machine in which rollers set with knives tear the rags to pieces and mix them with water to make a pulp. This pulp is bleached with chloride of lime and mixed with alum and a kind of soap to give a smooth surface.

The way man's discoveries operate to supply his needs in the progress of civilization is notably illustrated in the production of paper. Under the old method the big supply required today for newspapers and other uses could not have been produced.

The discovery that pulp could be made from the trunks and limbs of trees came to the rescue. It was found that by boiling wood shavings in strong solutions of caustic soda in receptacles that would withstand very high pressure the wood fibers were separated and a very good quality of cellulose for paper manufacture produced. As a result of this discovery paper today is mostly made of wood.—Boston Herald.

STORY OF A SEANCE.

In Which the Medium Predicted a Royal Assassination.

Eleanor Calhoun was an American actress who went to London when James Russell Lowell was United States minister. In 1903 she became by marriage the Balkan Princess Lazarovich-Hrebelianovich. Recently she wrote a book which bears the title "Pleasures and Palaces."

The book contains the strange story of a spiritualistic seance held by an Englishwoman, which was attended by W. T. Stead, who afterward went down on the Titanic; the princess and her husband and some others. The prince handed to the medium some sealed envelopes. She selected one, sat for a moment pressing it in her hand, and said, "This is from a person of importance—a king."

Mr. Stead then asked her to describe him. She gave a very good description of King Alexander of Servia, though she could not tell his name or his country. Suddenly she leaped up, her eyes tight shut, her face white, and, speaking as though she were in the midst of a real scene, she described the assassination of the king and queen. Mr. Stead asked what soldiers they were and of what race, and she answered: "I don't know. I never saw such people. Their uniforms resemble the Russians, but they are not Russians." Then she uttered exclamations of horror and said, "Oh, Mr. Stead, let me not go on!"

Mr. Stead, says the writer, urged the seer, and she proceeded to describe the tragedy. This seance was held in March, 1907, and the murders did not occur until the following June.

Rodin and His Models.

It is one of the peculiarities of M. Rodin, the famous sculptor, that he never poses a model. When a model enters his studio he engages her in conversation upon a subject foreign to art and thus encourages her to forget herself. Meanwhile his attention appears to be engrossed elsewhere, but he is watching her keenly. When the model unconsciously assumes a pose or an expression which he believes would be effective he bids her hold that position, while he sets to work. By this method he believes he avoids stilted and studied poses.

A SWISS MYSTERY

It Looked For a Time as if It Were Beyond Penetration.

BUT IT WAS ALMOST SOLVED.

An American Visitor In the Republic, Who Wanted to Know About Its President, Finally Came Near Getting the Information He Craved.

Switzerland is a republic that runs with the exactness of a Swiss watch, its machinery as hermetically concealed. I had heard that the Swiss republic set the pattern of government for the world, and I was anxious to know something of its methods and personnel.

I was sorry that I was so ignorant. I didn't even know the name of the Swiss president and for a week was ashamed to confess it. I was hoping I might see it in one of the French papers I puzzled over every evening, but at the end of the week I timidly and apologetically inquired of our friendly landlord as to the name of the Swiss president.

But then came a shock. Our landlord grew confused, blushed and confessed that he didn't know it either. He had known it, he said, of course, but it had slipped his mind.

Slipped his mind! Think of the name of Roosevelt or Wilson or Taft slipping the mind of anybody in America—and a landlord!

I asked the man who sold me cigars. He had forgotten too. I asked the apothecary, but got no information.

I was not so timid after that. I asked a fellow passenger guest. I mean—an American, but of long Swiss residence, and got this story. I believe most of it. He said:

"When I came to Switzerland and found out what a wonderful little country it was, its government so economical, so free from party corruption and spoils, from graft and politics, so different from the home life of our own dear Columbia, I thought, 'The man at the head of this thing must be a master hand; I'll find out his name.' So I picked out a bright looking subject and said, 'What is the name of the Swiss president?'

"He tried to pretend he didn't understand my French, but he did, for I can tear the language off all right—learned it studying art in Paris. When I pinned him down he said he knew the name well enough, parfaitement, but couldn't think of it at that moment.

"That was a surprise, but I asked the next man. He couldn't think of it either. Then I asked a police officer. Of course he knew it all right, 'Oh, oui, certainement, mais'—then he scratched his head and scowled, but he couldn't dig up that name. He was just a plain liar—tout simplement—like the others.

"I asked every man I met, and every one of them knew it, had it right on the end of his tongue, but somehow it seemed to stick there. Not a man in Vevey or Montreux could tell me the name of the Swiss president. It was the same in Fribourg, the same even in Berne, the capital.

"I had about given up when one evening in Berne I noticed a sturdy man with an honest face approaching. He looked intelligent, too, and as a last resort I said, 'Could you by any chance tell me the name of the Swiss president?'

"The effect was startling. He seized me by the arm and, after looking up and down the street, leaned forward and whispered in my ear:

"'Mon Dieu! C'est moi! I am the Swiss president; but sh, sh, non, don't tell any one. I am the only man in Switzerland who knows it.

"'You see,' my friend continued, 'he is elected privately; no torchlight campaigns, no scandal, and only for a year.'

"He is only a sort of chairman, though of course his work is important, and the present able incumbent has been elected a number of times. His name is—is—is— Ah, yes, that's my tram. So sorry to have to hurry away—see you tonight at dinner."—Albert Bigelow Paine in Harper's Magazine.

Died From Terror.

Perhaps the most remarkable death from fear was that of the Dutch painter Peutman, who lived in the seventeenth century. One day he went into a room full of anatomical subjects to sketch some death's heads and skeletons for a picture he intended to paint. The weather was very sultry, and while sketching he fell asleep. He was aroused by bones dancing around him and the skeletons suspended from the ceiling clashing together. In a fit of terror he threw himself from a window, and, though he sustained no serious injury and was informed that a slight earthquake had caused the commotion among his ghostly surroundings, he died in a few days in a nervous tremor.

When the Cat Was Sacred.

In the middle ages brute animals formed as prominent a part in the devotional ceremonies of the time as they had in the old religion of Egypt. The cat Aelurus was embalmed after death and buried in the city of Bubastis because, according to Herodotus, Diana Bubastis, the chief deity of the place, was said to have transformed herself into a cat when the gods fled into Egypt.

All things come to those who wait, but it takes a lifetime to prove the truth of this.—Philadelphia Record.

CURIOUS MARRIAGE CUSTOM.

How the Dusky Maidens of Western Africa Win Husbands.

The natives of western Africa, and especially those on the coast, retain many quaint customs. When a girl has reached her eleventh or twelfth year she is considered quite old enough to enter into the bonds of matrimony. She is taken to the bank of the nearest river and an offering to the particular deities that she and her tribe worship is made with all due solemnity beside the stream. The dusky maid is then publicly washed in the river; a bracelet of black and white beads and gold is placed round her wrist, or, if her family are not rich enough to provide beads of gold, her wrist is simply marked with white lines.

She is then dressed in the best of the family wardrobe and is escorted in a procession through the town to show to all beholders of her beauty that she has reached the marrying age. Her hair is fantastically plaited and she is perfumed with scents.

All this done, if she is lucky a number of eligible young bachelors come forward and make offers for her hand and heart, and the match is arranged on a strict cash basis. The preliminaries concluded, the marriage takes place. The bridegroom gives a feast, to which he and his family and the bride and her family all come. On the day after the feast the bridegroom shows his appreciation of his wife by powdering her head and shoulders with fine clay, and once more there is a procession through the streets of the village.

The Sycamore.

One of the very best trees for street planting is the oriental plane or sycamore. Because of its many good qualities it is rapidly coming into general favor. It bears a heavy crop of large scalloped leaves, which remain on the tree until late autumn, long after other trees have cast their foliage. This variety of sycamore has a stocky trunk, which branches, and a spreading, round topped head.—Tree Talk

ROTHBERG'S

Has grown into the life of Plainfield as books grow into a library, acquiring its patrons a volume at a time, making haste slowly, sticking close to the straight and narrow path of honorable dealing, playing the lone hand of merit in the game of give and get, putting duty before the dollar, avoiding the fireworks of fictitious methods and holding to the Rothberg-made philosophy that for sheer, downright shrewdness and business sagacity nothing has yet been invented which can take the place of a Square Deal.

And it is those standards of practise, which have made the name of Rothberg a synonym for value and satisfaction that goes with it.

IT'S ALWAYS POSSIBLE TO USE THE TELEPHONE

David Moylan, a municipal judge of Cleveland, O., also a councilman and practicing attorney, has attained his present position of importance and distinction without the use of his arms, but not without the use of the telephone. Early in his career he was a railroad switchman and in two successive accidents he lost first his right arm, then his left. After the second accident he turned to the study of law.

Judge David Moylan of Cleveland, O. After losing both arms, he studied law, became a councilman, attorney and judge.

He wrote his bar examinations by holding the pen between his teeth. No less determination was displayed in his use of the telephone. Physical handicap could not cut him off from the use of this instrument of efficiency and accomplishment, now even more essential to him than to others, and the accompanying photograph shows how he arranged to make the telephone his constant ally and tool.—The Telephone Review (N. Y.)

DINING A LA MODE.

The largest dinner probably ever held was the banquet of the Telephone Society of New York at which 3250 members sat down to tables that filled the entire floor of the drill room at the great armory of the Seventy-first regiment in New York City. Ten stations, each comprising a gas range, a heater and accessories, were headquarters for the 222 waiters, 10 captains, 35 cooks, 35 dishwashers, who, under a head-waiter, were kept busy serving the colossal repast. Fifteen hundred broilers, 1000 pounds of salmon, and 720 dozen rolls are typical quantities that were used, but in spite of the enormous amount of work involved, the schedule was maintained to the minute. It took only eleven minutes to seat the 3250 people, from the time the first ones entered the room, and the entire dinner was served in exactly one hour and thirty-five minutes.

But the sheer size of the Telephone Society dinner was not its notable feature. The occasion was remarkable in that it brought together more than six thousand men of the telephone industry in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and San Francisco—for every person was provided with a telephone receiver. At New York all announcements to the diners were made by telephone, so no one's voice was taxed by trying to fill the enormous hall. Mr. U. N. Bethell, senior vice president of the Bell System, made an address and at Baltimore and Philadelphia motion pictures of Mr. Bethell speaking were thrown on the screen while his voice came over the wire. Music and greetings were transmitted from each of the four cities, and the wireless telephone, latest wonder-child of the telephone, did its part. Captain Bullard, chief of the Bureau of Communication, U. S. N., spoke from his home in Washington, and his words were carried by wire to the Arlington wireless station, by wireless to New York and by wire to the listeners in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Next came the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" from Arlington, bringing the diners to their feet in an outburst of enthusiasm, while a motion picture of the stars and stripes was thrown on the screen.

But the excursion over 22000 miles of wire which took the members of the Society to Portland, Me., then to Jacksonville, Fla., to San Diego, Cal., then to Seattle, Wash., and at last to San Francisco, starting each successive trip from New York and stopping at the intervening points, this was perhaps the most impressive object lesson to these great gatherings of telephone men, showing them the profound significance of the work they are doing for their country. The impression was augmented by the great painted map of the United States, which had been a part of the Bell exhibit at the Panama Pacific Exposition, and on which appeared a fine line of tiny electric lights marking the progress of their tours. As they reached Pittsburgh, for instance, the line of lights from New York to Pittsburgh would appear, then it would lengthen as they reached Chicago, and so on till at last the line of lights had made a complete circuit of the United States, and they had come back home. A very fine piece of work.—The Telephone Review (N. Y.)

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employes, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employes for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion, and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railways be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved: or

2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employes are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employes as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employes, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employes, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employes, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

AN ELEPHANT RIDE

The First Try on a Padded Animal Is a Fearful Ordeal.

FEELS LIKE AN EARTHQUAKE.

And Resembles For a Time Trying to Sit on a Steep Slanting Roof—The Big Brutes Are Timid, and Little Pigs and Quicksands Terrify Them.

Elephant riding is a thing that, like guessing people's names correctly, requires a good deal of practice. The first ride is a thing never to be forgotten, more especially if it happens to be on a pad elephant—that is to say, one that carries no howdah or seat of any kind except an immense, hard, lumpy mattress, which is fastened on by four large rough ropes, pulled as taut as man's strength can pull them. If there are two or three other persons already mounted you get a corner of this mattress to sit on and are told to hold on by the ropes.

Meanwhile the elephant is getting tired of kneeling and keeps making heaving motions unpleasantly suggestive of the sea. You strive wildly to get your fingers under one of the ropes and are asked impatiently if you are ready.

You do not feel at all ready or likely ever to be ready, for your seat is uncertain and slippery, and for the life of you you cannot get a fair hold on the rope.

Breaking your nails in a last desperate effort, you say feebly that you are ready, when with a sudden jerk, that seems to drag all your bones out of their sockets, you are tilted up on a steep slope, about as pleasant to sit on as the side of a slate roof.

But you have no time to enjoy the position, for there comes another foundering jerk that knocks your hat over your eyes and throws you violently against your next neighbor, after which you find your seat is level again, and it presently dawns upon you that this earthquake was, in truth, merely the elephant's customary way of rising. He is now slowly and solemnly stalking onward, as you are aware by feeling your spine rhythmically and soundlessly dislocated at each noiseless step.

At first it seems to you as odd that you should ever come to like riding an elephant, as that eels should come to like being skinned, and your friend's assurance that you will ere long be able to dispense with the aid of ropes and go on chatting and even smiling while that colossal upheaval takes place falls on the ear as an idle tale.

Nevertheless it is the truth. Before a week is over you hardly notice the getting up or the kneeling down. You rarely take hold of a rope, and you are indifferent to almost any angle of steepness. You learn to appreciate the restfulness of being on a colossus that will never stumble, never shy, never frolic and with whose guidance you have no more to do than you have with that of a ship at sea.

Even when an elephant is mutinous he is so in a solemn, well considered manner. He will not run away, though he will on occasion stride away, and a sufficient absurd sight it is, though not to those on his back.

I once saw an elephant try conclusions with his mahout and stride off defiantly in a wrong direction till the savage blows rained upon his head by the driver with his heavy iron hook made him change his tactics. He pulled up short and began rocking his body violently to and fro till first one rider and then another was sent flying until all were gone.

The sight of them strewing the ground around him and ruefully rubbing their bruises assuaged his anger. An elephantine smile lit up his rugged face, and he once more rendered cheerful obedience to his mahout.

Considering his strength and size, the elephant is a timorous beast. They are greatly alarmed by small pigs, and I have known an otherwise sensible elephant utterly routed by a litter of piglings scampering between his legs in thick grass jungle.

Now, a pigling can never have hurt an elephant. Therefore whence his fear? Can it be their latent powers of squealing?

Certain it is that pigs share with quicksands the power of terrifying an elephant. His reasons for fearing quicksands are weighty ones, and it is impossible not to sympathize with the huge beast's agony of terror when he finds himself on unsound ground.

A spot was pointed out to us along the river bank at Fyzabad, where a year ago an elephant had got into a quicksand and been lost.

All that could be done to save him was done, but the treacherous sand would not forego its victim. Four days he took to sink out of sight, and then nothing could be seen of him but the tip of his trunk, still piteously beckoning in vain for help. At last the cruel sand closed over that, and his last agony was ended.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Some Pay More.

The man was looking over the family bills as his wife glanced through the paper.

"Oh, John," she said, "it tells here of a young fellow who was fined $6.80 for flirting."

"That's cheaper than I got off," replied the man, his eye still on the bills. —Philadelphia Ledger.

Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl chain of all virtue. Nelson.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JUNE 29, 1916.

RELIEF FOR THE GUARDSMAN'S FAMILY.

Again the Plainfield way seems to be the best way. Some thirty or forty citizens met with Mayor Calkins in the Municipal Building Tuesday evening for the purpose of guaranteeing, in the name of the community, that no person in the city or borough should suffer because of the going away of a man from the two Plainfields to serve his country in the latest crisis. Such a work would be charity were the men leaving on any mission but a patriotic one, but the duty of the "stay-at-homes" is as clear and as important as that of the able-bodied men who make soldiers.

Congress will do nothing for the families of militiamen or volunteers who are called into service, at least not until all the red tape for which that body is famous has been unwound. The Senate struck out of the militia bill an appropriation which would allow $50 a month to the family of each soldier. However noble the spirit of such a move it would have been found unfair and extravagant in execution. To localize its effect, there are some members of Troop D who are independently wealthy and there are others who will go from here leaving a wife and one or two children absolutely without an income. To give the families of these men the same "relief" would be ridiculous, and it would require weeks and even months to work out a system that would be just. By the time the problem had been solved many families would have passed from want to starvation.

Even though the government does make provision for those left behind the services of some recognized committee in each community will be absolutely necessary to an equitable distribution of funds appropriated. By the time the busy legislators at the national capital have framed a relief bill Mayor Calkins and his committee will know the name and address of every individual in the city and borough who needs aid, and will be in touch with each one. Until then the aid will be given from Plainfield pocketbooks, and as the Mayor confidently declared there is no limit to the amount of money that can be raised here for such a noble work.

THE GERMANS AND HUGHES.

It seems as though some of the newspapers that have been crying "The Kaiser's candidate" whenever the name of Hughes was mentioned will be forced to dip deeper into political conditions. Now that Col. Roosevelt has pledged his unqualified support to the Republican nominee there is little logic in calling him the friend of the hyphenated Americans, for to do so is to make of the Colonel a hypocrite and a liar. George Sylvester Vierick, the German leader in America, has the following to say: "Whom the German-Americans will support depends entirely on what Mr. Hughes will say and what Mr. Wilson will do. Roosevelt's course of action is negligible. The Colonel has encompassed his own defeat. His debacle proves that there is no room for the knownothing in American politics. If the knownothing is eliminated the hyphen will disappear also."

NEW JERSEY PATRIOTISM.

Those who have decried the National Guard of New Jersey owe it a very humble apology, says the Long Branch Daily Record.

This State mobilized last week a brigade ready for service more quickly than any other State. Within two days the militia called out assembled at Sea Girt with their ranks almost completely filled. At Newark five hundred men were recruited, at Jersey City hundreds, and all over the State it was the same story.

Proof of National Guard preparedness and of civilian patriotism in New Jersey has been given that must gladden the heart.

The same spirit of cheerful willingness and even eagerness to serve the country when it calls at any sacrifice that was evidenced in the State in the Civil War is seen again. And adopted sons and grandsons of the nation are among the first to respond.

• • • • • •

That hundreds of militiamen are being allowed to leave their commands at Sea Girt simply because they do not want to go to the border seems strange to the ordinary mind, but the answer is found under the head of "State sovereignty." The United States cannot force a State militiaman into service outside the jurisdiction of his governor. It is probably better that such individuals be dropped from the Guard. Only in exceptional cases are they justified in "quitting" at the eleventh hour. After being thoroughly trained at the expense of the State for just such work they owe it to society to be the first to answer in such an emergency, even though the original enlistment was purely voluntary.

President Wilson announces that he is determined not to declare war on Mexico, no matter what the nature of Carranza's answer to the ultimatum of this country. However, he plans to rescue the eighteen U. S. troopers held at Chihuahua City by force, if necessary, and to blockade all Mexican ports in case of actual and general fighting between troops of the two countries. So long as the results are forthcoming no one will insist on a formal declaration.

• • • • • •

Already there is complaining as to the food being served guardsmen ordered to the border. Cries of canned beef that is unhealthful are being sent back home by the boys even before they reach Texas camps. These charges are probably without foundation, as the food of a soldier cannot be expected to equal that served on the home table, but it will not hurt for newspapers to recall the "beef murders" of 1898.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

But There Ain't No Such Place.

A place where I can hang my hat
And know that I am at home;
A place from whence I well know that
I'll never care to roam.
A place where there is no dissent
And love reigns e'er supreme;
Where no on cares how time is spent
And I can sit and dream.

A place where agents do not come
To spoil a happy day;
A place where autos do not hum
Nor alley felines play.
A place where phonographs do not rasp,
No pianolas pound;
A place where neighbors do not gasp
And peddle lies around.

A place where skeeters do not skeet
Nor motorcycles chug;
A quiet and serene retreat
Without a mike or bug.
Where time need not be reckoned by
And I could take my ease;
Arcadia's the place where I
Could do as I darn please.

The noisiest thing in the world is an old-fashioned two-cent piece when it is dropped in the collection platter.

T. Egbert Peavy jumped out'n bed sudden the other night in his new striped pajamas and scared a burglar to death.

It seems queer, but I have never seed a feller with an artistic temperament who ever accumulated much of a bank account.

Every time there is a serious automobile accident the papers have to say, "An unidentified woman was seen leaving the car, unhurt, directly after the accident."

Whiskey talks a lot, but it doesn't say nothing.

It is a funny thing, but the fellers who wear the sweaters are gen'ally those who never do any sweatin'.

It is getting so that an election don't make no more impression on this country than an ordinary camp meeting.

There is nothing like being original. Hod Peters says he would be perfectly happy if he only had plenty of money.

A feller never knows anything about wimmen until he marries one of 'em and then he knows less about 'em than he ever did before.

The editor of the Clarion put a piece into the paper to the effect that he was goin' to publish the name of the young man seen with his sweetheart's head on his shoulder if said young man didn't come across with a dollar for subscription to the paper. Twenty-seven young fellers slipped into the office durin' the week and paid a dollar and the editor got letters from nine others sayin' they will hand him a dollar as soon as they kin get it.

The feller who says he can stop drinking any time he wants to, never wants to.

Concerning Cheeses.

A Kansas City man, visiting in Jamestown, found the eatables particularly appetizing and was continually complimenting his hostess, relates F. M. Cook in the Kansas City Star. "My dear Mrs. Blank," he said at supper, "I certainly appreciate this country cheese. It has much better flavor than the cheese I buy of our city grocer." "I presume that is on account of its age," cheerfully replied the hostess, "for it is shipped from Kansas City over the Missouri Pacific. I am told," she continued, "that they turn out some of the biggest cheeses in the world down there."

Wonder What Car It Is?

Ralph Tennel, of the Sabetha (Kansas) Herald, has a new car of a small familiar and insignificant type, which he says has no "centrifugal," and from which the "differential" has been taken away. Which, Charley Browne believes, is prima facie evidence that the car has already been operated on at a widely known Sabetha hospital.

READ, AND HEED.

- Proctor's Theatre -

H. B. Warner, who already has been seen in "The Raiders" and "The Beggar of Cawnpore," is presented today at Proctors' in his third Triangle production, a vividly dramatic narrative from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, entitled "The Market of Vain Desire." This picture is totally different from either of the young actor's previous vehicles, being a forceful sociological play, with a dominant love interest. Warner appears as a young minister, who, called to the pastorate of a fashionable city edifice, finds the congregation composed of society leaders whose views of life's problems are far from being in accord with his own. The story concerns his efforts to show his congregation the iniquity of marriage without love. "What is the difference," he asks, "between the girl who peddles her pitiful body on the streets and the girl who barters her beauty to gain in the market of vain desire?" The realization of the truth breaks with force upon the girl who is the subject of the minister's attack, and an unworthy marriage is prevented. Producer Thomas H. Ince has surrounded Warner with a splendid cast. His leading woman is Clara Williams, who has the role of the butterfly society girl suddenly brought to a realization of her contemplated folly. The others include Charles Miller, Gertrude Claire and Leona Hutton. Several other splendid photoplay offerings are included in today's program, one of them being one of those famous Keystone comedies.

Tomorrow Triangle presents Mae Marsh, the talented picture star, who scored such a triumph by her wonderful portrayal of the persecuted little girl in "The Birth of a Nation," together with Robert Harron and a capable supporting cast in "A Child of the Paris Streets," a story which reveals many of the inside workings of the noted Paris apaches. On Saturday Francis X. Bushman appears in "The Wall Between," while starting Monday and continuing three days that engrossing spectacle, "Where Are My Children," will be the headline feature at Proctors'.

--Astor Theatre--

A domestic problem, vexing perhaps a majority of the families in this country, forms a basic theme for the plot in "Bondwomen," a George Kleine photo-drama released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, and offered at the Astor Theatre today, in addition to the beautiful Billie Burke serial, "Gloria's Romance," fourth episode, which is meeting with such a pronounced success. Maud Fealy, as Norma Ellis wife of a physician, has full opportunity to display her acknowledged dramatic ability in "Bondwomen," which is a story of a husband trying hard to do the right thing for his family, but failing utterly because of his insistence in supervising household expenditures and assuming a major share of domestic responsibilities that most women consider their especial care. Tomorrow the World Film Corporation presents Mollie King in a superbly well developed and carefully denouated play of society life, contrasted to the open life of the mountain side, "Fate's Boomerang," supported by a well known cast of actors and actresses whose great powers of dramatic interpretation are blended most artistically in this super-feature. When seven years old Miss King played with Maxine Elliott in "Her Own Way," and was such a success that Miss Elliott took her to London, making her one of the youngest actresses appearing on the London stage. Her next important engagement was with Denman Thompson in "The Old Homestead." She made her film debut in "A Woman's Power," a film production de luxe. So delighted were the World heads with her work that she was signed up on a three years contract to appear exclusively in productions of this corporation. Always a good show at the Astor Theatre, the place they are talking about, where you enjoy the ocean breezes at home in a comfortable house, no mosquitoes, no dampness, but good fresh air from all parts of the house. Matinees at 2 p. m. to 4:45. Evenings 7 p. m. to 10:45.

INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING FORWARDING OF MAIL

Letters and postal cards may be forwarded without additional payment of postage, but all other mail requires additional payment of postage before forwarding. When one intends being away for an extended length of time money may be sent to the postmaster and used to place on and forward papers, magazines, etc. This is now done by many people, and is found to work most satisfactorily. A few days before going away your new forwarding address should be sent to the postmaster, and before returning home notice to stop forwarding and the day you wish mail delivered at home should be sent.

If you are visiting several places during the summer definite dates for forwarding to each place may be all furnished at once, and instructions will be followed. Sufficient time for mail to arrive should be allowed for each place, and a forwarding address left with that postmaster so mail arriving after you have left may be again forwarded.

VENETIAN QUARTET TO FEATURE PROGRAM

High Class Vocal and Instrumental Music to Be Heard on July 4.

Vocal and instrumental music will feature the Community Fourth of July celebration at the City Park in addition to the large chorus choir. The Venetian Quartet with A. Montanello a feature artists, as leader, has prepared this program:

March, "To the Front," by Montanello; vocal solo, "O' Sole Mio;" quartet, "Auf Wiedersehn," from The Blue Paradise, by Romberg; vocal solo, "A Francesa;" popular American melodies.

CLIFFORD A. BRAIDER
Director of Chorus Choir.

In case of a thunder storm or any adverse weather conditions which would interfere with the plans for the celebration the Plainfield High School auditorium nearby will be available.

"Little Blind Billie" made so because of the work of a Roman candle last year will be unable to see any of the beauty of the celebration, but he says: "What's the use of firecrackers, anyway? A shooter pops and that's all. When a feller can get near the base drum in the band and hear the big slide horn he gets more noise and nobody ain't gettin' hurt."

The dollar contributions means that a thousand boys and girls are going to be thrilled, not killed by the martial airs of the Dutch Arms Band, the classic renditions of the Venetian Quartet, the oratory of Judge J. W. Westcott and possibly Senator James E. Martine, if he accepts the invitation to be present and the big chorus choir. Two hundred and seventy-eight one dollar subscriptions are needed at once. Send them to DeWitt Hubbell at the Plainfield Trust Company.

MARK TWAIN AS A LECTURER.

The Story of His First Appearance Upon the Platform.

The story of Mark Twain's first great public lecture is told in Albert Bigelow Paine's "Boy's Life" of the humorist in St. Nicholas. It had been suggested that he should lecture on the Sandwich Islands, where he had been spending some weeks as a newspaper correspondent, and one of his San Francisco friends urged him to hire the largest hall in the city and charge a dollar a ticket.

"Without waiting until his fright came back," writes Mr. Paine, "Mark Twain hurried to the manager of the Academy of Music and engaged it for a lecture to be given Oct. 2, 1866, and sat down and wrote his announcement. He began by stating what he would speak upon and ended with a few absurdities such as:

A SPLENDID ORCHESTRA
Is In Town, but Has Not Been Engaged Also
A DEN OF FEROCIOUS WILD BEASTS
Will Be on Exhibition in the Next Block.
A GRAND TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION
May Be Expected; In Fact, the Public Are Privileged to Expect Whatever They Please.
Doors open at 7 o' clock.
The trouble to begin at 8 o'clock.

"Mark Twain was well known in San Francisco and was pretty sure to have a good house. But he did not realize this, and as the evening approached his dread of failure increased. Arriving at the theater, he entered by the stage door, half expecting to find the place empty. Then suddenly he became more frightened than ever. Peering from the wings, he saw that the house was jammed—packed from the footlights to the walls. Terrified, his knees shaking, his tongue dry, he managed to emerge and was greeted with a roar, a crash of applause that nearly finished him. Only for an instant—reaction followed. These people were his friends, and he was talking to them. He forgot to be afraid, and as the applause came in great billows that rose ever higher he felt himself borne with it as on a tide of happiness and success. His evening from beginning to end was a complete triumph. Friends declared that for descriptive eloquence, humor and real entertainment nothing like his address had ever been delivered."

Ancient Assyria.

There is no "Assyria" at the present day. A large part of Syria belonged for awhile to the ancient empire of the Assyrian kings, and it is altogether probable that the word Syria is an abbreviation of Assyria. Ancient Assyria was the country between the Armenian mountains in the north and the alluvial plain of Babylonia in the south, the Tigris in the west and the mountains of Kurdistan in the east. The name also included the varying empire which included from time to time different parts of the adjacent territory. Some of the classical writers plainly include Babylonia and Mesopotamia in "Assyria." The Assyrian empire came to an end about 606 B. C., and after its fall the name of "Adiabene" came to be used for the chief part of Assyria proper. In the year 115 A. D. the Roman Emperor Trajan created a Roman province of Assyria, but the attempt to restore the old name was abandoned by the Emperor Hadrian. The modern name of Syria is given both to the actual Turkish vilayet west of Palestine and to the larger region which includes the vilayet of Syria and stretches northeast into Aleppo.—New York Times.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.—Adv.

Three Little Lads.

Three little lads one bright June day
Went down the road and far away.
Full many wondrous sights were seen,
While hast'ning o'er the grass so green.

A cradle nest on tall tree swung
The orioles by whom 'twas hung;
A long stone wall with roses red;
Some wee white lambs by brown old shed.

A singing brook 'neath bridge of gray;
Some fishes in the pools at play;
A boat at anchor near the shore;
A field with daisies silvered o'er.

A farmer driving to the town,
With horses big and strong and brown;
The wagon filled from garden bed
With radishes and berries red;

Asparagus and lettuce green,
And eggs and butter in between.
A host of butterflies that flew
In lazy circles toward the blue.

A lark that soared past tall church spire;
Some saucy sparrow on a wire;
Bees darting in and out their hive
And big pine trees, exactly five.

Ah, happy through the long June day,
Were these three little lads at play;
But when the sun had sunk to rest
Each cuddled close to mother's breast.

Summer School for New Jersey.

Beginning the first week in July, schools will be open for the training of teachers in school management, school methods of teaching elementary subjects, and other branches required for teachers' certificates, as follows:

Ocean City, Cape May county; James M. Stevens, principal.

Collingswood, Camden county; Amos H. Flake, principal.

Phillipsburg, Warren county; H. J. Neal, principal.

Newton, Sussex county; H. E. Shimer, principal.

Freehold, Monmouth county; P. E. Radcliffe, principal.

New Brunswick, Middlesex county, at Rutgers Scientific School; Charles H. Elliot, director.

The summer school has become a necessity in order to give those teachers who have not availed themselves of the training which the State offers in its State normal schools, opportunity to qualify for teachers' certificates.

Another feature of the school at Ocean City will be the convention of Parent-Teacher Associations, beginning on Monday, July 17, and continuing for three days. Representatives from all Parent-Teacher Associations will be welcome at this convention. An excellent program has been arranged and opportunity will be given for the delegates to visit the summer school and the school of observation.

Learning From the Children
(By Anne Guilbert Mahon)

"Every child that grows up in a true home is a constant teacher," says Dr. J. R. Miller in one of his books.

What lessons our children teach us!

We know that a fretful, peevish, cranky child is not a well child. We know that all normal, healthy children are happy and contented. When our little ones are irritable, fretful, exacting without cause, therefore, we do not blame them until we have searched for the cause of such unnatural conduct and, usually, we find that there is something physically wrong with the child. Its digestion is out of order. It has contracted some disease which is beginning to assert itself. The child is ill or suffering in some way. We do not blame the child for its actions then. We consider the cause and we are very patient and tender.

What charity this gives us for our fellowmen! A parent who thus understands the character and actions of a child comes to apply motives and causes for conduct to other persons. That cranky old man next door, who is so cross to the children, is really a poor old dyspeptic, a disappointed, lonely old fellow, for whom we have now only pity and a desire to help. That fretful, nagging woman across the way, whose voice is so shrill and harsh, we know now is only a poor, tired, nervous woman working beyond her strength. We pity and we try to help her where, before, we perhaps criticised and blamed. Oh, our children teach us to understand human nature, to pity, to be kind!

Then, as we teach our children, as we seek to lead them into the right paths, how many lessons we learn! We know, too, that children learn from example even more than precept, and so, while we teach them, we try ourselves to be gentle and patient, self-controlled and courteous, kind and generous, unselfish and helpful. We see the beauties of these virtues more clearly and plainly as we try to impart them to our little ones. We keep our ideals constantly before us and we strive to grow into them even as we try to guide the children's feet into the paths of beauty and righteousness.

What patience the children teach us, as we deal with their faults and shortcomings, and with their developing ideals and their aspirations! A quick, sharp, impatient woman will grow gentle and long suffering when she has little ones about her to teach, to guide, to help on life's pathway. A careless, selfish butterfly of a girl will grow into a watchful, tender, self-sacrificing mother when her babies claim her love and care. Characters are transformed. Lives are changed. What lessons our children teach us!

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Tale Of Some Proud Matches.

"I'm the most important person in the house."

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

AFTER bread and jam daddy told the children about a young man who flew in his trunk right into a princess' room. Then to save his life from the king and queen he had to tell them a story that kept them interested. "'Twas sort of a race, you see. After they all had tea, just like a party, Evelyn, the young man told them this story:

"'There was once a bundle of matches, and they were frightfully proud of their high origin. Their family tree was a great pine, a giant in a big forest. Each match had once been a little splinter of this great proud pine. The matches now lay on a shelf between a tinder box and an old iron pot, and to these two the matches told the whole story of their youth.

"'"Ah, when we were a living tree we were indeed a green branch!" they boasted. "Every morning and every evening we had diamond tea, which was the dewdrops. In the day we had the sunshine, and all the birds told us lovely stories. We could see, too, that we were very rich, for most of the other trees were clad only in summer, but our family could afford to have green clothes both summer and all winter.

"'"While we were living happily like this, one day the woodcutters came. There was a great revolution, and our wonderful family was soon divided. The head of our family got a place as mainmast on a splendid big ship which could sail around the world if it chose. The other branches were scattered in different directions, and it is now our task to give light to the common herd. This is how such aristocratic people as we are got into a kitchen."

"'"Now, my lot has been quite different," said the iron pot beside which the matches lay. "Ever since I came into the world I have passed the time being scoured and boiled over and over again. Everything solid comes to me. In fact, I am the most important person in the house. When the dinner is over my pleasure is to lie clean and bright on the shelf and chat with my companions. With the exception of the water bucket, which sometimes goes down into the yard, we lead an indoor life. Our only newsgatherer is the market basket, which sometimes talks very wildly about the government and the people. Why, only the other day the old pot was so alarmed by the market basket's conversation that it fell off the shelf and broke itself into forty pieces!"

"'"You are talking too much," said the tinder box, its steel striking sparks on the flint. "Let us have a merry evening instead of bragging so much."

"'"Yes, indeed," said the matches; "let us decide now which is the most aristocratic among us,"'" and daddy stopped short right here.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Is Invited to a Reception and Thinks of a Way to Spend More Money.

"Oh, Ralph!" exclaimed Ethel Gordon in wild excitement. "Mrs. Jaynes has come home from the seashore and she has sent out invitations for a large reception and I am invited."

"You are?"

"Well, of course you are, too, but——"

"Oh," laughed Ralph, "you can't hurt me by leaving me out of a reception, you know."

"You are going, aren't you?" Dismay was depicted on Ethel's face.

"Certainly. It is a very important event, I see."

"Anything is important in this town. On a dead level objects loom large," retorted Ethel.

"You came back at me, all right," was the laughing rejoinder. "Go on."

"Well, it is next Thursday evening. I am going to have my pink silk fixed over to wear. You remember——"

"Fixed over! Why you have never worn it here at all, and it was new less than a year ago." Ralph's light-hearted gaiety had vanished.

"Men do not understand those things." Ethel's tone was superior. "I simply cannot be comfortable wearing a thing that is out of style."

"Please explain why it is so much more important for you to be comfortable than for me. It makes me dreadfully uncomfortable to have you spend a lot of money unnecessarily to have a lovely dress fixed up."

"It will not cost a lot of money. I can get everything done that is necessary for five dollars. That is a very small sum to spend getting ready for a reception, especially when I do not go but two or three times a year."

"Ethel, I do not want to get into an argument about this. It is utterly useless; just let the matter drop right here. We will not go to the reception if you cannot wear a dress that you have, for we have not the money to spend in this way."

Ethel stared in astonishment. Ralph had usually confined his remarks to expostulations and then Ethel had gone on and done exactly as she pleased.

"Indeed! my lord and master has spoken!" Ethel's eyes blazed.

"If you act like a child I must be reduced to treating you as one." Ralph looked steadily at her and her eyes dropped.

"You said you were willing to try to reduce expenses, and every month since has shown a steady increase instead of a decrease. This is a thing that I know can be done without and by the Lord Harry you shall do without it!" Their eyes met and flashed fire. Ethel turned and left the room without a word, but her back was proclaiming in stentorian tones that she would have the dress made over if she died for it. Ralph saw the challenge in the very carriage of the shoulders and set his jaw to resist her.

"I may as well begin one time as another. There is never going to be any peace till she is made to understand that I will not stand for it" he thought. "If she wants war, why, war it is."

Did you decide, not long ago, that you could not buy some particular thing because the price was a little too high? See if the store advertisements bring to you today any interesting "news" on this question.

If values and prices ruled about alike in all stores at all times, there would not be any such thing as store competition. And, as finding desirable values would require no especial knowledge or insight, store advertising would be superfluous.

DILLON AND MORAN.

Jack Dillon and Frank Moran battle tonight. According to advance information, Dillon is the favorite and is picked to win by a fair margin. Those who picked the Hoosier to win the battle have taken into consideration Moran's physical superiority but do not believe that this advantage will be of enough importance to guarantee the Pittsburgher a victory.

PILFERING THE SACKS.

The Yankees stole nine bases on Meyers, a recruit catcher, yesterday. If the Yankees can do this why can't the members of City League teams do the same? While there are one or two local players who will attempt a steal on any catcher, there are few who make it a business of stealing more than one bag in a game. That fact lessens one's opinion of them as ballplayers who are out to win. Trust, a recent addition to Dunellen, has already earned a fair reputation as a pilferer of sacks, but it is said that he takes a chance on anything and everything. Lack of discretion, of course, is another thing one has to contend with.

NOT OUT AFTER JUNIOR TITLE.

A communication received this morning states that the Plainfield A. C. is not out after the junior championship but is out for the championship of the city. While this announcement will relieve Manager Cyril Poling's mind a little and will, perhaps, add a little glory to the Plainfield A. C., there seems to be something wrong. If, as the manager of the A. C. squad states, the city championship, and not the junior championship, is his goal, then there is a long and rough road ahead of the local lads. In addition to defeating every local independent team that appears on the horizon, the lads have to defeat the cream of the City League. And, right now, the roster of the Plainfield A. C. does not include the names of any startling talent. All the boys are good, but they are young.

MISS EDNA WILDEY WINNING HER WAY.

Miss Edna Wildey has reached the semi-finals in the tennis tournament at Sleepy Hollow. The local young woman has been playing in championship form ever since the tourney began and, now that she has reached the semi-finals, it is hoped that she will survive until the finals and, then, defeat her rival.

DEATH OF GEORGE NELSON.

George—few knew him by that name—was, at one time, a baseball player. As a catcher, he had no peer and, generally, paired up with his brother, a pitcher of considerable ability. The passing of Nelson causes genuine sorrow in the hearts of many. The memory of him will linger long in the hearts of the large number of friends made in this world.

BITS OF BASEBALL.

With the Yankees on top in the American League race and the Giants safely perched, at least, in the first division, it sure does look as though the Federal League did some good.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Jack Denny, the mainstay in the box for the Tabs, has been engaged in some interesting encounters of late. Jack has had to meet the best hurlers in this section and has made an enviable record. Last Saturday Warry McLaughlin was Denny's opponent and while the former Pittsbugher outpitched his younger rival, said rival earned for himself another batch of honors.

Frankie Lee, the Scotch Plains youth, has been doing good work for the Abstainers. Frankie is an all-around athlete and has been hitting and fielding in big league style.

Art Kyle, the captain-elect of P. H. S., will probably receive a portion of the catching assignment of the Tab games as long as he cares to remain a member of the team. Art is a first class backstop and is a quick thinker, good hitter and accurate thrower. What more does one want?

Frank "Kid" Brennan has not been getting in the game for full nine innings of late. Frank is a fast man and a great hitter for his size. The unfortunate accident that befell him last year has slowed him up somewhat, but has not in the least detracted from his all-around ability.

Mickey McCarthy has been doing some great outfielding work during the past few months and is considered one of the most valuable members of the Tab squad "Mac," like his pal, Brennan, is a good clouter and a dependable outfielder. Many a game has been won through the individual efforts of McCarthy.

Let us not forget Tone Denny. Tone is ambitious to become a genuine utility man. Just now he is being used in the box and in the outfield. Not satisfied with his good work in these departments, Tone once tried to cover short. He did excellent work in that region, although he allowed a few stray grounders to go through him. In the outer works, Denny is a terror.

Alec McDonald's name does not appear on the roster of the Tab club, but still Alexander is some boy. He has been a member of the Tab society for some time and takes an active interest in the welfare of the Abstainer team. Just at present Alec is leading the West End contingent of the Tab "prelim" artists. And they say he is "there with the reins." Some driver!

WITH THE GIANTS.

"Pie" Way, a pitcher formerly with the Yale nine, and George Smith, a pitcher who was purchased from the Columbus Club, of the American Association, have joined the Giants. The proposed trade of "Jeff" Tesreau to the St. Louis Nationals for "Slim" Sallee has been called off. McGraw opposed the deal.

PIRATES RELEASE SMITH.

Infielder James Smith was today released by the Pittsburgh Nationals to the Toronto (International League) Club. He will report at Richmond, Va., where the team is now playing.

ONLY AMATEURS MAY DRIVE IN FUTURE

Members of New Jersey Road Horse Association so Rule.

Only amateur members of the Road Horse Association of New Jersey shall be allowed to drive in regular events of the organization in the future. Special events, however, will be arranged by the race committee in which other than amateur members may participate. An amendment to the by-laws of the association providing for this was made at a spirited special meeting held Monday night by the organization at the Headquarters of the Republican County Committee, Halsey and Academy streets, Newark.

The rules of the association say that any person having trained, driven or ridden any trotter or pacer for hire, or who has received any compensation for such service other than the purse, stake or wager shall be deemed a profesional. There was nothing in the rules that prevented professional from participating in the association's matinees.

The amateur supporters pointed out that it would prove disastrous if the association allowed racing between professional and amateur drivers. A majority of the members either drive ther own charges or else have amateur drivers. A few employ professionals to train and drive their horses.

A proposed ruling that would permit professionals to drive, providing they had not driven or trained horse for hire within five years, was also voted down, making it a clean sweep for the anti-pros.

Adam C. Blair and Dr. H. E. Winter, of this city, are members of the association.

HEBREWS DEFEATED BY SHAMROCKS

Joe Guinee's Double in the Ninth Settles Interesting Argument.

The youthful Shamrocks had an interesting tussle with the Hebrews yesterday afternoon; Joseph Guinee's double with two men on in the ninth earning a 4 to 2 victory for the Green lads.

The trouble started when Tommy Cullane and Ed Connors were "sent to first on errors"—who sent these lads to the initial sack is not stated in the official score. Joe Guinee, captain of the winners, advanced to the plate amid thunderous applause. Joe doubled and the game was over. Something went wrong with B. Epstine, the Hebrew third baseman, as five errors are charged up against him. The score:

SUPERVISOR WRISTON ANNOUNCES OPENING

Baseball League Will Be Organized on Opening Day, July 5.

Every indication points to a very successful season on the popular playground, Parker Field. Already the clans are gathering and several teams have turned in their names and the names of their players to the supervisor, George W. Wriston. All of the teams so far entered are of a size, and hot rivalry should develop in the race for championship honors. There is still a chance for more teams to enter. The supervisor would be glad to organize a league of midgets to play in the afternoons during the season.

The schedule of games for the opening weeks is to be made up definitely so that it may start promptly at the opening of the playground season, July 5. All teams should have their names in Mr. Wriston's hands by Saturday, July 1. If there are any teams of seniors or middlers who would like to play in the afternoons, a schedule could be made very easily.

The field has not been given over to the use of any single team this summer on Saturday afternoons as in other years and is therefor available if proper application is made in advance to Mr. Wriston, and a permit issued.

The tennis courts are in excellent shape this season, new nets replacing those worn out last year. Each day sees a large number of the young people of Plainfield enjoying this healthful pastime. Anyone who remains in the city through the summer should see to it that the benefits of the public athletic field are not missed.

The apparatus and the running track bid fair to be as popular as usual. There are several meets planned for in this vicinity this year, and the field with its perfect track, dressing room and showers, offers an excellent opportunity for training.

Informal meets will be held among the boys throughout the summer and contestants in these events will be allowed to compete for the prizes in the athletic events at the annual exhibition the latter part of the season.

Every opportunity is offered to the boys of Plainfield to perfect themselves as athletes without hardship or expense, all that is necessary is the determination and the will to keep pegging along.

WYCKOFF FOR RED SOX.

It was announced at the office of the Philadelphia American League Baseball Club that Weldon Wyckoff, a member of the Athletics' pitching staff, had been released to the Boston Americans. Wyckoff is a right-hander and has been with the Philadelphia club several years.

FAMOUS HORSEBACK RIDERS.

Men Who Won Fame in the Days of the Old Pony Express.

Buffalo Bill Cody, it is believed, holds the record for the longest horseback ride of which there is authentic record. He was one of that gallant band of fourscore pony express riders in the sixties. On one occasion young Cody—he didn't become Buffalo Bill until some years afterward—rode without rest for 322 miles.

When the pony express was started for the purpose of carrying mail from St. Joseph, Mo., to Sacramento, Cal., a distance of 1,966 miles, it was planned that each rider should cover seventy-five miles in a day on three different horses.

It was soon found that twenty-five miles was too much for the horses for a regular unbroken gallop, and the distance was reduced to from ten to twelve miles. For that distance every horse was pushed to his limit.

The shortest time in which the entire distance of 1,966 miles was covered by pony express riders was made in March, 1861. They carried Lincoln's inaugural address to the Golden State in seven days and seventeen hours, an average speed of over ten and one-half miles an hour.

A rider named Haslam dashed off 120 miles in 8 hours and 10 minutes. Another pony expressman covered one ten mile stretch in 31 minutes, which is better than most of the Rocky Mountain railroad limited trains can do.

The news that Fort Sumter had been fired upon was flashed from St. Joe to Sacramento in eight days and fourteen hours.

Jim Moore once rode 280 miles at an average speed of eighteen miles per hour. The horses were the best that could be obtained, and, as stated before, they made short runs of from ten to twelve miles.

No wonder that sometimes a letter had $27 worth of stamps upon it when carried under such extraordinary conditions!—Philadelphia Ledger.

EDNA WILDEY VICTOR AT SLEEPY HOLLOW

Local Woman Had Tussle With Mrs. Rawson Wood —Lost in Doubles.

Miss Edna Wildey, of this city, reached the semi-finals in the tennis tournament at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club yesterday. Miss Wildey defeated Mrs. Rawson Wood, who held the metropolitan doubles championship in conjunction with Mrs. Spencer F. Weaver, in an interesting match which was filled to overflowing with excitement and tense moments. Although defeated, Mrs. Wood played a wonderful game against the aggressiveness of Miss Wildey. The scores of this play were 8—6, 6—2.

In the doubles events in which she contested, Miss Wildey did not fare so well and, although she, with Mrs. H. Stuart Green, defeated Mrs E. Shattuck and Miss Adele Cragin, she and Mrs. Green were set back in the second round of the doubles. The scores in the first round of this play were 6—0, 6—0. The conquerors of the local woman and her partner were Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Caroma Winn.

COLUMBIANS WIN AT BOUND BROOK

Local Bowlers Take Two Out of Three Games—Almost Win Third.

The Columbian Five journeyed to Bound Brook last night in order that they might engage in a bowling match with a representative women's team of that place. The locals were very successful in their efforts and took two out of three games. They would have taken a third game had they been given the better end of a slight dispute that arose over a point. The Bound Brook players were awarded the decision and so the Columbians had to be content with winning two games and losing a third by one point. The scores follow:

JACK MARTIN'S ILLNESS HAS PREVENTED HIS PLAYING WITH MILWAUKEE TEAM

Milwaukee Writer Says Martin Has Been Sick—Stuzt Does Well—Dissension in Ranks Ends With Removal of Kirke and Devore.

Manning Vaughan, a writer on the Milwaukee "Sentinel," has stated that Jack Martin has been benched, not through any lack of efficiency, but because of illness. The local lad has had an attack of tonsilitis and has been very sick for the past week or so. In fact, he is not really well even now and this fact necessitated his remaining in Milwaukee while the Brewers moved on to St. Paul.

When local fans missed Martin's name from the box scores there immediately were set into motion many rumors that the local player was to be let out. Then, too, there were rumors that Miller Huggins and his St. Louis cellar "champs" were anxious to add Martin to their roster, but these rumors seem to have been without foundation, inasmuch as Milwaukee papers seek to put an end to any reports that Martin is to be either traded, sold or released.

Young Stutz is still working out at short and has to be given credit for his splendid showing. While he is by no means as fast a man as Martin, he has been doing unusually good work and has been hitting the ball at a good clip.

There was some mention made by the St. Paul Pioneer Press of the fact that, perhaps, Jack Martin was not in "a congenial environment." Jack is a quiet fellow and is not given over to "Hal Chase" stunts of opposition to the reigning management and, no doubt, has become disgusted with the arguments and ruptures which were containally occuring in the Brewer camp. Jay Kirke and Josh Devore, it is said, did not like to take orders from Manager Harry Clark, inasmuch as Clark has never had a chance in the big leagues. Kirke and Devore both have had careers under the big tent. Dee Walsh, who has been holding out on Clark but who was not mixed up in the dissension, has come to terms and everything is said to be running smoothly. If no further trouble is confronted and Martin's illness does not prove serious, local fans can look forward to seeing the local boy in action again in short order. And Ray Corhan still has reason to look to his laurels.

PREPARING TO DESERT STATE CAMP

REGIMENTAL HEADQUARTERS SENDS SOUNDING NOTICE TO COMPANY K

Captain Charles Peterson Replies to Colonel William B. Martin's Queries by Declaring That He Will Have 125 Men Ready for Mobilization in Twenty-four Hours—Recruiting Office at the Armory Open Nights—Guard Heads Want to Recruit up to War Strength and Can Still Use a Big Number of Men—Company May go Straight to Trenton.

Captain Charles Peterson, of Company K, received a telephonic communication from Lieut. Colonel William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon demanding to know how soon Company K would be prepared to leave for the mobilization headquarters. Colonel Martin was acting under instructions from the regimental headquarters and was endeavoring to see just what could be done in the way of preparing in twenty-four or forty-eight hours.

The Plainfield Guard head replied that 125 equipped men could be sent to either Sea Girt or Trenton in twenty-four hours. Company K men are in possession of two sets of uniforms, one for dress and the other an olive drab outfit. In case of emergency these could be divided up among the new men who have not as yet been equipped so that 125 individuals could each be provided with a uniform. The company is a little short on leggings and hats but these could also be obtained in a short time.

Although Colonel Martin did not tell Captain Peterson whether Company K and the Second Regiment would be sent to Trenton or Sea Girt to prepare for mobilization it seems possible that the former place will be named in General Sadler's orders. The Second and Third Regiments are the best trained in the State and are probably in as good shape now as the infantry that has been training at Sea Girt for a week. For this reason the regiment may be sent directly to the Trenton armory and entrain from that place for the border at once.

Captain Peterson notified his men last night to hold themselves in readiness for a moment's call. The armory recruiting station is being kept open every night and fifty men are needed to bring the company up to 150, which is known as war strength. Little trouble is anticipated in reaching this quota.

The word from Colonel Martin come as a welcome surprise to Captain Peterson, who admitted to a Daily Press reporter that it was very encouraging. The optimism that has been shown by the company men gave vent to considerable enthusiasm when the word was passed around and they are now hopeful of receiving orders to begin the mobilization work by Saturday.

WARDLAW VISTED SEA GIRT CAMP

Troop Corporal Returned From Sea Girt Today to Resume Recruiting.

Corporal Charles D. Wardlaw, of Troop D, returned from Sea Girt this morning. He was given orders to remain at the recruiting office, 1120 Putnam avenue, for several days more, in an effort to enlist at least twenty more men. Trooper Augustus R. Fisk is assisting Corporal Wardlaw in the work, Lieut. Runkle having left for Sea Girt.

Unmarried men and those with a knowledge of horsemanship are especially acceptable. As fast as he signs up the men Corporal Wardlaw sends them to the troop camp and will continue this practice until given further orders. It is not known whether the camp will be continued at Manasquan after the Plainfield and Red Bank detachments leave for Texas Saturday morning.

TROOP D COOKS BARRED; MELLICK AFTER OTHERS

Troop D is sadly in need of cooks. Eugene Johnston and Charles Irby, the two men who have been performing this part of the camp work in an efficient fashion since the Manasquan headquarters was opened, refused to take the Federal oaths yesterday afternoon and will return to their homes here today.

The elimination of Johnston and Irby leaves only the two assistants, William Daniels and Leslie Kingslow, available for help in the kitchen, and the former has been under a disciplinc ban. Mess Sergeant J. Hartley Mellick is plainly "up against it" and it is probable that he will have to draw on some of the troopers for kitchen work pending the enlistment of two more capable cooks.

FIVE RECRUITS LEAVE; LIEUT. RUNKLE REPORTS

Five new recruits left for the Troop D. camp at Manasquan on the 8:12 train from the North Avenue depot this morning. They are Lemuel B. Woolston, 2nd., of Plainfield; James R. Garretson, of Dunellen; R. D. Walker, of New York; George R. Bray, of Woodfern, and Elton Wiggs, of Westfield.

Lieut. Daniel Runkle, who has been in charge of the recruiting station at 1120 Putnam avenue, left for Sea Girt at 5 o'clock this morning. He will take the officers' examinations and will probably leave for the border with the Troop D detachment Saturday morning.

OFFERS A COOK.

Former Mayor Charles Fisk has been a regular visitor at the Troop D camp for several days past. When he learned that the two Plainfield men who had enlisted to serve as cooks refused to take the oath Mr. Fisk offered the services of an expert from his own culinary department, offering at the same time to defray the expenses of sending him to the border.

MANY PLAN SUNDAY TRIP TO SEA GIRT

Plainfield Autoists Hoping That Something Will Be Left of Camp.

Weather permitting Sunday will be a big day for Plainfielders at Sea Girt. Local autoists are hoping that at least a portion of the militiamen now at the State camp will be left there after the mobilization trains pull out tomorrow and Saturday and if they are Camp Fielder will be the mecca for hundreds of sight-seers.

Last Sunday a number of auto parties had been planned from this city but the inclement weather broke up the preliminary plans. Clear weather has been promised this week, and if the weather man lives up to his word it'll be a big day for localites.

There is a possibility that Company K may be called to Sea Girt before Sunday and if this pans out the visit will be doubly attractive.

GETS LEAVE TO MARRY.

D. Ogden Rogers, a trooper in Troop D, whose engagement is announced in another column, secured a twenty-four hour leave of absence from Captain Albert Borden today to be married. He also requested that other members of the troop be allowed to accompany him as witnesses but this was refused. He was not present when the Federal oaths were taken yesterday afternoon, but the oath was administered this morning and he will depart for the border with his companions Saturday morning.

COL. MARTIN SWORN IN.

Colonel William B. Martin, formerly of Plainfield, was sworn in for Federal service at Sea Girt yesterday. This was done so that he might be qualified to assume charge of the Second and Third Regiment mobilization plans in the event that there divisions are called out.

WILL ATTEND FUNERAL.

Trooper J. Osgood Sewell, whose foster father, Joseph Osgood, died suddenly yesterday, was given leave of absence yesterday afternoon to attend the funeral. He will return to camp Saturday and be prepared to leave for the border.

BOYS AT FORT TERRY.

Twelve Plainfield boys will leave Plainfield for Fort Terry, Plum Island, off the coast of Log Island, in the sound, on July 6, for a course of training similar to that being given at Plattsburg. They will remain at the camp until August 10.

VISITORS AT CAMP.

Edward Harding took Daniel McDonald and Samuel Taverner to visit the Sea Girt camp in his automobile this morning. Assemblyman William N. Runyon was also a visitor at the camp today.

BREAKS "SHOT" RECORD."

FIFTH REGIMENT BREAKING CAMP THIS AFTERNOON; WILL LEAVE FOR BORDER AT 7 O'CLOCK TOMORROW

Captain Albert Borden, of Plainfield, Will Be in Command of Troop D, of This City, and Troop B, of Red Bank, When They Entrain Saturday Morning—No Eleventh Hour Delay and Confusion Anticipated—Inoculation Task a Big One—Expect the Sea Girt Camp Will Be Deserted in Forty-eight Hours—Two Men Left Mobilization Train at Wilkesbarre and Are Now Missing.

(By L. R. F.)

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, June 29.—Less than forty-eight hours remain before Sea Girt will be deserted by all of the troops that were summoned here by the President's first call for the militia. That was positively determined with the arrival of practically all supplies that have been needed, and the assurance received this morning that all mounts needed will be here before night, fully inspected before being shipped in to Sea Girt.

The actual work of breaking camp by the Fifth Regiment began this afternoon. The wagons were packed with the full supplies, including the wall tents in which the men have been sleeping since they arrived here. The wagons are being loaded on flat cars, and Colonel VanWalraven is determined that everything heavy will be out of the way before dark tonight. The men will spend the night in the little "dog tents," which are used when they are on hikes, or only in temporary camps. The confusion incident to the departure of the First Regiment will not be repeated if system can prevent it, and the men will not be required to go without sleep as were those in the Newark organizations.

The regiment will be taken out over the Pennsylvania Railroad. They will be given a hearty breakfast in the morning before leaving camp, which will be broken about seven o'clock, and then marched to the trains, which will be run in three sections. The present plan is to have the trains go to Trenton, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, at which point they will be shifted to the Wabash system, over which they will proceed to Kansas City. Here the Santa Fe lines will be given the trains.

Although the Quartermaster's Department, through Colonel David S. Hill, has made application for tourist sleepers for the men it is doubted here that they will be received. The coaches which will be provided will have high backed seats, and there will be enough seats for each man to sit alone, so that they will be fairly comfortable. Where the tourist cars will be taken on is not known, but the local militia officials says that the government has taken control of all tourist sleepers in this country, and will provide them for the men.

The two troops, D, of Plainfield, and B, of Red Bank, will go in one section, with Captain Albert Borden, of D, senior of the officers in command. They will also leave over the Pennsylvania railroad, some time Saturday afternoon. The Signal Corps, of Jersey City, wil go the same way, but the Fourth Regiment is expected to be routed out over the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Whether they wil go by way of Buffalo has not yet been determined.

Brigadier General Edwin W. Hine, with his staff, will accompany the Fourth Regiment, the last section of his command to leave Sea Girt. He will go direct to the border, but at the present time there is no one here who is in a position to say whether or not he will be given command of his whole brigade when he arrives at the front.

While the camp will undoubtedly be flooded with visitors for the next two days, the higher officials are hoping that those who come down from the home cities of the men who are leaving will bear in mind that the conditions under which they go out will make it impossible for the soldier boys to carry anything but their full marching equipment, except such things as photographs of loved ones, and other small trinkets. The men have been well fed and every train will be well rationed, so that food supplies, such as rich things, will be positively banned by the officers. This is done as a health measure, and if a lot of food is brought into camp tomorrow and Saturday it will have to be left behind. Incidentally the food has been of such a high standard, and has been so carefully protected against disease that the regular army inspectors have been able to find but one cause for complaint, and that was immediately corrected. The bread has been baked at Trenton and shipped her in closed automobiles, and every precaution taken to keep it clean. The army officers suggested that the bread be wrapped and this is now being done at the bakery.

Few people realize what a task the physical examination required amounts to. Seven physicians are constantly engaged in the work, and the intimate details of every man's physical history are gone into. The men are compelled to strip and the tests are so rigid that a physically imperfect man will be unable to get away. The men who are sent back home are given certificates so that they run no risk of being held up to ridicule upon arriving home. They frequently visit the press tent, and many of them with tears in their eyes plead that their names be sent to the newspapers at home, so that people will not think that they are cowards. An illustration of the restrictions which are being enforced may be gained in the case of a blacksmith, brought here from Newark for Troop D, of Plainfield. This man passed the preliminary test at Newark, and was accepted there. He has to do no military duty, other than to care for the horses, and all of the mounted organizations are short of blacksmiths, with the exception of the Essex Troop, which went on, leaving their man to come later, so that he could help the others get ready to start on Saturday. When the recruit in question come before the army surgeons he was refused because he was a trifle below the heighth requirement, a thing which would in no way interfere with his properly doing the work laid down for him. He stated after his inspection that he had tried twice before to get into the regular army and had been refused for the same reason, and that when he was told that he could get into the National Guard he gave up a steady job to come and enlist at the small army pay.

Captain Robert E. Siefers, of Bordentown, a surgeon in the medical corps, has already learned some of the horrors of war, or at least the officers left behind suspect that he has. When Battery B pulled out on Monday night, it was found that some of the men had not been innoculated for typhoid fever, and Captain Siefers, on five minutes' notice was pulled out of bed, given the proper supply of serum to complete the job and told to get on the train with the troop. He was assuped that he would be ordered back at Trenton, or some nearby city, and did not even take a tooth brush with him. After he got away it was decided that it would be best to have a surgeon go with the men, and he was given wire instructions to complete the trip to El Paso. His equipment has been shipped to him, but for a few days he will be without anything but the clothes he wore.

The job of innoculating the men of the various commands is not an easy one. The mounted organizations were all given the treatment first. With the infantry regiments, the men are lined up in long rows, with the left arm bared to the shoulder. Iodine is painted on the spot where the innoculation is to be, and then the job is done by a squirt gun. With few exceptions there have been no ill effects from the work, as the men merely run a slight fever for a few hours after the treatment.

Several messages have been received by Colonel William G. Schauffler, commanding the medical corps, from Captain Peter P. Rafferty, who is in command carrying the field ambulance corps. One late yesterday afternoon was addressed, "Somewhere in Pennsylvania," and said, "Best regards from everyone in this happy and contented bunch." It was from Captain Rafferty's command that eighteen men refused to take the oath and went back to Red Bank. One of these quitters showed up at Colonel Schauffler's tent yesterday afternoon and told him that if Captain Rafferty would take him he would go on at his own expense. He was advised to get the route of the ambulance corps, and telegraph to Captain Rafferty, asking permission to come back, and he promised to do so.

Staff officers are getting much amusement every time Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., gets anywhere near Major William B. Bryant. The General has an airedale which follows him all around camp, and the Major has an Irish terrier. Both dogs have shown an inclination to growl at each other whenever the two officers come together, but the rush of orderlies, staff officers, plain civilians and others to see a real fight has not yet been rewarded.

Word reached camp this morning that two men who left with the First Regiment, left the command at Wilkes-Barre, and have apparently deserted the command. The two men told the railroad officials that they were left behind and the Lehigh Valley made arrangements to ship them back to Sea Girt. They were placed on a train and when they got to Newark left it. Neither man has shown up at Sea Girt as yet, so far as is known this morning. They were members of Company G, and gave their names at the time the railroad sent them back as W. P. Bruen and Gus Brunner.

W. C. Hope, General Passenger Agent of the Central Railroad, told a representative of the Daily Press that the Fifth Regiment will go over his line as far as Scranton on Saturday. It will then go by the Lackawanna to Buffalo, the Nickel Plate to Chicago, Burlington to Kansas City, Rock Island to Santa Rosa, and the El Paso and Southwestern to its destination.

COMPANY K MEMBERS WILL BE SWORN IN

Colonel Martin Will Visit Local Armory at 8 O'clock Tonight.

Captain Charles Peterson has issued orders for Company K men to report at the West Front street armory promptly at 8 o'clock tonight. At that time Colonel William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, will be present and the oaths will be administered to the local militiamen.

The officers will also be sworn in by Colonel Martin. This announcement gives further emphasis to the belief that Company K and the Second Regiment will not go to Sea Girt for mobilization but will be told to report to the Trenton armory and leave for the border from that point. No definite orders regarding the date for mobilization have been issued as yet but it is the opinion of Company K officers that some decision will be reached by the mobilizing heads by Monday at the latest.

ROGERS, OF TROOP D, TAKES "WAR BRIDE"

Plainfielder Gets Leave to Be Married Before Entraining With Comrades

David Ogden Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers and a trooper in Troop D, First Squadron, New Jersey Cavalry, now encamped at Sea Girt, secured leave of absence yesterday afternoon to get a marriage license at the Municipal building in New York City to wed Miss Mildred Cumberleyo Mordaunt, of No. 16 East Sixtieth street. Their wedding was to have taken place later, but owing to the fact that the prospective bridegroom will leave with his troop for the Mexican border Saturday morning they were married this noon, in Grace church, Broadway at Eleventh street, New York.

Miss Mordaunt stated that she was the daughter of Francis Lionel Mordaunt, that she was twenty-two years old and was born in New Rochelle. Mr. Rogers, who gave his age as twenty-five, is the son of Nathaniel Pendleton Rogers, and is a broker with offices in New York.

CLIMATIC CONDITIONS ALONG MEXICAN BORDER NOT SO BAD AS THEY HAVE BEEN REPORTED

Troopers From Plainfield Need Have No Fear for Typhoid—Heat Prostrations Almost Unheard of—Air is Dry and Invigorating and Nights Are Cool and Refreshing.

Relatives and friends of local militiamen either on their way to the border or contemplating the trip have been more or less disturbed by the reports of the climatic conditions in the section where Jersey troops are locating. Dean Ryder, son of Mrs. Kathleen Ryder, of East Front street, recently returned from Texas and is authority for the statement that the weather along the border is no more dangerous or exhausting than it is right here in New Jersey. The temperature averages 115 but the air has no moisture in it and the nights are cool. A breeze blows all day and the men suffer little or no ill effect from the weather.

When one remembers that the border is nearly equal in length to the distance from here to Chicago and return, the possibility of varied conditions is apparent; but on the high table land which is the present arena of activity, of which El Paso is the centre, the climate is wonderful. It is true at this season of the year it is hot; judged by our thermometer readings, it would seem unbearable and unlivable, but the air is so rare and dry that one is not conscious of it—except in the sun—as the moment shade of any kind is reached one is always comfortable. Heat prostration cases are unheard of. Darkness falls immediately after the sun goes down, and with it goes the heat. A hot night is unknown, and usually a pair of blankets is necessary.

The rains generally fall at night, but even to the soldier sleeping in the open the discomforts are transitory, for when the storm has passed there are no disagreeable conditions such as we have here in mire and mud and oppressive humidity.

Nature's greatest provision in this country is evaporation. It is the keynote of bodily comfort. It is this that prevents the discomforts and annoyances of perspiration, for while the skin performs its natural function, evaporation is instant and complete and the body is always dry. Though this minimizes the dangers of colds— which are extremely rare—this dryness sometimes causes the skin of the feet to crack. If so, a daily rubbing with vaseline is advised.

It is the same provision of our good old Mother Nature (evaporation) that makes it possible to have not only cool water, but perfectly chilled melons and fruits of all kinds. All drinking water is kept in large porous earthen jars called oyas, holding from ten to twenty gallons. These are filled each day, then for immediate household use smaller quantities are placed in earthen bottles which correspond to our carafe. This clay bottle is usually wrapped in a towel which is kept wet, and the water gets perfectly cold, in temperature resembling that of a good spring. The same method is applied to fruits, wrapping in a wet towel. After eating them cooled in this manner one concludes that never before have the perfection and deliciousness of this article of food been appreciated.

Now as to the erroneous idea concerning sanitation. The gaunt fear of typhoid that is stalking in the homes of those left behind is groundless. Typhoid is the least probable illness. First of all there are few, if any, conditions favorable to the breeding of germs. While on the border the Rio Grande will supply the drinking water, which is good. This important river has a sandy bed and is fed by tributaries from a sandy soil, and it is a well established fact that water running through sand is filtered and purified. Refuse does not go through the process of decay as we are familiar with it up here, nor does it give off any disagreeable odors. The dry, hot air forms a coating, and the sun and heated sands bake it; then disintegration takes place.

This action of the rare air is most astonishing to strangers in its effects upon meats, all kinds of which hang out in the open. Evaporation is so rapid that the surface moisture is absorbed as soon as exposed to the air. A coating is thus formed that hermetically seals it, thereby preserving the meat, which suffers no deterioration even when pieces are cut from it, as with each cutting the process is repeated. This is truly a wonderful provision of nature, the economic value of which can be readily appreciated.

The one unpleasant feature that the soldier in Mexico will encounter is the sandstorms, which fortunately occur only periodically, and it is suggested that each man provide himself with a pair of dustproof goggles, which are absolutely necessary.

General John Pershing," the man at the front," whose present headquarters are at Colonia Dublan, tells Trevino he will not take his orders.

May be battling now with Carranzistas.

SYNOPSIS.—Stephen O'Mara, a homeless and friendless boy, starting from the wilderness to see the city, is welcomed to the home of Caleb Hunter and his sister Sarah. Stephen meets Barbara Allison, young and rich, and Caleb gives him a home. Barbara ridicules Stephen, who runs away, declaring that he'll come back when worthy of her. Caleb learns that Stephen was well born. Ten years later Stephen returns, still loving Barbara, and learns she is to wed Archibald Wickersham. She tells Stephen his love is hopeless.

Her father and Wickersham plan to block the railroad's completion and discredit O'Mara, who has charge of its construction. Harrigan, a malcontent, is driven away by O'Mara and threatens revenge. Garry Devereau, an inebriate, whom Stephen reforms, learns through Stephen that Miriam Burrell, Barbara's closest friend, is in love with him. Stephen sets himself to win Barbara from Wickersham.

CHAPTER XVII.

Blue Flannel and Corduroy.

THE world was snowbound—all that small world which lay between the hills in the valley at Thirty-Mile. For two days it snowed so heavily that all work moved but intermittently at the up river camp, and then, two days before Christmas, the mercury dropped sharply into the bulbs and the weather cleared.

From his window Stephen O'Mara watched the heavy loads crawl up to the storehouse door. He watched the drivers throw tarpaulins over the boxes and knew that they were too weary to unload that night. And he was still there at the frosted pane when the three men, Big Louie still plowing ahead, hove into view again from the direction of the stables and came straight toward his own shack. He opened the door and bade them enter before they had had a chance to knock. The swagger in the shoulders of two of them told him what to expect. Big Louie was only clumsy, as usual.

"You did well to make it," he told the latter kindly, as he always addressed him. His nod to the others, who reeked of white whisky, was in part a question, in no wise a welcome. "Well?" he asked.

Apparently there had been a conference beforehand, for there was no hesitancy on the part of Fallon, who had been ordained spokesman.

"We've come for our time," he growled.

Steve nodded gravely.

"I see," he murmured. "May I ask what's your grievance this time?"

They were satellites of Harrigan. Because of that he had kept them all where his eyes could find them at times. And, even though their arch leader in discontent had not crossed his path in many days, he listened now to an echo of Harrigan's activities.

"They're offering three a day in the reserve camps," Fallon should not have gloated. "Three a day and a bonus for the high week cut. "We're going back to the river."

"I see," again observed Steve. "Are they guaranteeing this wage for as long as you want to work?"

Apparently they had decided, too, that there should be no bargaining.

"We want our time," Fallon reiterated. "This is going to be a man's year on the river!"

"You also?" Steve inquired of Shayne.

"Yes, me also," he came back, "an' a hundred others before the ice goes out."

Big Louie he had given up for lost before that, and yet it was with Big Louie that Steve made a sincere effort.

"I'd like to have you—stay, Louie." He faced the third man. "I need you, for you can do more with horses than any man I know. You are worth three a day to me. Do you care to think it over?"

Big Louie's eyes had been mournful when he stumbled in out of the cold. They were that now. He started to turn toward the window for a look at the stables and then thought better of it. Resolutely, for him, he shook his head.

"I am done—me," he muttered. "I work for no company that will leave honest men to starve."

It was hopeless from the start, yet Steve tried again.

"I can promise you work as long as you are able to hold a rein," he offered, but he moved nearer the door while he was speaking. "That is all I can promise."

Perhaps Fallon believed that Big Louie was weakening. Perhaps he felt that the situation was too highly dramatic to be wasted, for he made a wide flourish with one hand.

"We want our time, and we want it now," he threatened. "We're going to show you who bosses this river before we're done with you!"

Fallon shouldn't have gloated; he shouldn't have threatened. And Shayne shouldn't have smiled. Steve had slipped the latch loose. Now he swung open the door.

"Call for your time at the Morrison office," he said evenly, "and if you're going—why, go!"

By collar and belt he swung him back and drove him sprawling into a drift.

"Are you in a hurry, too, Shayne?" he asked pleasantly, and Shayne buried his head beside Fallon's in the snow. Then Steve closed the door carefully and turned again to Big Louie.

"Louie," he said, "I make it a rule to urge no man who does not wish to stay. If it needs persuasion to keep you I do not want you here. But you are running with the wrong crowd, Louie. You'll learn it some day, but some day may be too late."

The big, dreamy eyed man was hardly listening, but he gestured toward the door. And Steve treated his departure kindly, as he had always treated his presence.

Outside where Shayne and Fallon had picked themselves up Big Louie hesitated and fumbled in his pocket with a cold cramped hand. He delivered the letter for Stephen which had been intrusted to him by Miss Sarah. There are many men like Big Louie who are pitifully faithful until events outstrip their intellects. Steve was sorry for him, and a half hour later, after he had read Miss Sarah's prim note requesting his presence at dinner at 7:30 Christmas eve, he grew sorrier still while he watched the ill assorted trio meet once more, blanket packs upon their backs and snowshoes on their feet. Big Louie had joined the other two from the direction of the stables. There were words between them, for Steve saw the huge man's arm lift to strike Shayne to the ground and then drop harmlessly back to his side. And Steve knew what that bit of pantomime meant. Big Louie had been to bid his team goodby. There was a smudge of brown sugar across his coat, though the watcher was too far away to see that. But he knew that Big Louie had been crying, knew that Shayne had smiled. It was the second time that Shayne had smiled that evening—his second bad mistake. Long after they had disappeared into the north toward the Reserve company's camps Steve wondered that it had not cost him his life.

Miss Sarah's note which had been almost a week on the way was very prim ly correct, but the inevitable posi script which underran it sounded a more intimate note.

"We are not excessively formal as a rule, Stephen," she wrote, "so a dinner jacket will be adequate. As I am expecting two other guests besides your friends, Mr. Morgan and Garrett Devereau, I must ask you to let no business matters interfere with your promptness."

Steve dared not let himself wonder who those other guests would prove to be. Miriam Burrell, he knew, had already written Garry that this was to be the saddest Christmas and the merriest that she had ever known, giving as respective reasons her inability to be with him and the fact that she was so entirely his. Because he would not let himself hope this time he was not disappointed, or at least so he told himself, when he found only Dexter Allison with Caleb the next afternoon near 6. And on a sudden thought his eyes went roving around the room then, looking for Archibald Wickersham. But Miss Sarah gave him no time for a protracted scrutiny.

"Your room is ready, Stephen," she told him and steered him toward the stairs. "You have an hour in which to dress, and you know already that I am old maidenishly strict."

And then, three quarters of an hour later, when he had dressed and turned to the stairway Barbara was there at the foot of the flight waiting for him to appear. In a little low pink satin gown that made rounded her slenderness—made her appear even smaller than she was—she gave him an elaborate courtesy from the main floor and flung up at him her laughter.

"Merry Christmas, Sir Galahad!" she called.

Steve, who was only dimly aware of the fact that Garry and Fat Joe had arrived, the latter guilty of his first dinner jacket and enormously proud of his guilt, stood looking at Barbara while she was chattering at him without hearing distinctly a word she spoke.

"You look as though I were a wraith," the girl accused him. "Am I so pale after a few weeks of sophisticated city air?"

"I thought you looked like—shall I tell you what I thought?"

"Most certainly," she was forced to insist. "Wasn't it a bald enough invitation for a pretty speech?"

"I thought you looked like a small pink bon bon," responded Steve leisurely, and, while the rest laughed at her discomfiture, Fat Joe leaned over and nudged Garry.

"What'd I tell you?" he demanded. "What'd I tell you? Say, ain't he working well tonight?"

There was no keeping the girl within doors after dinner was over. She ran upstairs and changed into moccasins and white blanket coat and skirt that barely met the moccasin tops halfway. And Steve, who had changed, too, and was waiting for her when she came down, had knotted a crimson scarf about the middle of his belted jacket to match the white one twisted about her throat.

The man and girl climbed far that night in quite unbroken silence. They had reached the crest of the first hill and stopped with the higher ridges in front of them, black bulks filigreed with white, before Barbara decided that she would have to make him talk.

From the first he talked fitfully that night. On other occasions she had noticed how his mind seemed to veer, whimsically, from one topic to another with little apparent continuity of thought, only to swing back again just when she was beginning to feel that she had lost the thread of inference to point his argument with parallels that were new and delightful wisdoms to her ears. But tonight his grave voiced divergences oftener than not left her thoughts behind his thoughts.

"It is a very easy country to get lost in," he remarked when he had had to insist that his sense of direction and not hers should be the one to be trusted.

"It doesn't seem complicated," he pondered. "To a man who has come into the world with his sense of north and south and east and west all safely relegated to his backbone instead of having to depend upon the flighty functions of his brain for his guide it's about the simplest thing there is. He finds his way without thinking about the lay of the land or moss on the trees or the sun or stars. But the other one—the one who has to stop and reason that he must travel so many miles to the west to reach home in the afternoon because he came that many in the morning—why, he even gets to doubting his compass, until night catches him without a roof over his head and no wood collected for a campfire."

"I shall try to remember that," she answered soberly. "If ever I am lost I—I shall try to wait confidently for daylight and keep my eyes to the fore."

She was near to tears when he stooped and knelt in the snow to tighten a thong slipping from one webbed foot. Below them stretched a plain of shimmering frost points, bounded by inscrutable walls of black timber. Somewhere within the warmer heart of a swamp a fox yapped hungrily; somewhere within her own heart his whimsical discourse had awakened a sense of the mystery of his wilderness—its friendship for those who love it—its implacable enmity for those who do not understand. And he looked up just when that emotion came flooding into her face.

"It is wonderful—wonderful—wonderful!" she breathed, throwing out both arms with that ecstatic impulsiveness which he knew so well. "Now I know why you said men always return to it once they have felt its spell."

"You are lovelier than you know!" came back from him, almost gruffly again, and she could not parry with lightness so swift and strained a speech.

"You always tell me very pretty things," was all she could think of to say in reply.

But then, rising, he flung back his head and shook himself as if throwing off a burden too restraining and irksome. He laughed aloud, and from that minute until he loosed her feet from the snowshoes he was more like her "blue flannel and corduroy" lover again. But his attack no longer made her fear herself.

"If I cared for you, yes," he made her admit before he would let her go in that night. "If I cared for you my engagement to no man could stand in the way. But that is the reason I know I do not care."

She had seen him grave with doubt that night; seen him fight to shake it off. There was doubt in his answer now.

"Because I am not"— But he could not force himself to ask it.

"Because I could never care as you would demand the woman should care who marries you."

She wanted to help him a little, she didn't know just why. Pity is a very dangerous emotion when pity is not sought.

"You are loving me that way this minute," he said, but his words were dogged. "Loving me more than you know."

There was neither reference to her letter nor mention of that night at Thirty Mile when she had stolen out to bid him goodby. Other long tramps followed on other pale and zero nights, but his attitude remained much the same.

* * * * * * *

"You will be coming back," he told her again the day he put her on the train. "You will be back in the spring?"

It was his old, hopeful challenge, with all the hope left out.

"I think so," she faltered in return. "I mean to come and see the completion of your work if father will let me." She knew a moment of confusion. "I wonder many nights if you are safe up here in the hills."

Indeed, Miss Sarah had made progress, though the surface indications were small. The girl would never think of him again simply in terms of blue flannel and corduroy. But that was not the most disturbingly vivid memory which she carried away with her.

"I love you." He framed the words silently as the train was pulling out, and, although their positions were reversed, the moment was so reminiscent of that day when he had leaned out of her father's switch engine cab and asked if she wanted a ride that it made her throat ache.

She waved a small gloved hand to him on the platform.

She did not want to go.

"AND IF YOU'RE GOING—WHY, GO!"

CHAPTER XVIII

Setting the Stage.

THERE are two interviews which should be mentioned here if for no other reason than merely because they were both so entirely the outcome of Miss Sarah's Christmas party. Neither of them was long. The last one which took place between Wickersham and the girl he was to marry was the briefer of the two. But her prettily serious argument that the 1st of May was too early a date for their wedding in view of the work which he had to do and her own state of unpreparedness left him so white of face that she felt guiltily sorry for him for many days to follow—felt guiltier still at the relief she experienced when she had established that reprieve. The other interview was longer and took place days earlier, but it was no more of a delight to Archibald Wickersham.

Dexter Allison had returned home almost a week in advance of his daughter, pleading stress of business, but in spite of the demands upon his time and attention he had found it impossible to forget the night of the dinner, when he had watched his daughter's eyes upon Stephen O'Mara's face.

He had been troubled more than a little since his Christmas trip to Morrison. The night before New Year's Wickersham was announced at 9. He was thinking of Barbara's mother when he beckoned his guest to a chair, shook his head over his red cheeks and offered a cigar.

"Devilish cold weather," he grunted none too graciously, for he had not wanted to be disturbed just then.

The younger man admitted that it was. His mind plainly was not upon the weather, but he found difficulty in introducing a topic of his own choosing. Outspokenness had never been one of Archie Wickersham's boldest characteristics, so Allison assisted him now. Allison liked a man to be outspoken.

"Well," he demanded, "let's hear it. What's on your mind?"

There are times when hatred will betray almost any man. Hatred now led Wickersham to speak not wisely, but with venom.

"I want you to refuse to renew your name on the East Coast notes," he said. "They are due on the second."

Few men had ever said "I want you to" to Dexter Allison and, as he put it, "got away with it to any great extent." And of all nights this one in particular was the least likely to prove propitious for such an attempt. That was Wickersham's oversight.

"So!" said Dexter. "So!" Well, now for your reason."

Wickersham had not learned until after Barbara's departure that she was spending the holidays in Morrison, for he had himself expected to be away. And it is only fair to the girl to say that she had honestly forgotten to apprise him of her plan, in her real excitement at going, but finding it out for himself had not made the fact any pleasanter to Wickersham.

"It should be clear enough without explanation"—he enunciated each word nicely—"if you want that road they are building."

Allison glanced up, surprised at the tone employed.

"Meaning of course I do," he mused. "And yet—and yet I don't know!"

Fear burned in the tall, thin man's eyes that night—fear that made his hatred for the absent man who was teaching him fear anything but a pretty thing to watch.

"I've tried to buy off their men." He was holding himself with an effort that made him tremble. "I've held up their supplies on every track that we control, but they've had the luck with them. They've made up lost time by working day and night. I've"—

"You've set a drunken fool to steal his plans," drawled the other with deadly sarcasm, "like a second rate one night stand villain. Don't forget to mention that too!" His lounging body shifted a little.

"Archie, do you remember what I told you about that woods rat, as you called him once? Did I tell you that he would fight? Well, listen, and listen closely, while I repeat it for you. He hasn't even warmed to it yet!"

Wickersham went yellow at that, but his icy self control held firm. He did not break into vituperation this night. He smiled, though his voice was only a whisper.

"Men have dropped out of sight before now in those woods," he husked. "I'll win or I'll see that he lies and rots in one of his own sink holes."

A big voice is a wonderful weapon at times. Allison's booming bass made Wickersham's threat seem only mean and hollow when the heavy man leaped to his feet and shook a finger under that high bridged nose.

"No, you won't!" he snapped. "No, you won't! And if I didn't know, after hearing you talk, that you haven't stuff enough in you to be dangerous I'd fix you so you'd be in no condition to bushwhack anybody for the next six months. I'm in a bad mood tonight. Drop out of sight, eh? You'll play this fair—fair at least as I see it by my standards, and they are better standards than yours. You've come dictating to me, ordering me to slip a knife into their backs. Are you that kind of a sneak? Did you think I was? Now, listen again, and listen well, for I mean what I say!

"I want that railroad if the man who is building it is too weak to keep me from taking it away from him. But if I don't get it on such a basis I'll know that there is a man at the head of it who is big enough to take care of my share of it. Have you got that? Very well. And now go back to your melodrama if you want to. Steal his men if he will let you. Fight him every inch of his construction that is your job and I'll still insist that it is his fault if he is tardy on the 1st of May. But it's you and O'Mara from now on, Archie. I'll be a spectator now. And, by gad, don't you ever come near me again with a request that I—don't you ever let me hear you threaten that you"—

Allison's face was suffused before he finished and Wickersham, astounded past utterance, slid from his chair away from that flourishing hand which had become a fist. It was no scene to take place between a man and his prospective son in law. Realizing that, Allison tried to laugh deprecatingly at his temper.

"Go out and get him, Archie," he invited. "I'll be watching, don't doubt that. And I know how much you want to win. It's a bigger stake than most folks realize."

The same day that more than half of O'Mara's men went on strike and deserted to the reserve company's payroll the news reached Allison that a trainload of laborers had been shot in to take their places—those very types of laborers which Steve himself had warned Elliott would not last an hour in the event of trouble. For a week Allison wondered that there was no clash between the displaced men who believed that the river was theirs alone and this new corps which Garry Devereau was handling at the lower end of construction, not by physical prowess, as Fat Joe had ruled, but just as surely and all because, as Joe himself put it, he could damn a man merely by bidding him good morning.

"Honey crossed north today to have a look at his winter cut," Joe would observe to his chief at supper at Thirty Mile, and before the night was many hours older Allison, too, in Manhattan, would have learned by wire in less picturesque phraseology that Archie Wickersham was missing no chances.

"They have now finished hauling their logs to the river," Joe told Steve one night after a prolonged scouting trip. "They are turning their attention to their float dams now."

And when that news was relayed to the big man who never ceased to watch he understood why there had been no violence when the rivermen went on strike.

It was the bitterest January that the hill country had known in twenty years, but mile by mile that month the twin line of steel crept steadily into the north under the urgings of Garry's smooth voice. The snowfall for February broke all records for half that period, but Steve, with his handful of men at Thirty Mile, put his piling down. And then it rained—it rained until small brooks ran torrents and the river tumbled white and thunderous its entire length.

The snow went off the last of March that spring, and the gorges could not carry away the water. The sun turned summer hot. It burned the higher ridges dry while the valleys still lay hidden in flood. It was August temperature the third Sunday in April, when Stephen O'Mara stood and watched beneath the glare of kerosene torches his bridge at Thirty Mile go into position between dark and dawn.

There was no man among them that day who did not show upon his face the strain they had been under. They were few, they were unshaven and dirty and lean as hungry hounds, but they were the men whom Steve had once bidden Hardwick Elliott to watch, once they had begun to scent combat. Fat Joe was no longer plump. Steve was worn down to actual thinness. And it would have taken a careful eye to have selected the chief from their ranks that Sunday.

The huge timbers had dropped into place like bits of jig sawed puzzle. At 3 in the afternoon, too tired both in body and soul for elation, Steve watched them drive home the last spike and heard their hoarse effort at a cheer. He had turned to start toward his shack, not like a man who knows that the end of a well nigh hopeless task is in sight, but like a beaten man. The 1st of May meant more to Steve than any clause of the East Coast company's contract could convey. He had not had even one letter since he put her upon her train. Wickersham's appearance on horseback at the head of the valley, picking his way around the flooded meadow, halted him in his heavy footed climb. A whistle shrilled far to the south of them, down the completed track. And then, after ten years and more, they were face to face again.

"That bridge will have to go down!" Wickersham was breathing hard, for all that he had been riding. "I am going through with my drive today!"

He had dismounted. Steve smiled at him.

"You're a whole week previous, Wickersham," he said wearily. "I'll be signaling for your first load of logs in less than sixty hours."

Archibald Wickersham wished that he could have believed it impossible, for it would have given him courage and lent conviction to his stand. But he knew just how fast those few remaining miles of open roadbed would be spanned. His eyes were furtive. There was no body to his voice.

"My men are on the banks," he blustered. "My first head of logs has started down. It's too late to argue now—too late for your promises that none but fools ever believed." The sure irrevocability of what he was saying blanched his cheeks. "I cannot wait for a miracle to be performed. My timber must come out on this flood."

Stephen O'Mara had whipped him once, but men had interfered. This day chance or destiny or fate whatever you may choose to call it saved him from destruction. The lean and weary man who had not been out of his clothes for three days and three nights, save for a plunge in the icy river, had taken his first step forward when the whistle screamed a nearer warning.

She had told him that she would come to see the finish of his race, but he had long since stopped believing that. And now when she stood and waved her hand at him from the brass railed observation platform of Allison's private car which a switch engine, out of patience with the grade was shunting across the lower end of the clearing he could only stand and stare dully, no faith in his eyes.

The loud plaid of her father's garb flashed behind her in the doorway. Hardwick Elliott's fine face speered over his shoulder. And Wickersham, who had not seen his fiancee in a month, had started toward them, stiffly erect in his immaculate habit.

"You should not be here," was all Steve said to her. "This is no place for you."

He shook hands with the men, mechanically. Allison quizzical, Elliott concerned. He went back to his bridge. The water had come up a half foot in the last few minutes some one—Fat Joe, perhaps—told him. It was sucking greedily at the piles. And in the north the ominous murmur had become a rhythmic roar.

Wickersham's men were driving the river. They were singing "Harrigan, That's Me!"

LANSING DEMANDS ANSWER FROM CARRANZA; REPORT ATTACKS ON TEXAS TOWNS BY BORDER BANDITS

GARRISON AT PRESIDO MAY BE WIPED OUT—CAVALRY RUSHED TO RESCUE AFTER REPORT OF REVOLT AT OJINAGA.

RAIDERS ARE HALTED 150 MILES IN U. S.

Two Soldiers in Fight at McDona When They Defend Bridge Against Bandits—Lansing Tells Carranza Ambassador This Country is Growing Impatient Over Delay in Answering Note—Mexico City is for Peace.

Washington, June 30.—With Washington growing impatient over the delay of Carranza in answering the American note of last Saturday there came to the War Department today two reports of attacks on Texas towns to add to the gravity of the Mexican situation.

One of these reports was from San Antonio, and told of an attack on American troops at McDona, Texas, last night. McDona is 150 miles north of the Mexican border and the bandits who made the raid were pursued. They were driven off after a sharp fight with soldiers in which two Americans were wounded, several Mexicans are reported killed and one bandit was captured.

Sometime last night a force of cavalrymen were sent out from El Paso on a twenty-four hour ride to Presidio to reinforce the garrison there after reports had been received of an attack by Carranza troops. The Carranza garrison at Ojinaga, across the border from Presidio, is composed of about 300 men under Col. Riojas. Only a handful of U. S. soldiers guarded the border at this spot. The report stated that the Mexicans had mutinied, killed their commander, and attacked the American town. If it proves true the garrison has probably been wiped out and the reinforcements will arrive in time for revenge, not rescue. Because of the strict censorship on border news no details of the attack can be obtained. The troops from El Paso will reach Presidio late today.

Secretary Lansing this morning notified Sen. Arrendondo, Mexican Ambassador-designate to the United States, that this country was growing extremely impatient over the Carranza delay in answering its note and that the answer must be forthcoming in a short time or a sharp inquiry would be made.

Mexicans Are off Peace.

Mexico City, June 30.—Instructions were sent today to Elisea Arredondo, Mexican Ambassador-designate at Washington, to treat with Secretary Lansing regarding the latest American note concerning the Carrizal affair.

Feeling among Mexican military men is gradually changing the first excitement over the Carrizal incident having subsided. They now see that Mexico would lose all by war. While still ready to defend their country against invasion, they say that peaceful relations between the two countries will help Mexico to become the strongest and largest Latin-American republic.

Situation Better.

Senor Aguilar, the Minister for Foreign Relations, said today that the situation was better, and he had every confidence that there would be no war with the United States.

Massacred American Wounded.

El Paso, Texas, June 30.—American wounded left on the battlefield at Carrizal were massacred by Mexican soldiers of the Carranza army, according to some of the twenty-three survivors of the Tenth Cavalry, who, with Scout Leon Spillsbury, have been delivered to Gen. George Bell, Jr., commanding the American troops here, and are today at Fort Bliss, awaiting a chance to rejoin their regiment in Mexico.

All the survivors were robbed of their money and personal belongings and were turned over to Gen. Bell yesterday in such a naked condition that entirely new outfits had to be furnished them.

The body of Capt. Boyd, commander of the American forces, has been burned by the Mexicans, according to the negroes.

Three of the negro troopers declared they were certain that several of the American wounded left on the field of battle at Carrizal subsequently were killed by the Mexicans. They added that forty-two Mexicans were killed and thirty-nine wounded.

Mexico Makes Counter Charge.

Mexico City, June 30 (via Galveston).—The following statement was given out early today by the Department of Foreign Relations of the Constitutionalist Government, as representing in fact its view on the United States reply to Gen. Carranza's note requesting the immediate withdrawal of troops from the Mexican territory:

"It seems strange that the Department of State should show surprise and disappointment for the tone and charcter of the note of the 22nd of May, which it calls discourteous when the very same Department of State has sent to the Constitutionalist Government not one but many notes not only discourteous but also haughty to say the least. During the same period to which the note alludes 140 Mexicans have been murdered in the U. S. territory by American civilians and the same government authorities have also participated, although the two countries were at peace, and in none of those cases, although representations have been made to the Department of State through our minister at Washington, the guilty have never been brought to justice or punished. These acts have been committed by Americans in American territory."

MISS MARY C. TRAYNOR GIVEN VARIETY SHOWER

Miss Mary Traynor, of Oxford place, was the guest of honor at a variety shower given for her last evening at the home of Miss Helen A. Bryniarski, of Duer street. A score of friends of the young woman gathered at the borough home to wish the bride-elect many good wishes and view the many handsome gifts, which included linen, cut glass and china ware.

During the evening piano selections were rendered by Miss Mary McCormack while Miss Josephine Murphy delighted the gathering with her power of revealing the past, telling the present and forecasting the future. Refreshments were served at a late hour. The marriage of Miss Traynor and Henry J. Bryniarski will take place this fall.

HELD COUNTRY FAIR.

A country fair was held in Debele's Auditorium last evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church. LOCAL YOUNG WOMAN BRIDE OF HARRY L. ALLEN

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Yates, of DeLacy avenue, was the scene of a pretty June wedding solemnized on Wednesday afternoon, when the latter's sister, Miss Elizabeth Agnes Terrill, became the bride of Harry Leonard Allen, of Dundee, Scotland. Rev. Dr. Whittaker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, performed the ceremony, in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. The bride wore a gown of white silk and crepe and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley.

Following a small reception, the couple departed for a wedding trip and on their return will reside in Elizabeth.

STILL DISAGREE OVER PURCHASE OF ENGINE

Councilmanic Fire Committee Votes to Let Council Decide Question.

With almost as many opinions as there are members of the committee, the councilmanic fire committee at a meeting last night was unable to come to any agreement as to what make automobile fire engine to recommend for purchase by the city, and it was finally decided that each member should report his own views to the city Council Monday night and let that body vote on the matter.

There were four members of the committee present last night and after considerable discussion, Councilman Charles C. Graves moved that the committee recommend the purchase of an Aaron-Fox engine for $9,000. This motion was lost, for the reason that Councilman Thomas F. Hylan and C. P. Hamilton favored the purchase of an American LaFrance engine at $8,000, while Councilman John H. Cose wanted his colleagues to recommend the purchase of a Watrous engine at the lowest bid received, $7,900.

The Aaron-Fox machine is of the piston type, while the Watrous and American LaFrance engine are of the rotary type. Both types have their supporters and consequently it is difficult for the committee to reach any agreement.

ST. MARY'S ALUMNI AFFAIR HELD IN SCHOOL HALL

The graduates of St. Mary's School gathered last evening as is their custom, in the school hall for the annual alumni meeting. During the evening vocal selections were rendered by Miss Mary Donnelly, accompanied by Miss Mollie Traynor at the piano. A new feature, entitled "A Dive Into the Archives," furnished plenty of amusement. Prophecies of former classes were read and these were compared with actual events as they happened. When John Caulfield's name was mentioned, a loud burst of applause rose up. The prophecy in question stated that "John would earn the praise of men." Father B. H. Bogan stated that he thought this prophecy had come true and that John had done all any man could do to earn the admiration of his fellow citzens. Caulfield graduated in the class of 1904.

Those who read prophecies were Miss Mary Murray, Miss Marion Harrington, William V. Sullivan and Edwin L. Sullivan. Piano selctions were served at a late hour and all departed to meet again next year.

LATZKO IS DENIED RIGHT TO TRANSFER

Borough Officials Appear Against Wholesale Whiskey Man.

Judge Daniel H. Beekman, of Somerset county court, this morning denied the application of Morris Latzko, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, for a transfer of his license. Latzko runs a wholesale whiskey house and bottling establishment there. He was represented by Judge William Newcorn in asking for the right to sell out his business. Mayor Smalley, of the borough, and Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., appeared to protest against the transfer and they presented a formal resolution of the Borough Council asking that the transfer be denied. Judge W. A. Coddington, who appeared for Latzko when he license was granted last year, also opposed the transfer.

MANY MOURNERS ATTEND FUNERAL OF J. O. OSGOOD

Relatives, friends and business associates, among whom were many New Jersey Central Railroad officials, attended the funeral service of Joseph O. Osgood, whose death occurred suddenly in Newark on Wednesday, which was held in the All Soul's Unitarian church this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. John Baltzley, officiated at the service.

There were many beautiful floral tributes in evidence, tokens of the esteem in which Mr. Osgood was held by his associates in business and friends. Among the profusion were several large set pieces from distant points. The interment will be at the convenience of the family at Milton, Mass.

MISS ANDERSON WED TO ARTHUR LOVELL

Ceremony Performed at Bridegroom's Home by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson.

Miss Gertrude Corwin Anderson, daughter of Mrs. C. G. Anderson, of 1224 Lenox avenue, became the bride of Arthur Lovell, son of Mrs. Leander N. Lovell, of 112 Crescent avenue, at the latter home at a ceremony performed at eight o'clock last evening. Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church officiated.

As the bridal party entered the parlor the wedding march was played by an orchestra. The bride wore an attractive gown of ivory satin, trimmed with silk net and family lace and a tulle veil caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. Her maid of honor, Miss Phoebe Lovell, a sister of the groom wore a gown of pink satin and carried an arm bouquet of flowers. The best man was Leander Lovell, a brother of the groom.

A reception followed the ceremony and was attended by nearly three hundred guests, coming from Yonkers, Westfield, Brooklyn, East Orange, Philadelphia and this city. The couple were showered with congratulations during the evening and at a late hour left for a wedding trip which will extend about a month. On their return they will reside at 1211 Martine avenue.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lovell have a large circle of friends in this city and the latter until recently taught junior English in the Plainfield High School. Mr. Lovell is a practicing attorney in New York City.

TO NAME CARROLL CLERK ON MONDAY

Council Agrees on a Successor to James T. MacMurray.

John J. Carroll will be nominated and elected city clerk at the Council meeting of next Monday night, according to plans of a majority of members. Since the resignation of James T. MacMurray weeks ago the office has been filled by George T. Wean, while members of the Council looked about for a successor. It is said that they have finally agreed on Mr. Carroll, also that this is the only application that has been received for the position, although several other names were frequently mentioned soon after the resignation of Mr. MacMurray became public. Mr. Carroll is at present connected with the legal department of the New Jersey Central railway company, but will resign, as the Council will insist on his giving all his time to the city. His salary will be fixed at $1,500 a year. Mr. Wean is to remain as stenographer to the Council and assistant clerk.

MANY ENJOY DANCE AT ELKS' CLUBHOUSE

Fully one hundred and fifty persons enjoyed the last of the season's dances given by Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., in the Watchung avenue clubhouse last night. The affair was in the nature of a "shirtwaist dance" and proved especially enjoyable to all, being a financial as well as a social success. The dance last night concludes the receptions of the club until the early fall when they will again be resumed. Van Eps brothers' banjo orchestra furnished music during the evening and refreshments were served.

The committee in charge of the affair last evening was composed of Harry DeMeza, Arthur Van Arsdale, J. Wendell Mosher, Allen Snyder and Frank R. Emmons.

RELATIVES FLOCK TO SEA GIRT TO BID FAREWELL TO TROOPERS AS PARTING TIME DRAWS NEAR PLAINFIELD GUARDSMEN DUE TO LEAVE FOR MEXICAN BORDER BEFORE NOON TOMORROW—PREPARE FOR LONG STAY.

EXPECTED THAT 100 MEN WILL ENTRAIN

Mounts Have Not Been Assigned as Yet—Chaplain J. Madison Hare Will Go With Fourth Regiment—New Equipment to Replace That Taken Away by Troop C Arrived at Camp Yesterday—Many Local Visitors.

MOBILIZATION CAMP, SEA GIRT, June 30.—With less than twenty-four hours remaining for them in New Jersey, the men of Troop D, of Plainfield, are devoting their time today to getting ready to leave Sea Girt for the front, probably before noon tomorrow. Fully prepared for a stay of months, if necessary, the Plainfield citizen soldiers are cheerfully going about their military duties, but less cheerfully taking leave from the scores of relatives that came down today by train and automobile for a farewell.

The boys have had little military duty to perform in the last twenty-four hours. They have not yet received their horses, and it is very possible that they will go away without any mounts, other than a few that were brought from Plainfield, which have not been rejected.

The troop is still a little short of the full enlistment, but it is expected that 100 men will go away with it tomorrow, as well as the three officers. Captain Borden and Lieutenant Charles spent almost the entire day yesterday getting the supplies into camp, and during the afternoon several big army wagon loads of equipment were hauled to the camp to replace that taken away by Troop C. The men unpacked this and soon had it sorted out and given to the troopers who were short because of the change made on Monday.

In the regimental camp, Chaplain J. Madison Hare, of the Fourth Regiment, was busy today getting ready to go away with the Fourth Regiment. Mrs. Hare came down yesterday from Scotch Plains, accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Wescott, and Mrs. A. D. Beeken, to bid farewell to the popular clergyman. He has passed all the physical tests required, and will be one of the busiest men with the regiment after it leaves for the border as he will have to care for the spiritual welfare of nearly 1,800 men when the command reaches full war strength.

Aside from the horses, which may arrive in time to go on with the troop, all equipment except saddles is now in hand. The men will probably take down their big tents, and pack all possible supplies in wagons before night fall, and spend the night in the little shelter tents, which are carried on short hikes.

In reply to Governor Fielder's recent telegram to President Wilson asking that the New Jersey troops be among the first called for Federal service and that the organizations not included in the President's call be mobilized, the President has written the Governor as follows:

"I have your telegram of June 21st. It is fine to think how promptly the Jersey boys got ready. I feel some hesitation in interfering with the plans of the War Department, because I know how well and how thoroughly they have studied them out with a view to disposing of the troops most effectively on the border, but you may be sure we shall want the Jersey men as soon as it is possible to send them. We have not called out the whole force of the States where there may conceivably be some other work for the National Guard to do and you may be sure that that is the only reason."

MISS LENOLA HUTCHINGS MARRIES DAVID ROGERS

Miss Lenola Hutchings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hutchings, of Elm street, Westfield, became the bride of David Rogers, of this city, at the Church of the Transfiguration, New York, yesterday afternoon. The couple were attended by Miss Hazel Hammeal and George Coles, also of this city. The bride wore a grey serge traveling suit and white hat and carried a boquet of orchids. Her maid of honor wore a blue taffeta gown and carried a bouquet of roses.

Following the wedding ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers left immediately for an automobile trip through the New England States, and will return to Plainfield the latter part of July, when they will go to housekeeping in their newly furnished home on Madison avenue.

Both Mr. Rogers and his bride are popular in their respective communities and the former is treasurer of the Plainfield Theatre, in this city.

FATHER HART OBSERVES HIS 20TH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Father Peter J. Hart, pastor of St. Joseph's church, in North Plainfield, yesterday quietly observed the twentieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood, all of which time has been spent in the Trenton Diocese. During the day floral remembrances were sent to the rectory as tokens from his many friends.

Father Hart came to the borough congregation on October 1, 1904 succeeding the late Rev. William H. Miller, who presided as pastor for twenty-seven years and under whose guiding hand the present handsome edifice was built. Previous to coming here, Father Hart held the pastorate of the Church of the Sacred Heart, at Mount Holly, for fourteen years. Since his advent to St. Joseph's notable improvements have been made by him and his pleasing personality has already won for him hundreds of friends both among his parishioners and outsiders. Last week Father Hart had an assistant appointed to help him, the Rev. Father Campbell, who was ordained recetnly at Buffalo, after the completion of his seminary studies at Niagara University.

JUDGE ORDERS DRIVER TO PENSION OLD WORK HORSE

Frank Caponetti, charged with cruelty to animals, was given a suspended sentence by Judge DeMeza in police court this morning. He was arrested on complaint of Mrs. VanHoesen, agent for the society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Caponetti was accused of driving a horse over the streets that was unfit for work. Judge DeMeza gave him a lecture, and ordered the horse pensioned. If it is used in Plainfield again the driver will be fined.

WARNED AGAINST FAKE U. S. REVENUE COLLECTOR

Before Plainfield saloon men and tobacco dealers pay their revenue tax to an agent of the government they had better be certain of the identity of the collector. A "bogus" revenue collector is working in this district and he may be in this city at any time, provided he does not learn that the local police are warned and are watching for him. The U. S. Internal Revenue office in Elizabeth yesterday called Chief Kiely and told him that a "fake" collector was at work in the district and that he was believed to be coming to Plainfield. So far as is known he has not yet visited this city.

O'SULLIVAN PICKS UP THIRTEEN YEAR OLD YOUTH

Marshal Florence O'Sullivan, of Scotch Plains, picked up Gerald Stack, a thirteen-year-old lad of Brooklyn, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, as the boy was passing through this place with a horse and wagon. The rig had been taken from the Bound Brook station and the boy was turned over to the authorities of that place.

Stack first started on his journey of adventure Tuesday morning, when he is alleged to have taken money his mother had given him for groceries to buy a ticket through New Jersey. After being in Bound Brook all day he longed for home and took the horse and rig belonging to a Martinsville woman to get home in. He had gotten as far as this place when the marshal was suspicious at seeing him alone at such an hour and detained him.

Joe Eller, of Scotch Plains, is seriously ill and his friends are feeling concerned about his condition, which seems to be getting worse.

Miss Dorothy McVoy, of Westfield, has been visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George McVoy, of Front street.

George Blythe, of Farley avenue, has taken a position with the Scott Printing Press Company, of Plainfield.

The next meeting of the Saturday Night Club will be held tomorrow night in the Fanwood firehouse.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

There is no sign of waning interest in "Hello New York," which begins the eighth wek of its highly successful engagement at the Columbia Theatre Monday afternoon, July 1. Unlike most musical productions that achieve success and settle down for long runs, this lively performance of burlesque is kept constantly fresh by the weekly introduction of new dialogue and songs which furnish added attractiveness and make repeated delight. For the eighth week Lew Kelly and his associates in the cast visits to the Columbia a continuous have provided much new material satirizing current events of the day, and the big chorus of sprightly girls, which constitutes one of the most delightful features of the performance, will display their agility and effective voices in several new musical numbers. "Hello New York" has undoubtedly become an all-summer fixture at the Columbia.

PREVENTION OF FOURTH OF JULY TETANUS

Valuable Information Made Public by U. S. Health Department.

Back in 1905 there were 104 deaths in the United States from Tourta of July tetanus, this figure representing about the average annual mortality. In 1914, as a result of the institution of better prophylactic treatment by physicians and the widespread agitation for a safe and sane Fourth, the number was reduced to three. A year ago the U. S. Public Health Service would be safe from T Health Service expected and predicted that every youngster in the United States would be safe from this disease, basing its estimate on what had already been accomplished. When the returns came in it was found that a boy down in Maine had been injured, developed tetanus and died. That single fatality was only one among several hunred thousand occurring in the United States during 1915, but it resulted from Fourth of July tetanus or lockjaw, a preventable disease, and was therefore an unnecessary dath. The loss of this boy makes it neecssary to again disseminate information regarding this wholly avoidable infection.

The blank cartridge wound is the great cause of Fourth of July tetanus, but injuries from crackers and firearms are at times responsible. When driven in to the tissues the wadding carries with it innumerable bacilli. If these be tetanus bacilli the poisonous products or toxins resulting from their multiplication produce the disease. Tetanus bacilli thrive only in the absence of oxygen. It is for this reason that he physician enlarges the wound of entrance and after removing all foreign material dresses the injury in such a manner that development of the organisms is inhibited. In order to accomplish this it is usually necessary to administer an anaesthetic. Antitetanic serum is of great value as a prophylactic and it should invariably be given to injuries of this character.

Parents should realize that Fourth of July tetanus is easy to prevent but extremely difficult to cure, the disease being attended with a mortality of more than 95 per cent. No blank cartridge wound is too trivial to receive careful medical attention. However at once institute the necessary prophylactic measures. Reliance upon home treatment may prove disastrous and result in the needless sacrifice of life.

A Tale of Two Cities

Little chap with the shining eyes,
Stretching a slender hand
Toward the shadowy hills and the smiling skies
Of faraway Grownup Land.
It is all a wonderful world to you,
And boyhood is hard to bear
As you dream of the things you are going to do
When the years shall have borne you there.

The long, long years, how they drag today!
How dreary their cycle seems
When one is eager to be away
To the land of his morning dreams,
To do the deeds that the great have done,
And, with courage proud and high,
To win the battles that must be won
In the City of By and By!

Worn old man, with the wistful eyes,
Bending a weary gaze
Toward the ghostly woods and the misty skies
Of the country of other days—
A wonderful world it used to be,
But Youth was beside you then,
And now he has fled you shall never see
Its blossoming woods again.

The short, short years, how they pass today,
Like the shadows of clouds in flight,
Over a head that is bent and gray,
Hurrying toward the night!
Yet in the depths of the weary eyes
There still is a gentle glow
As they gaze afar toward the distant skies
Of the City of Long Ago!

NEW DESIGNS CHOSEN FOR OUR SILVER COINS

Different Money Will Be Minted by Government After July 1.

Dimes, quarters and half dollars of new design will be minted after July 1, Secretary McAdoo announced the other day. For the first time since 1891 a change will be effected in these pieces. The announcement disclosed that the half dollar has fallen practically into disuse. The new design was selected with the hope of restoring it to more general circulation.

Under the new coinage each piece will be of different design. The half dollar and dime models were made by Adolph A. Weinman and the quarter dollar by Hermon A. MacNeil. Both are sculptors of note.

The face of the new half dollar bears a full length of Liberty, with a background of the American flag flying to the breeze. The goddess is striding toward the dawn of a new day, carrying laurel and oak branches, symbolic of civil and military glory. The reverse side shows an eagle perched high upon a mountain crag, wings unfolded. Growing from a rift in the rock is a sapling of mountain pine, symbolic of America.

The design of the twenty-five cent piece is intended to typify the awakening of the country to its own protection, Secretary McAdoo's announcement stated. Liberty, a full length figure, is shown stepping toward the country's gateway, bearing upraised a shield from which the covering is being drawn. The right hand bears an olive branch of peace. Above the head is the word "Liberty" and below the feet "1916." The reverse bears the inscriptions "United States of America" and "E Pluribus Unum." Both the half dollar and the quarter bear the phrase "In God We Trust."

The design of the dime is simple. Liberty with a winged cap is shown on the fore side, and on the reverse is a design of a bundle of rods and a battle-ax, symbolical of unity, "wherein lies the nation's strength."

MOSBY A GOOD SOLDIER.

Kept Northern Forces In Virginia and Maryland In Dread.

Colonel John Singleton Mosby, the most famous Confederate raider of the civil war, who died in Washington the other day after a long illness, was a native of Virginia and was eighty-two years old.

Colonel Mosby's death, his physicians said, was due solely to old age, and he was conscious and interested in what was going on about him until an hour before he passed away.

There are few careers which in intensity of interest can equal that of Colonel Mosby. Mosby's command, or "Mosby's Men," as they came to be known, were the dread of all the Federal forces in northern Virginia and Maryland during the civil war.

His cavalry command played havoc with the opposing lines. Many were the federal cavalry outposts and supply trains which this band of fearless men captured.

Hairbreadth escapes were as common to them as the incidents of ordinary life today. Many were the times when Mosby and his men saw hope of life vanish, for they knew no quarter would be given them.

But in spite of all federal efforts the great leader never was taken. In his books, "Mosby's War Reminiscences" and "Stuart's Cavalry Campaign," much is told of warfare in Virginia.

In recent years Colonel Mosby became reticent. Only with his most intimate friends would he discuss the issues of the "lost cause" or his many daring escapes from the enemy's lines and his capture of federal troops. He preferred to let the records of history speak for themselves.

PUFFING UP THE OYSTER.

Showing How Easily Four Quarts May Be Swelled Into Five.

Adulteration of oysters on the half shell, freshly opened, might be thought as difficult as adulteration of unpeeled fruit. But the purists to whom all things are impure have discovered that oysters are "adulterated" by soaking them in fresh water. It is not suggested that the water is unwholesome, either for the oysters or those who eat them. But that is not to the point. These things are all arranged for us at Washington, and the department of agriculture, which is particularly devoted to oyster culture, has issued a formal statement to all and sundry regarding the heinous practice of making oysters look plump and white by soaking them in water. It is official information that if four quarts of oysters and a quart of fresh water are placed in a five quart container and the mixture allowed to stand for several hours there will be a marked change in the appearance of the contents of the container. To the naked eye there will appear to be five quarts of dry oysters, for the container will be full and there will be little or no water in sight, it being on the inside of the plump, succulent looking oysters. The average purchaser has no means of detecting the addition of water.

That relates only to "shucked" oysters. Half shell oysters "drink" water, and thus undersized oysters may be converted into "select," beyond the detection of any but a chemist. The purpose of publishing these facts is to make it known to all lawbreakers and oyster caterers that all such oysters are "adulterated under section 7 of the food and drugs act," which provides that food is adulterated "if a substance has been substituted in whole or in part for the article."

LAW OF MOTION.

Why a Ball Follows You if Thrown In the Air While You Walk.

When you throw a ball into the air while moving your body forward or backward, either slowly or fast, the ball partakes of two motions—the upward and the forward or backward motion of your body. The ball possessed the motion of your body before it left your hand to go up into the air because your body was moving before you threw it up, and the ball was a part of you at the time.

If you are moving forward up to the time you throw the ball into the air and stop as soon as you let go of the ball, it will fall at some distance from you. Also if you throw the ball up from a standing position and move forward as soon as the ball leaves your hand the ball will fall behind you, provided you actually threw it straight up.

Of course you know that the earth is moving many miles per hour on its axis and that when you throw a ball straight into the air from a standing position, the earth and yourself, as well as the ball, move with the earth a long distance before the ball comes down again. The relative position is, however, the same. We get our sense of motion by a comparison with other objects. If you are in a train that is moving swiftly and another train goes by in the opposite direction, moving just as fast, you seem to be going twice as fast as you really are. If the train on the other track, however, is going at the same rate of speed and in the same direction as you are you will appear to be standing still.

Going back to the ball again, you will find that it always partakes of the motion of the body holding it in addition to the motion given when it is thrown up.—Philadelphia Press.

Old Time Crinoline.

The crinoline—under another name—was known and denounced in the eighteenth century, as witness the pamphlet published in England in 1745 under title of "The Enormous Abomination of the Hoop Petticoat, as the Fashion Now Is."

At that time the hoop, usually of whalebone, was often "so large as to fill the space of six men," and in 1754 a writer in the Connoisseur speaks of "hoops" capable of contracting or expanding "from the size of a butter churn to the circumference of three hogsheads."

PLANNING FOR LUNCHEON.

A meeting was held on Wednesday afternoon in the parlors of the Congregational church to discuss plans for a luncheon to be given by the Plainfield Federation of Women's Missionary Societies in October. Committees representing the various churches of Plainfield were appointed by Mrs. J. M. Whiton, who presided during the session. These women will begin at once to perfect their plans for a successful affair in the autumn.

LEAVES FOR LAKE HOPATCONG.

Thomas Muir, of Grant avenue, left this morning for Lake Hopatcong, where he will open his camp on Halsey Island. Mr. Muir will not conduct the camp as in former years, but will devote a large part of his time to other interests.

LOCAL OPTION MEETING.

The North Plainfield Local Option League will hold a meeting in the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church on July 7, at 8 o'clock. At that time plans will be perfected for the league's campaign.

COLORED SERVANT IS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Miss Carrie Maury, colored, employed in the family of E. H. Booth, of Central avenue, was found dead in bed early Wednesday morning. Death was ascribed to acute indigestion and heart trouble. Miss Maury retired on Tuesday evening in her usual good health and her death was entirely unexpected. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon from the residence of her brother, John W. Maury, '41 Webster place, at 2:30 and will be in charge of Rev. Charles S. Sedgwick. Interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

Miss Maury came to Plainfield nine years ago from Charlottesville, Va., and during the time has been employed as maid in several of the most prominent families of the city. She was of an unusually obliging disposition and well liked by all who knew her. Beside John W. Maury, she leaves one other brother, Robert Maury, of Trenton, and two sisters, Mrs. Annie Hamer, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Mamie Jackson, of New York.

CARDINAL GIBBONS CELEBRATES TODAY

Has Been a Priest for Fifty-five Years—81 Years of Age.

Baltimore, Md., June 30.—His eminence James Cardinal Gibbons today rounds out his fifty-fifth year as a priest of the Roman Catholic church and completes his thirtieth year in the cardinalate. The double anniversary is one of interest not only to himself, but to the people of this city and to those of the whole United States, in which he is the primate of the church. The Cardinal will not single out the day by any special observance, though reminded of the anniversary by the receipt of messages of greeting from many friends throughout the country.

The Cardinal will reach his eighty-second birthday next month. The years have told lightly upon him, and few would judge to look at him that he had passed the four-score milestone. Never what can be termed robust, a frugal husbandry of his physical powers has more than atoned for what nature did not bestow. Many a man of giant stature, minus the great reserve power of the Cardinal, would have succumbed to the tremendous mental strain which his high office entails.

In the upbuilding of the faith he espouses, the Cardinal has labored in season and out of season. There are today more eloquent men in the Catholic church than he, but his strength does not lie in eloquence. In his cool judgment, in his power to discern, in his calm interpretation of every question presented, in his moderation, in his vast learning, in a word, in his statesmanship lies the power of the Cardinal Archbishop of Baltimore.

The Cardinal's mode of living is simple in the extreme. Much of his time is spent in his library, which is one of the most extensive in the South. He is fond of his daily walk and in good or bad weather never misses it except on extraordinary occasions. His favorite morning ramble is downtown in the shopping and business districts. On the streets he is known to everyone and he answers in a friendly maner the salutations of the humblest. It is no unusual thing to see him stop on a street corner and chat with several old women, or to halt to pat the head of a little child in charge of a nurse.

PURE FOOD LEAGUE IS FOR FRELINGHUYSEN

In recognition of his advocacy of pure food legislation while he was a member of the New Jersey Legislature, the American Pure Food League has indorsed the candidacy of Joseph S. Frelinghuysen for the United States Senate. In a letter to Miss Alice Lakey, executive secretary of the league, Robert Allen, of Lexington, Ky., the president, calls attention to some of the laws for which Mr. Frelinghuysen was either sponsor or an ardent advocate.

Among these are mentioned the act prescribing the standard for milk, an act governing creameries; the law to secure the purity of foods, drugs, beverages, medicines, etc., and to prevent deception in distribution thereof; the act to keep oyster beds free from contamination and the cold storage law.

Mr. Frelinghuysen's efforts to stamp out tuberculosis among cattle and his campaign against the hoof-and-mouth disease are also praised.

WHAT FREEHOLDERS ARE FOR.

Up in Warren county, where the investigation of county affairs is going on, some enlightening testimony is being placed on the records, says the Newark News. When former Judge Gnichtel asked a freeholder witness what he thought of the whole system of members of the board going out when they feel like it to "view" work in progress and then charge the county $2 a day for the service, the reply was very frank.

"That's what freeholders are for."

This reply will not become as famous as the "What are we here for?" query by Flanagan, of Texas, but it is fully as suggestive. Such an answer doesn't indicate that Warren is in an exceptional class. The "viewing" charge of $2 a day has been the ordinary practice under large board rule in every rural county in the State for years. Back in 1901, in Warren's neighbouring county of Hunterdon, a freeholder was asked to give an explanation of a bill he had rendered for thirty-one days of work in the month of February, and he replied without a blush that he made three "views" of bridges in a single day, and it was the custom to charge such "view" as a day's work.

Down in Middlesex, before the county adopted the Strong small board act, one of the freeholders made it his custom to prepare a bill for each week day of the month and file it with the clerk, accompanied by the request:

"Go over this, John, compare it with the calendar, and if there are no Sundays in it, I'll swear to it."

The same rule prevailed in Passaic county in the old days, and it was no cause for surprise when freeholders turned in monthly charges for thirty days of work for the county and still did not neglect their private business or be prevented from attending church services on Sundays. The people of a number of counties didn't object to this, for they knew it was the custom, and they also had the idea that "that's what freeholders are for." In other counties, however, there has been a change of belief on this matter, and members of county boards are really expected to do business in a businesslike way. It has been hard work to break an old and bad habit, but the break is well under way.

DOES NOT MEAN PEACE.

When Carranza ordered the release of twenty-two U. S. troopers captured in the Carrizal massacre he gained a diplomatic victory in his battle with Washington which will prove of untold value in winning South American sentiment for his country in case war does come, and yet the bewhiskered bandit, with a shrewdness not suspected, leaves the real issues of the trouble yet unsettled. He is now in the position of having surrendered "prisoners of war" at a great sacrifice to the national honor (?) of Mexico for the purpose of averting war with the United States. That his soldiers took these prisoners in a battle commenced by treachery against a friendly expedition must not be forgotten. Turning the prisoners over to their command in not enough. There must be an apology for the attack on the expedition and, more than this, there must be some assurance that there will not be a repetition of the attack. Carranza only saved his own skin when he released the prisoners. Gen. Pershing was perfectly able to go and get them, and was probably willing. In demanding their release President Wilson also demanded a plain statement of the attitude of Mexico toward the punitive expedition and until this is given, or refused, war with Mexico has not been averted. That the mobilization of militiamen on the border is not stopped is proof that Washington still expects trouble.

• • • • • •

England, perhaps, could do nothing else with a prisoner convicted of conspiracy against the Crown, but the world softens with sympathy its judgment of the crimes of Sir Roger Casement. It was not proven that he accepted money from the enemies of England, or that the Irish rebellion was born of the Kaiser. Instead the kindly old nobleman convinced all that he acted purely out of love for the Irish patriots and a burning desire to see the Island people free. The same motives were in the hearts of America's noblemen who rebelled against the English Crown in 1776. They are criminal only when unsuccessful. It is little that Sir Roger asks now. Condemned to die he makes no appeal for mercy, asking only that he die as a nobleman—hanged by a silken cord.

• • • • • •

A pleasing evidence of the growing efficiency and strength of the United States army, regular or volunteer, is shown in the manner that railroads have been ordered around by militia officers on the way to the border. When the First New Jersey regiment commander did not think he was moving fast enough he ordered his train crew to "speed up" or be punished. A New York regimental commander also tired of jogging over the country at cattle train speed fixed a minimum of thirty miles an hour for the troop train. He is getting it. A little more show of authority where the good of the service demands it and the entire country will give thanks.

• • • • • •

Tomorrow Troop D, made up of Plainfield boys, is off to the front, according to authentic reports from Sea Girt. This little band of business men was the first to answer when the call to arms was sounded, and the two weeks spent "at home" has been two weeks of the hardest kind of work getting ready for "action." When the men reach the border every member will be "fit" for real service, and as the shirkers have been weeded out—there were only two or three—the troop will give a good account of itself in any engagement that may come its way. Plainfield's heart and its prayers go with its "boys" to Mexico.

• • • • • •

Not all of the Plainfield militiamen who are coming home from Sea Girt are "quitters." Some of them were willing and anxious to do their "bit" and feel the disappointment keenly, but were refused by examining surgeons. They carry a discharge that is just as honorable as one given a veteran at the close of a real war. Unless local people get their facts straight some serious mistakes are sure to be made when judgment is passed on those left behind.

• • • • • •

Col. Austen Colgate will not go to the border with the New Jersey militia. He probably finds enough "snipers" in the ranks of Republicans to keep him busy at home for several weeks.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Our Feline Opera.

The Wagner staff cannot commence
With operas we have on our fence.
Our operas start about midnight
And last right through till broad daylight.
We have our prima donna and
A tenor who is simply grand;
Caruso never tried to get
The note that he can reach, you bet.
Our mezzo and our baritones
Can sing until they jar your bones.
Their music has the Wagner kind
Backed off the pavement, to my mind.

Of course, sometimes, they're jealous, too,
And fight like prima donnas do.
And when they cross each other's path
They open vials of their wrath,
And talk about each other in
A manner that seems like a sin.
But still their music rings quite true
Compared with some I've listened to.
Upon the grand operatic stage,
Where screeching seems to be the rage.
Cat operas may not be "grand,"
But they're the kind I understand.

Uncle Abner

It takes a lot more nerve, confidence and optimism to be an employer than to be an employe.

Clothes don't make the man, but the feller with his pants pressed and his shoes polished stands the best show of gettin' the big job.

If a feller wants to find out just how small he really is all he has to do is to look over a map of the world and try to find the village he lives in.

Outside of the musical critics who can't make music, about the most numerous thing in this country is the literary expert who can't get anything published.

Hank Purdy's wife says she never misses him. She must be able to throw straighter than most wimmen.

It seems as though when a feller hasn't got anything else to do he gets up a new brand of toothpaste.

I always like to hear a feller brag that he is a self-made man, for then I know that nobody else is to blame.

The chief smoke nuisance is the wise gink who dispenses good advice in the smoking compartment of the chair car.

Hank Tumms says he is gettin' so skeptical lately that when anybody offers to give him anything he always wonders what is the matter with it.

There is only one thing as uncertain in this world as a woman, and that is some other woman.

Rev. Hanks smelled whiskey on Hod Peters' breath the other day and chided him for drinking. Hod says the dominie goes altogether too much on circumstantial evidence.

Elmer Jones says, "Vanity, vanity, all is vanity." The milliner ain't looked at Elmer since T. Egbert Peavy got one of them new style soft hats with a little bow in the back.

Hot Weather Thoughts.

One should always beware of falling icicles when walking along a business street where the buildings are high. Some of them are heavy and fall with terrific force, sufficient in fact to smash a derby hat.

So far as is known there is no form of life in the vicinity of the south pole, the temperature there being much lower than at the north pole.

In many sections of Siberia the natives construct their houses of blocks of ice, which afford good protection from the biting winds and the very low temperature outside.

Many persons have lost their lives in snow slides on the mountains of Alaska.

Eggs.

Scrambled eggs can be made to serve more persons than the same number of fried or boiled eggs. To "stretch" the serving capacity add a spoonful of boiled rice, when scrambling them. And there are some eggs you can scramble and pass around to twenty persons and still be unable to get rid of them.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Mae Marsh and Robert Harron are co-stars in a gripping Triangle at Proctors' today, entitled "A Child of the Paris Streets," in which Tully Marshall also assumes a prominent part. There is a big note in this picture to set women thinking for the entire plot turns on the subject of maternal love. True, the mother concerned is only an old hag, who is queen of the Paris apaches, but she is a mother for all that, and her affection for her thieving boy who is about to be sentenced to the galleys is no common one. She loves him better than her own disreputable life, and when the presiding judge refuses to commute his judgment on the poor wretch before him, she determines he shall be made to suffer as she suffers. Accordingly she sends her other son to steal the judge's baby daughter from her cradle. She does not kill the child, but raises her as an apache, makes her a criminal in every way possible, taking delight in her vengeance and its living reminder. In fact, the great question of the play is "Which is the strongest maternal or paternal love?" for the judge leaves no stone unturned in his effort to find his baby. Other features today include William Collier in a Keystone comedy entitled "Willie's Wobbly Ways," and the latest Animated News Weekly.

Tomorrow Francis X. Bushman, the talented Metro star, heads a large cast of capable artists in "The Wall Between," adapted to the screen from the novel by Ralph D. Paine. "The Wall Between" provides Francis X. Bushman with one of those typical roles in which he shines and this time he appears as an enlisted man of the United States Army, at the mercy of the social wall that separates common soldiers from officers. In addition tomorrow Gretchen Lederer and Val Paul are co-starred in "Love Triumphant," and there are numerous other comedy films.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the big film sensation of the year, "Where Are My Children?" will be the headline attraction at Proctors' with Tyrone Power in the leading role. The regular serial productions will be added features on their respective days, which include "The Mysteries of Myra," "The Secret of the Submarine" and "The Iron Claw."

PATRIOTIC EXERCISES.

The members of the Holy Name and other local Catholic organizations have been invited to take in patriotic exercises to be held in Roselle on the morning of July Fourth. The exercises will be held under the auspices of the Holy Name Society of that place. It is probable that the Tab Fife and Drum Corps will take part in the demonstration.

FOOTPRINTS ON THE SANDS OF TIME

EDUCATION NOTES

Northampton, Mass.—A majority of the students at Smith College, which may be taken as typical of the great Eastern colleges for women, spend less than $800 a year each for all purposes in a scholastic year, while the expenditures of the richest and the poorest students are not so far apart in amount or so unlike in their distribution for pleasures or necessities as to create social distinction, according to a survey of undergraduate budgets that has just been made by Dean Ada L. Comstock. The average expenditure of 421 young women was found to be $765.55, or a total of $322,297.43. The accounts of the young women ranged from $350 to $1,850. However, more than 52 per cent. of the students spent between $600 and $900. On the basis of the average of the 421 students who turned in their complete accounts, the total expenditure of the entire student body, 1,600 was estimated to be $1,300,000 for each scholastic year.

New York.—Preparedness and the making of military training compulsory in school will be a leading topic at the annual convention of the National Educational Association which opens here next week, and will bring to this city more than 25,000 educators and their families. The action of the New York Legislature in making military training compulsory in schools has awakened general interest throughout the country. Another theme is going to be the teaching of agriculture in city schools. One of the interesting figures at the convention will be John Conway, a native Mexican, superintendent of schools of Santa Fe County, N. M., who put up forty-nine schoolhouses without a cent of appropriation by the State. He did it by a sort of "school revival," raising money by contributions.

London.—College and university men in England have given splendid response to the country's call for patriots, and Oxford University's "Roll of Honor" among them is a notable one. The total of members of the 'varsity serving in the army amounts to 10,500. The total deaths exceed 825 and nearly a hundred have been reported missing. About 460 have been mentioned in the dispatches for conspicuous bravery, and seven have obtained the Victoria Cross.

Chicago.—Seventy-five students from Yale, Harvard, Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania are receiving $77 a month this summer from the Pullman Company to serve as conductors on the great Eastern lines. This is the first time in sixteen years that the company has gone to colleges for help, the first experiment having been made sixteen years ago and not renewed. The move, it is explained, is not due to a scarcity of applicants, but to the fact that undergraduates are peculiarly fitted for sumer employment and can return to their books when the rush of summer travel is over. Representatives of the Pullman visited the universites above mentioned for the special purpose of recruiting students for Pullman jobs.

Trenton.—The State Board of Education is considering the advisability of lengthening the school year. For administrative purposes and the division of the school monies the year is now 180 days, and not less than four hours constitute a school day. Advocates of the reform desire to make the year not les than 200 days in the normal schools, in the hope of reducing the teachers' course from two years to 18 months, possibly by the introduction of summer sessions.

200 GREENBACK DONATIONS WANTED

Dollar Philanthrophy Will Make Fourth of July Celebration a Great Success.

Dollar philanthropy is the mighty force that is going to make the Fourth of July celebration here on Tuesday a successful reality. About two hundred more greenback donations will pay all the bills and leave no blemish on the patriotic record of Plainfield.

But there is another kind of philanthropy that is making Plainfield as famous as the dollar bills they give so freely to public benefactions. It is best described by stating the fact that at the rehearsal of the Community Choir and Orchestra last night at the High School auditorium more than 350 persons responded to the call for volunteer service at the big celebration next week. To this number must be added a great many more who were not able to be present, but who will be found on the platform as singers on Tuesday.

Champlain L. Riley, chairman of the arrangements for the big Independence Day festival, expressed himself as delighted with the enthusiasm of the Community Choir last night and said that the indications potated to a remarkably fine program for that day. Clifford A. Braider, leader, also thanked the choir for their enthusiasm.

In order to take care fully of the details of the enterprise this ways and means committee was appointed: F. O. Dunning, chairman; G. W. Hartley, Christopher Utzinger, J. Raymond Cutter, A. W. Dunning and H. E. Bunker.

The decorations at City Park will be unique. For the first time in the history of Plainfield there will be a general public massing of lodge standards. These are to be arranged with other decorations at the park for this occasion by a committee on decorations selected last evening comprising Miss Etta Raybert, Mrs. Clifford A. Braider, Mrs. George Muntz, Mrs. R. A. Grant, Miss Myrtle Fedderman, Mrs. P. I. Minturn, Mrs. J. B. Carhart, Miss Elizabeth I. Doig, Miss Pansy Eaton, Miss May Bennett, Miss Erma G. FUNERAL SERVICE OF REV. FRANK FLETCHER

Rev. Dr. Strong Officiates, Assisted by Rev. Dr. Anderson and Rev. J. O. McKelvey.

The funeral of Rev. Frank Fletcher, whose death occurred at Newton Highlands, Mass., on Wednesday, was held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Robert L. Giddes, 54 Grove street, North Plainfield, and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including a number of his former parishioners from the New Market Baptist church, which he served for fourteen years.

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, conducted the service and made the address, while Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, and Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, assisted with the reading of the Scripture and prayer.

There were many beautiful floral tributes, including a large wreath from Plainfield Lodge of Elks, in appreciation of his interest in the lodge, having assisted at its memorial services. There was also a spray from the Atlantic Highlands Baptist church and from relatives and other friends. The casket was draped with an American flag.

The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were the four sons, William, Loren, Gilbert and Frank Fletcher, Jr.

London, June 30.—Six hundred delegates, representing 3,000,000 organized workers, met here today and passed a resolution asking the government to take steps to regulate the prices of food and fuel. The delegates said that prices had increased 50 per cent., owing largely to the rising freight and the greater cost of coal.

He Was Wrapped In a Mantle of Fire.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

What Happened To a Flying Trunk.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Anderson.]

DADDY took Jack and Evelyn on his lap and told them: "A young man once had a flying trunk and flew right into a princess' room. To please her and her parents he told a long story about some kitchen matches and the dishes on the shelf in the hope that the princess would marry him. He got along to the place where the dishes had a quarrel, and just then the kitchen door opened and in came a servant.

"The servant took the matches and struck a light. But they were so cross to be interrupted at their party that they sputtered and blazed like anything. 'Now, every one can see that we are the most aristocratic thing here! What a brilliant light we shed in the kitchen!' And then they burned out.

"'What a splendid story!' cried the princess's mother when the young man had finished his tale of the matches. 'Yes indeed, you may marry my daughter.' 'You shall marry her on Monday!' cried the king, who had laughed heartily at the quick end of the matches.

"So it was decided to make a holiday and light up the town. Buns and cakes were scattered among the poor, and street boys whistled through their fingers. 'I suppose I shall have to celebrate, too,' said the young man. So he bought a lot of fireworks, rockets and pinwheels and stars and, putting them in his trunk, flew up in the air with them.

"All the Turks jumped with delight, so that their slippers flew off. They had never seen shooting stars like that before. They said it must be the prophet who was going to marry the princess. When the young man came down in his trunk he walked about, listening to what the people said. 'I saw the prophet with my own eyes, and his eyes were like stars,' they were saying.

"'He was wrapped in a mantle of fire,' others were saying. 'He had a beard like foaming water,' said some more.

"Delighted to hear such happy things about himself, the young man began to prepare for his wedding. He went back to the woods where he had left his trunk, but where was it?

"He hunted all around in the dry leaves where he had left it on coming down from his fireworks in the sky. But a spark from them had set his wonderful trunk on fire, and it had burned to ashes. He could not fly any more to reach his bride. The poor princess stood on her roof waiting for her lover all her wedding day. She is waiting for him still, but he wanders around the world telling stories, only they are no longer as merry as the one he told about the matches in the kitchen," daddy finished.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ralph's Little Money Saving Scheme Is Successful.

It was late when Ralph finished the extra work that took him to the office in the evening, and when he reached his home the house was dark. He let himself in with his latch key and dropped into his chair to finish the cigar he was smoking. The subject of the dress to be worn to Mrs. Jaynes' reception again came into his mind. Business cares had crowded everything else out, but now he began to wonder what he could do to prevent Ethel from carrying out her intention of spending a lot of money in having a very pretty dress made over to wear. When he remembered the defiant tilt of the chin he could have no doubt that his objections made her the more determined to have her way. What could he do?

"If I could put the dress where she could not find it for several days it would then be too late to have the alterations made," he thought. The idea pleased him and he determined to try to put it into effect. When he entered her room Ethel was asleep or feigning to be so; he could not tell which. He slipped the dress in its pretty sheath out of the closet and hung it in the storeroom behind some boxes, then slid quietly into bed.

Several evenings later at the table she said: "I do not think you need worry about my having the silk dress made over; it has disappeared."

He looked at her searchingly. Was this a feeler or did she have an idea that he had hidden it.

"What would you do in that case, stay at home?" he asked.

"No, indeed," she replied promptly. "I may have to buy a ready-made one. I hate to do that. They can be spotted every time."

"You have probably mislaid it. You never know where anything is. Why not wear your white silk? This is a very pretty dress," he continued.

"It is far too long. That alone would announce to all informed persons that it was nearly a year old."

"It is too late to have the pink one made over, is it not?" There was hope in his tone. "If she says it is, I will put the thing back in the closet," he thought.

"Ralph Gordon, you know where that dress is. I suspected as much; now 'fess up.'" Ethel rose and ran around to her husband's chair, and sat herself down on the arm. He smiled up into the pretty face.

"I am not in the habit of hiding your clothes; why suspect me of this?" he asked.

"You look guilty. You are such a novice in little meannesses that you give yourself away." Ethel's face was sober now. "You did not want me to have the thing fixed and you have hidden it so that I could not do it."

"Well, what then?" Ralph decided to throw himself on the mercy of the enemy, especially as the enemy was uncommonly good-natured.

"Will you promise not to spend any money on it if I produce the dress?" he asked.

"Well, yes, as it is too late to have the alterations made that I planned, but I shall be on the lookout for your schemes next time." She pinched his ear and rose, saying, "Get the dress; I want to try it on."

Here's to a Safe and Sane Fourth

Insist on having a safe and sane Fourth for the children—no dangerous fire crackers, rockets or matches. Be equally particular that the youngsters eat only "safe and sane" ice cream.

This Fourth make it yourself in one of the famous Alaska Freezers. It is the open-spoon dasher in these freezers, whipping air into every particle of the cream, which makes ice cream frozen in Alaska Freezers so wonderfully delicate and smooth.

And, making it yourself, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that it is absolutely pure.

An Alaska Freezer will last a lifetime. But be sure it is an Alaska.

We also have on hand the White Mountain and North Star Freezers.

Raking 'Em Over

YOUNGSTERS OF TENNISDOM.

Special attention to the youngsters of tennisdom is showing results. In nearly every section of the country, boys still in school are learning the game with a higher degree of efficiency than veterans possessed a few years ago. Not long ago Benjamin M. Letson, the Long Island and Staten Island junior title-holder had his name in print frequently and a fine future for him was predicted. Now comes Harold Taylor, a young New Yorker, defeating Letson in straight sets in the Westchester Country Club tournament, Tuesday. Taylor seems to be more of a deep court player than one for smashing at the net. His long drives, nicely placed, defeated Letson. Letson, used to net work, was kept to the back of the court and thus on the defensive. Letson is not falling down on his game and may still be mentioned as one of the younger comers. Taylor is just another who is springing into the limelight.

THE AMATEUR TENNIS QUESTION.

The United States Lawn Tennis Association made no new laws governing the amateur question at its meeting last March, and as yet there is no clause in the association's code preventing players who engage in the sporting goods business from entering the various tournaments. But the association does bar "ineligible players" from competing in events run by it. No where is the word "professional" introduced. If a man enters the employ of a sporting goods house, he becomes an "ineligible." If he is lucky enough to get "fired" or quits, he is once more "eligible." Such is life.

JOE BURNS OUGHT TO LISTEN.

Valentine A. Fallon, esteemed sport writer of the Elizabeth Times, ought to use his influence to good advantage by requesting Joe Burns, manager of the Tabs, of Elizabeth, to open negotiations with Jim Scott, of the local Teetotalers. Scott is anxious to discuss a little matter of baseball with Mr. Burns and that gentleman simply must listen.

SUPERVISOR WRISTON'S NOTICE.

Everything is ready for the opening day of the Parker Field season. Supervisor Wriston is in readiness and the boys are anxious for the start. As a means of imparting to youth correct principles of physical culture and as a means of keeping younger and more adventuresome lads off the crowded streets, Parker Field and other playgrounds are unexcelled. It is to be hoped that Mr. Wriston will have a successful season.

ATHLETIC MEET IN THIS CITY.

It is not very likely that this city will have an athletic meet this year although one is needed very badly. It appears that the matter of expense is keeping those who are willing to start the ball rolling, from so doing. Over on the banks of the old Raritan, they have it all over us when it comes to arranging athletic meets—and we have a field that is twice as good as theirs. The city of New Brunswick gets considerable advertising in New York and suburban papers whenever a meet is staged in that city and, it is reported, that the city pays at least a little towards the holding of such meets. Now, Plainfield, which is ahead in everything else, ought to take this lead away from its neighbor.

RALPH RUNYON AS AN ATHLETE.

Ralph Runyon, formerly of Plainfield High School, is now a student in Penn State. Ralph is home for the summer months and has entered a meet to be held in New Brunswick on the Fourth of July. The local vaulter has made an enviable record at Penn State and while he is not yet senior collegiate champion, his friends hope to see him annex that title. If Ralph makes a good showing in the meet on the Fourth, he will be doing only what is expected of him.

JUST A TALK WITH "CAP" KYLE.

Before the Plainfield High School baseball team closed up shop for the year, the boys got together, as is their custom, to elect a captain for next year. Their choice fell upon Arthur Kyle. And that wasn't all that fell on him. His job is a "job" and not a "position." He realizes that he is going to have a tough task, but opposition is just the thing he likes. As far as hurling goes, Art cannot see many prospects. Much is said of Newell, but he hasn't met any "really" formidable teams. Sid Butler is always around, but there is slight chance of his being on the team, for reasons best known to him and which he could very easily correct. Wendell Hutcheroft will be on hand and should prove of service. Outside of that, Art cannot see anything to be joyful over.

JOE FRIEDMAN ALLOWS JUNIORS BUT ONE HIT

West End Juniors Lose Initial Clash With Hebrew A. C.

Having instituted a practice of playing at least one baseball game per day, Joe Friedman led his Hebrew A. C. boys against the West End Juniors yesterday and defeated that clan in a 4 to 2 battle. Joe, who did the twirling stunt in company with B. Epstein, was almost invincible, alowing only one lonely bingle. Symonds, the West End boxman, was not hit very heavily, allowing only six bingles. Feiring is credited with three errors which figured prominently in the scoring. Einstein and Friedman were, as usual, the whole "show." The score:

GAMES TOMORROW.

Netherwood vs. Dunellen. (Dunellen).

T. A. B. S. vs. Farmers. (Soccer Field).

Hopes vs. Baptists. (West End Field).

Another round in the City League will be staged at various places tomorrow. Quite a change in the order of the teams is looked for. There are three ties for second place and two ties for bottom rung. It is not likely that after tomorrow's contest any ties will exist.

In one of the conflicts the Netherwoods, league leaders, will meet the Dunellens, occupants of last place. While it is expected that the East Enders will annexf their eighth victory, the Dunellen following insists that some little surprise is in store for al of us. The Farmers and the Tabs get together for the first of a four-game series. The Farmers are not strong, but Eddie Conshay has proved that he is still some pitcher. This fact should make things interesting for Manager Jim Scott's boys. The Baptists and Hopes are carded to do battle and as it is said that Dick Schott is in excellent form, an exciting tussle can be expected. The Baptist are out to take a firmer grip on the second place position.

It is very probable that the following will be the opposing pitchers in the encounters on the morrow:

Denny (Tabs) vs. Conshay (Farmers).

Dunc Patterson (Baptists) vs. Dick Schott (Hopes).

Lou Slocum (Netherwood) vs. Warry McLaughlin (Dunellen).

WESTFIELD AGGREGATION MEETS ST. JOSEPH'S

The announcement that the St. Josephs would reorganize and play any team that cared to meet them, is followed by a statement that the Saints have agreed to battle with a team from Westfield on Hyde Field tomorrow afternoon. While the lineup of the Westfield team is not given, it is understood that that aggregation is a good one and consists of several high school players. For the locals Dan Denny will be on the firing line, with Andy McDonough in the trench.

MEET ON PARKER FIELD.

On Parker Field tomorrow afternoon "Midge" Kline's Plainfield Colored Giants will meet Vincent Mullin's Plainfield A. C.

MISS WILDEY WILL MEET MISS WAGNER

These Players Reach Finals in Women's Tourney at Sleepy Hollow.

Play in the women's invitation tennis tournament at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club advanced to the final round in both the singles and doubles yesterday. In the singles competition the victors were Miss Edna Wildey, of this city, and Miss Marie Wagner, and in the doubles the teams to attain final-round brackets were Mrs. Rawson Wood and Miss Marion Vanderhoef and Miss Ina Kissel and Miss Natalie Browning.

Miss aMrion Vanderhoef almost reached the final round in both events. In the singles her opponent was Miss Edna Wildey, of this city, and three sets were necessary before the decision favored the local woman. Though she lost, Miss Vanderhoef played some excellent tennis, but Miss Wildey displayed remarkable ability in covering court and returned shots that would have been good against a weaker opponent. The rallies were long sustained, each player sending the ball high and deep.

After each had gained a set, Miss Wildey started the third by running three games before Miss Vanderhoef could stop the attack. And when she did reverse conditions by taking the fourth game, the result was accomplished by a lifting drive that sent the ball out of reach of Miss Wildey ran out the set. The scores abandoned a little later, and Miss Wildey ran out the set. The scores were 6—3, 1—6, 6—3.

CLIFTONS DETERMINE TO TRIM LOCALS

Newarkers Have a "Rep" Which They Hope to Maintain Here.

The T. A. B. S. will start things early next Sunday when the East and West End sections of the society will "try" to play baseball. The antics of the members of each side generally provide enough trouble for a dozen umpires. Taken in all there is going to be some session.

In the main bill, the Cliftons, of Newark, will meet the T. A. B. S. The Cliftons have been in the habit of winning almost every game they play, but they will be lucky if they "almost" win this game. The Newarkers have met such teams as the Belleville Colored Giants and the Speedways. Both of these teams are considered formidable aggregations.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

This column is devoted, today, to the interests of the youthful baseball players of this city.

Let us begin with Joe Friedman, who has been doing some excellent pitching for the Hebrew lads. Joe is not what one would call a "Walter Johnson," but still he seems to be able to uncork those one and two-hit games. And as long as he is able to do this, he can get a job anywhere. Epstine, a teammate of Friedman, is also out after a record.

Joe Guinee has been hitting the ball of late. Joe's double the other day came just in time. A little thing like that, Joe, is deeply appreciated.

Barney Sacher wants to burst into the limelight again. Barney has been camping on our trail for several days. All that he wants is a little publicity. There is only two ways of getting publicity when you're only a "kid" and that is by either playing "hoosky" from school or through the columns of the sporting page. We are not saying in which way Barney prefers to gain his free advertising, but we are aware of the fact that there is no school these days. Hence, we assume that Barney Sachar has obtained his little "news" and in a way calculated to make him want for some more.

We know quite a few of these youngsters, but we do not know enough of them. Managers, who are looking out for the welfare of their teams, should drop us a line about their charges and in that way assure themselves of plenty of notice. If a boy does well he deserves a little credit. And this is the way to get it.

The Lenox A. C. is equipped with new suits and some of the fellows are wearing them continually. One lad put his on in less than two minutes after he had purchased it and he has it on yet. That's what we call devotion.

We would like to put Mr. Wriston in "solid" with the boys. Several youngsters have asked us to put their teams in the Parker Field League. In each case we referred the managers of these teams to Mr. Wriston, who has charge of the work at Parker Field. He will be glad to hear from anyone—large or small—who would like to play in the Parker Field League this summer. Get busy.

Little Davidson is a fast baseball player. His "big" brother Sammy gained fame—and, should we say fortune—over night as pitcher for the Red and Blue. Following in brother's footsteps should prove of value to the smaller lad.

SHACKAMAXSON OPENING.

The first nine holes of the Shackamaxson Golf Club in the Willow Grove section of the township will be thrown open to play on July the Fourth. There is still much to do before the club is entirely finished and it is probable that the other nine holes of the course will not be ready before cold weather. The club house, tennis courts and other features of the club are not ready as yet either, but work is being rapidly pushed and great interest is being manifested by probable members.

FANTASTIC SUMMER DANCE FROCKS

By Hester Winthrop

A Pruicet Frock of White and Silver has an Oddly Draped Skirt and the New Fitted Boned Basque

The Little Train of Callot that Drags Below the Short Skirt. Turquoise and Silver Brocade and Silver Lace

The Loveliest Summer Dance Frock is all Tulle Flounces with a Pale Blue Silk Bodice Mostly at the Front

Gold Leaves Fluttering on Yellow Tulle and a Paler Yellow Skirt of Satin Distended by Cordings

Lane

New French Frocks are Hooped at the Hips Only Pink Satin Silver Embroidered Chiffon and Pink Roses are Combined Here

Tulle of Spotless White, Pearls and Silver Lace Achieve the Ideal Summer Party Frock - Black Evening Gowns Particularly Distinguished - Party Petticoats With Hoops.

OF all costumes the dance frock lends itself most perfectly to flaring, billowy lines of the silhouette. So it is at the present moment that dance frocks are at their loveliest. There is positively no limit to the extent a dance frock may go in the way of flare; eight, ten, even fifteen yards it may measure around the hem, if one includes all the points petal edges and floating squares of fabric that often go to make up this season's skirt drapery. Yards and yards of tulle, pleated perhaps in overlapping flounces, are used for one skirt; many squares of chiffon, caught to the waistband by one point and floating loosely in filmy drapery, for another skirt. In each case there is a "drop" of net or tulle between the outer skirt and the foundation of silk so that the frock may have the airy, semi-transparent effect now desirable. Frequently the foundation itself is of diaphanous fabric, shirred over light hoops of featherbone tubing, a flounce of lace falling softly around the ankles and showing beneath the billowy outer skirt.

Visible Dancing Petticoats.

There is quite a fancy, in Paris, for skirts that are tucked up apparently, to reveal lace petticoats beneath. Of course the petticoat is really a foundation skirt edged with lace; and part of the frock itself, but the effect is the same. Flowered silks and voiles are used for these tucked up skirts which are panniered and puffed at the hip, or caught up with rosebuds at the knee, the lace "petticoat" beneath showing all around or in sections at either side. This effect is observable in the white and silver Priucet dance frock, though the skirt in this instance is tucked up at the hem instead of at knee or hip. This is really a very long skirt and would sweep the floor were it not caught up in festoons at six points, giving the edge a wavy outline. Under the skirt is a foundation skirt of net, distended with featherbone and finished with a flounce of point d'Alencon which shows, petticoat-wise in the dance. There is another important style feature in this Priucet frock; the tight-fitting, pointed bodice which extends below the waistband. Nothing is quite so smart just now as this close little evening bodice in combination with a flaring, fluttering skirt. The frock under consideration is all white with silver gleams—white taffeta with delicate silver thread embroidery. The skirt is gathered over the hips and at the back, and the gathers are so evenly distributed that they give the effect of tiny pleats. The square decolletage and absolute absence of sleeves are also fashionable features.

A dainty little dance frock just completed for Bar Harbor wear, has this fitted, pointed bodice with an 1830 decolletage—almost falling off at the shoulders. But the rounded out neck is partly filled in with a tulle tucker and little puffed tulle sleeves are set in the armholes. This 1830 bodice is of lilac taffeta and has no less than eight seams, each corded and each stayed with featherbone so that the little bodice fits like the paper on the wall. But the skirt—ah, that billows and flares if you please! Of lilac and white printed chiffon it is, tucked up below the hip with many little nosegays of purple flowers and distended drop petticoat of white net. This petticoat has a deep silver lace flounce which shows four inches of itself below the tucked up drapery. High-heeled dancing slippers of pale lilac glazed kid and silk stockings in the same shade will accompany this frock.

Kid Slippers Favored This Year.

Fashion is turning from satin dancing slippers to kid ones this summer and certainly the new slippers of soft, glazed kid, are a deal more comfortable than satin ones which never give real comfort unless one purchases them somewhat too large to fit the foot neatly. The glazed kid slipper clings to the foot like an eelskin and one is conscious of it no more than of the skin itself. Since one may obtain glazed kid dancing slippers in almost any shade desired—or even have them dyed to order—there is good reason for their popularity. Bronze dancing slippers and silver slippers come in for their share of popularity also. With an all-black evening frock the only possible slippers are of course black satin ones, or black patent leather models of distinct slipper form and not suggesting pumps.

Slippers and stockings are very conspicuous on the dancing floor just now because of the shortness of skirts, and though there is a decided tendency in Paris to lengthen skirts a little, the increased length has not yet reached the ankle. The pink satin and silver frock pictured today, a Doucet model, gives the correct length for dancing skirts in Paris at the moment. The turquoise and silver frock is about the same length. This frock is by Callot and one observes that Callot has not forgotten the inevitable little train that this house loves to add to even dance frocks. The longest skirt on today's page is the one made of tulle flounces, but perhaps this couturiere salved his conscience, after slipping away more than a conventional amount of bodice, by adding extra material to the skirt. In any case this is a very likable frock for dancing on a summer's night. The tulle flounces, mounted on a tulle skirt, with a hooped net foundation skirt beneath, should be light as a feather to dance in, and whatever else it is, the bodice should certainly prove cool! The rather daring decolletage, however, is only at the back, the surpliced fronts having a modest V cut. Each front, at the waistline appears to escape below a flat bow of blue velvet in a riot of cascade drapery which tumbles down the side of the tulle skirt. Did I mention that the bodice is of shimmering pale blue silk with little silver brocaded figures? Featherbone is inserted in the seams to give a trim-waisted effect at the front and under the arms. The almost bare simplicity of the sleeve cut is an interesting detail.

Silver Gleams Everywhere.

So much silver on evening costumes has a moonlight effect in a softly illumined room. There are silver laces, silver-embroidered nets and chiffons, silver brocaded silks, silver roses, silver tissues to slip beneath filmy fabrics and lend an indescribable shimmer and sheen. Two very lovely dance frocks with silver glints are pictured; the blue model with a train from the house of Callot Soeurs, and a delectable one is young, without tired lines about eyes or mouth. Navy blue tulle ruffs are usually very becoming in conjunction with costumes of the same color—but be very sure the colors are perfectly matched or the ruff may spoil everything. To women with white hair, navy blue neckruffs seem especially flattering. There are occasions upon which one may wear a green tulle neck ruff with impunity, but the rest of the costume must be strikingly chic—and preferably black—to warrant this daring. The same rule applies to neck ruffs of cerise, orange or other vivid shades. They are worn; but they are worn successfully only by a few women who know color values and who are able to dress dashingly without being bizarre. The average woman will wisely confine herself to a black or white neck ruff.

with a saucy farthingale hoop at the hip. This model, as has been said, is by Doucet. The petticoat of silver-embroidered pink chiffon falls over one of silver net and in the latter is the farthingale hoop, made of featherbone tubing run through shirred casings on each side of the skirt. The pannier drapery is of pink satin in ombre shadings, light to dark pink. At one side the drapery is caught up with pink satin carnations. The satin bodice is caught to a transparent yoke of flesh pink net which is outlined with pearl beads. Rather ingenious is the arrangement of circular satin bands at the waistline, which suggests the 1830 bodice, overlapping the skirt.

The turquoise and silver frock by Callot is even more lovely. Silver lace is generously used with the rich silver and turquoise brocaded satin and under the lace skirt is a shorter skirt of white chiffon. Note how the skirt draperies slope downward toward the back to blend with the line of the little train which is quite separate from the skirt itself, dragging from the waistline. This Callot frock has also, you perceive, the 1830 bodice, sloped off at the shoulders and boned at the point in front. Silver slippers and white silk stockings accompany this frock; glazed kid slippers in pale pink with stockings to match, the Doucet frock.

For a brown-eyed young woman, surely, is the gold and yellow dance frock which comes last on the list for description. This frock would be lovely, also, in pale blue and silver, or in pink and silver; but somehow in gold and pale yellow it seems to have a distinctive and unmatchable character. The skirt, of daffodil yellow taffeta, is distended by two rows of featherbone cording run into the silk at the foot. The girdle is of the daffodil taffeta and also the puff below the girdle—the latter drawn tightly and rather high about the waist to give the indispensable effect of trimness. From the girdle escape floating ends of gold net on which gold leaves drift carelessly. Over a bodice made of gold leaves, gold net is drawn up over the shoulders. An under bodice and the short sleeves are of pale daffodil tulle.

White Frocks With Pearls, Black Ones With Jet.

Both white dance frocks and black dance frocks are fashionable this summer—black ones particularly so, though perhaps this only appears to be the case, since one black evening frock stands out conspicuously in a room full of white or pastel colored frocks. Doucillet makes entrancingly lovely white frocks which are coveted by debutantes and dowager alike. For a debutante, however, is a little Doucillet frock of white tulle embroidered with pearls and outlined at hem and decolletage with pearls. The girdle is made of three strands of pearls. Underneath is a skirt of silver tissue and three pink rosebuds nestle in the corsage. Equally compelling a black Doucillet dance frock; the skirt and narrow, dragging train from the waist, of black satin, the bodice of white lace darned with black and silver threads. No sleeves at all has this gown but shoulder straps of jet beads continue in long loops that fall below the waist at front and back of the cos-

Sport Footwear Important

VERY gay are the new sport stockings in striped and checked patterns. The colors are bright, yet not too bright and the sporty stockings give just the right note in a well thought-out sport costume. Some of these stockings have drop-stitch stripes alternating with wider stripes in color on a ground of colored silk others are in checked pattern half way up the leg and above that plain. These fancy sport stockings are worn with high or low-laced sport shoes of tan calf or the soft, supple glazed kid or of white glazed kid with effective trimming of blue or green glazed kid. White canvas sport shoes are perfectly correct for tennis or yachting wear if one prefers them, but the elaborate sport costume of silk and silk jersey demands something more distinctive in footwear and the dainty-colored kid-trimmed shoes exactly meet this need.

BED-TIME DOLLS THAT STAY IN THE CRIB.

THE bed-time dolly has been a nursery institution from time immemorial. Its cuddled comfort at sleepy time induces many a rebellious youngster to settle down and await graciously the coming of the sandman. But most mothers know what it is to be disturbed, just as they are settling with relief to the evening's occupation downstairs, by the plaintive remonstrance from above: "My dolly's gone!" The most active bed-time doll cannot wriggle out of the ful youngster bent on getting mother or nurse back again by fair means or foul—if it is one of the new bed-time dolls, attached to a long loop of ribbon which is slipped around the child's neck. These dolls are made of soft kid and the printed color on the face and costume cannot be sucked off. Teddy bears are as much beloved as ever as bed-time comforters. New and also very lovable, however, are the white fox-terrier puppies imitating the famous phonograph dog who listens to "His Master's Voice."

A cape collar and ruff of black maline pleatings with a crisp ribbon

The Final Touch-- A Tulle Neck Ruff

AIRY trifles indeed are fluffy tulle neck fixings, but their value as a dress accessory is immeasurable. A 12-inch strip of pleated malines that weighs practically nothing in the hand, has a style value—around the throat—which can lift a whole costume to distinction. One wears one's second best tailored suit and a simple little hat; and is insignificant. Add a fresh, crisp tulle neck ruff and presto! one becomes distinctive and smart in the twinkling of an eye. To the neck ruff add a knowingly draped new veil, irreproachable new gloves and the last word in buttoned footwear of soft, glazed kid, with French heels; and one's costume will pass muster anywhere.

For some reason or other a neck ruff instantly imparts a suggestion of formality to the costume. It is not suitable for wear with a sport suit, or a linen morning frock, or rainy-day attire. It lends an aura of festivity and formality to its wearer and implies an occasion of a fete nature—a social nature. One would not, for instance, don an airy tulle neck ruff with a business costume if workaday affairs were the order of the moment.

These perishable bits of chic are sadly expensive in the shops, but the mere materials for the making do not cost excessively and a little patience combined with an imitative eye is all that is needed to evolve a very satisfactory neck fixing at home. The cape ruff will perhaps require more than a little patience, and a good deal of pleated malines must be purchased to make the rows of frilling, but when the ruff is finished one will have an accessory of incalculable value to lend distinction to summer tailleurs and frocks.

Colored neck ruffs are being worn this season as well as black ones and white ones, but the airy black ruff seems always the smartest, whatever the general color of the costume. Even with white costumes, black tulle neck ruffs are indescribably chic.

Taupe ruffs are very becoming to women with a good deal of color, but the gray tulle neck ruff is a dangerous proposition against the face unless one is young, without tired lines about eyes or mouth. Navy blue tulle ruffs are usually very becoming in conjunction with costumes of the same color—but be very sure the colors are perfectly matched or the ruff may spoil everything. To women with white hair, navy blue neckruffs seem especially flattering. There are occasions upon which one may wear a green tulle neck ruff with impunity, but the rest of the costume must be strikingly chic—and preferably black—to warrant this daring. The same rule applies to neck ruffs of cerise, orange or other vivid shades. They are worn; but they are worn successfully only by a few women who know color values and who are able to dress dashingly without being bizarre. The average woman will wisely confine herself to a black or white neck ruff.

A becoming affair of white tulle and black ribbon that clever fingers can build at home.

must have color next her face.

The size and shape of the ruff should be adjusted to the requirements of the wearer. A woman with a long, slender neck may wear as tall a ruff as she fancies, the short-necked woman must be more careful. Even a short neck can stand a high ruff if the shoulders are sloping. The woman with square, high shoulders, especially if her figure be not very tall, should leave fluffy neck frills alone for they will certainly cut off her height and give her a thick, clumsy appearance.

Black malines over white makes an attractive ruff for wear with a black and white striped tailored suit, as one in gunmetal tones. Gray over white is also a pleasing combination. The two strips of malines should be of equal length and breadth, both materials being taken up together in each pleat. First there is a pleating of black; next pleating of white (used double); then comes a narrow gathered strip of black (also double) and through this runs the twisted black satin ribbon which "stays" the ruff at the center. The ribbon is knotted into a bow at each end and under the bow the ruff fastens with a snap button, the two bows coming together to make one rosette which may be worn under one ear or even at the back.

Airy trifles these, but they add great distinction to the summer costume.

The foundation of every ruche of this sort is a light stiffening fabric which keeps the ruche crisply in position around the throat. A wire hoop of any kind should never be used in a tulle neck ruff.

The cape-ruff on the contrary, will be much smarter for an invisible featherbone brace at the back of the collar portion which must stand up to make a background for the face. One handsome model is made of black tulle, or malines, the cape portion cut in circular effect so that it ripples at the back. Narrow, pleated black tulle frills are sewed to this circular cape, across in rows, and all around the edge. The collar is made of the narrow pleatings overlapping each other. The collar ruff of white tulle, with black ribbon ties is an excellent model for a short-necked woman.

BRIDGE SETS FOR SUMMER NEEDLEWORK.

A WHITE linen bridge set of tablecloth and four napkins will be a delightfully easy and very acceptable gift for some friend next Christmas, and these sets are easy to fashion on the summer porch, requiring no close attention like involved crochet or knitting patterns. The table cover should be a yard square and the napkins about twelve inches square. Select a fine, firmly woven linen and finish all edged with a roll and whip, whipping the roll twice, in opposite directions to give a cross-stitch effect. Black and red is a smart combination for the whipped edge, or one may use one color—pale blue, raspberry pink or any preferred shade. In one corner of the cover put a little basket design in cross stitch or French knot effect, and a tiny basket to match on each of

A Little Chat About "Good-bye"

THE telephone "Hello" has fallen into disfavor because it is useless and meaningless. It is fast becoming obsolete.

The telephone "Good-bye," however, is well worth preserving, even in these days of economy and efficiency. It gives a personal, friendly touch to the business or social conversation that makes for better relations. The cheery "good-bye" is just as potent as the cordial "good-morning." Over the telephone it averts the feeling one sometimes has of being cut off abruptly.

Say "good-bye" over the telephone as if it were really a part of your conversation and not merely a regrettable habit of speech.

BOY SCOUTS PLAN BIG CELEBRATION

Varied Program Has Been Arranged by Scout Camp Director Parator.

Plans are under way to observe the Fourth of July in true scout fashion. The camp committee, with Edward Harding as chairman, are sparing no pains to make the affair a great success. There will be a scout rally at the camp, and scout stunts. The troops will come prepared for scout work and bring provisions for one meal. All scouts of Plainfield and officials will assemble at the First Baptist chuch promptly at 8:45 a. m., and the hike will start on the stroke of nine. On arrival at the camp the scouts wil be given a brief rest to inspect the camp and partake of their refreshments. There will be a short program at 10:30.

Mayor Leighton Calkins, while unable to attend, has sent a very cheering letter to camp officials. William D. Murray, of the National Council, B. S. A., will speak, as will one other scout official. Letters will be read from Sir Robert Baden Powell, and a short talk by one of the camp committee. After the exercises the scouts will be given an opportunity to show what they can do.

There will be water boiling, carrier climb, first aid, flag raid, signaling and pyramid building. The parents, friends and well wishers of the scouts are heartily invited.

The celebration will not interefere with the local affair. There are a few more scouts than can get in on the special rate of one dollar at the scout camp from Saturday dinner to Wednesday breakfast. The first to come will be the lucky boys.

THE hardest problem of the young housekeeper is the selection of the furniture for the new home. DO NOT choose your furniture because it "looks" attractive and is apparently lowly priced. MARTINE IS NOT WORRIED JUST NOW

Opposition to Him Fails to Agree on a Concerted Campaign.

Washington, June 30.—Neither word nor sign has come to the administration about the Democratic United States Senatorial contest in the President's own State. There have been conferences here and there and there has been much conversation about the policy of defeating Senator James E. Martine in the September primary, but so far as has been vouchsafed at this end, there appears to be even less agreement today than there was three months ago as to the organization of a concerted fight against Mr. Martine.

Since the St. Louis convention there has not been a New Jersey leader at the White House. The difficulty that would be experienced in getting the ear of the President perhaps explains the failure to indulge in what the President has called common counsel and the canvassing of opinion out of doors on the prospects of beating Mr. Martine.

The conferences that occurred previously to the convention left the question wide open, not because there was any lack of desire to discipline Mr. Martine, but because of the oblivious difficulty in getting a rival who could go into the primary with the assurance that he had the ability to lick the Farmer Orator.

If there was any belief or hope among the Democrats here that Attorney General John W. Westcott would fire the rank and file with enthusiasm to go out and wallop Martine and return Westcott as the party nominee, it is not discernible today. It is avowed that if Mr. Westcott was set up at St. Louis to renominate the President with any idea that it would forward his senatorial candidacy, the plan has not gotten very far. The renomination came and went and that is as much stir as it made. It is not believed that Mr. Westcott will be able to extract the Senator, and his friends that, on the present showing, Mr. Martine would have a walkaway, in the primary fight with Judge Westcott. The Frank McDermit candidacy is looked upon as one of the Newark barrister's subtle jokes.

Neither do the Senator's friends look for any opposition from Representative Thomas J. Scully. Although waiting for the announcement that the Congressman promised to issue after the national convention, it is their belief, based upon reliable information, that Mr. Scully will not make the contest, at least, not this year.

IF you patronize more than one bootblack you know there's a lot of difference in shines. Very often the difference lies not in the elbow grease of the bootblack but in the quality of the polish he uses.

It's the same way with furniture polish. Very few polishes are good enough to use on the finely enameled body of a motor car. Matchless Liquid Gloss is ideal for this purpose, because it contains nothing but the purest ingredients scientifically combined to give a maximum of cleaning and polishing efficiency.

FRAMING PICTURES.

The Art Reached Its Climax In Italy In the Sixteenth Century.

It is a significant sign of the unimportance accorded to picture frames that in attempting any research on the subject one can only discover an occasional notice of some individual frame among a mass of detail comprised under the generic title of "Frames," which ranges from chimney pieces, door furniture and girandoles down to the designs employed in book illustration, called by the French "cartouches."

Only in Italy was the art of picture framing a fine art, and the examples worth studying belong almost entirely to that country.

Picture frames are of comparatively modern origin, for during the long period of the middle ages such portable pictures as existed were inclosed in wooden cases with doors and had, consequently, no frames, while mirrors were not yet in existence. It was not till life became more settled and houses were considered in relation to peace as well as war that the custom began to prevail of placing pictures on walls. They start, therefore, in the fifteenth century and are at the height of their perfection in the sixteenth.

From the earliest times Italian artists knew that for a painting to be rightly appreciated it was necessary to inclose it in a kind of surrounding. They knew, too, that it could never be a matter of caprice what that particular surrounding should be, but that it must be chosen scientifically and with due regard to the effect of the painting on the spectator and of the whole as a work of art.

It is only necessary to study the fine examples that are still in existence from the best period of this art, which appears to have been exclusively Italian, to realize that neither chance nor fashion entered into it. On the contrary, it was the outcome of an instinctive aesthetic sentiment of feeling for the beautiful in conjunction with an almost scientific appreciation of what would enhance the intelligent understanding of the picture. Whether we look at them in their richness or their simplicity, we shall note that the structure of the frame was first carefully studied and adapted to its purpose of suitably inclosing the picture and that its subsequent enrichment, whether by modeling, gilding, painting or however, lost their native character, and coming under French influence became more and more debased until all sobriety of treatment disappeared.—Scribner's.

Measuring Your Pace.

How many steps do you take to the mile? Even if your considered reply be "Seventeen hundred and sixty," I shall take leave to doubt it. Should you be a British infantryman your pace will be the longest of any infantryman in the world. The Russians' pace is the shortest, being but twenty-seven and one-half inches; the French, Italian and Austrian pace is twenty-nine inches. Germans do thirty-one inches [illegible] tish soldiers stride an extra half in [illegible] But your own pace, what of it? It depends upon your height. Take your eyebrow height, halve it, and that represents your pace. You will find it to be somewhere between thirty inches and thirty-two inches, so that you will need between 2,000 and 2,100 paces to the mile.—London Chronicle.

Ancient Barber's Forfeits.

Customers of hair dressers at one time were in danger of having to pay a forfeit as well as their fee when entering the barber's shop. Until half a century ago some barbers still kept a list of rules hanging in their shops—chiefly concerning swearing, seeking to be served out of turn, etc.—the penalty for breaking which was the price of a pint of ale. The antiquity of the practice is evident by Shakespeare's allusion to it in "Measure For Measure:"

The strong statutes
Stand, like the forfeits in a barber's shop,
As much in mock as mark.

—London Standard.

A Grievous Burden.

"Just think!" exclaimed the humanitarian, "when a man enters prison he loses his identity and becomes simply a number."

"Well," replied the man in motor togs, "except for the fact that he is confined and has to do hard labor, I don't see that he is much worse off than I am. I not only have a number, but I'm compelled to pay for it."—Birmingham Herald.

A Statesman's Queer Ambition.

The great Lord Grey had an ambition far above politics. He passed the reform bill, but that did not satisfy his soul. There was talk of Taglioni, and Grey said quite earnestly, "What would I give to dance as well as she!" The statesman who had been prime minister and had left an indelible mark on the history of his country was envious of an opera dancer!—London Saturday Review.

Father Time.

Time waits for no man—he's goin' jes' a-skimmin', an' he'd never make the journey if he waited for the women. Don't stop for sigh or song—he's stronger than the strong; to gloom time or glory he's a-goin' right along! —Atlanta Constitution.

The Attraction.

She—So you are engaged to Miss Baggs. I'm sure I can't see anything attractive about that woman. He—Neither can I see it, but it's in the bank, all right.—Boston Transcript.

He lives in fame who died in virtue's cause.—Shakespeare.

THE PROBLEM OF THE NATIONAL CONVENTION SOLVED—BY TELEPHONE

Holding a national convention by telephone is an innovation recently made by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and its success was complete.

"Carty's Hall" as Dr. Finley, president of the University of the State of New York, called the United States thus linked by telephone lines, is in truth the truest designation of the place where the national meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers was held. We learn from The Telephone Review (N. Y.) that everyone present was provided with a telephone receiver. There were 5100 in attendance, at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Chicago, and San Francisco—the largest meeting geographically if not numerically ever held to transact the affairs of any organization.

A long stride forward in methods of parliamentary procedure was taken when Mr. J. J. Carty, president of the Institute, asked if there was any further business to come before the meeting, and three thousand miles away a man in San Francisco spoke up and offered a resolution to be passed by the Institute.

"You have all heard the resolution," said Mr. Carty. "Is the resolution seconded?"

It was seconded in Boston, amended in Philadelphia and New York, and then Mr. Carty spoke from New York. "Are you ready for the question on the resolution as amended? If you are all in favor say 'aye'; contrary minded 'no.'"

A chorus of "ayes" came from the five cities and the president pronounced the motion carried.

A telegram of congratulation from President Wilson was read, the results of the election of the new officers of the Institute were announced, and addresses made to the entire nation-wide audience by the new president, Mr. Harold W. Buck, Mr. C. le Maistre, delegate from London, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, Mr. Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and Mr. Thomas A. Watson, manufacturer of the first telephone.

All of the meeting was not held over the wire. In each section a local program took place during an interval between parts of the telephone program. The New York audience was addressed by Dr. John H. Finley, president of the University of the State of New York, and the Boston, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Chicago and San Francisco local programs included respectively addresses by Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard, Dr. Edgar F. Smith, provost of the University of Pennsylvania, Dean C. E. Ferris, engineering faculty, University of Tennessee, Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, president, University of Chicago, and Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president, Leland Stanford, Jr., University.

When the sections of the national meeting came together again after their local programs, each in turn sent its greetings to the others and then came a concert of patriotic songs—"Dixie" from Atlanta, "Yankee Doodle" from Boston, "America" from Chicago, "Hail, Columbia," from New York, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," from San Francisco, and from Philadelphia "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Thus there was all the variety and five times the interest of a prosaic, all-in-one-room program, and the era of national conventions by telephone was launched with flying colors.

Not only in the fact of its national scope geographically, was this meeting an essentially American and national affair, nor in the fact that the science of telephony whose triumphs it so vividly demonstrated is entirely American. The achievements of the members of the Institute in the four great fields of electrical communication, electric power, lighting, and transportation, are the results of the national characteristic—of our people and of our government—of freedom and the encouragement of individual initiative. Unhindered by Government or political levelers, the constructive genius of America, of which the American Institute of Electrical Engineers is a noble example, has risen to accomplishments unequaled in the world. As the result of this encouragement of private enterprise, America has to-day a body of scientists and engineers, a fabric of engineering achievement, such as no other nation can command, and the United States government has but to ask for these resources and they are placed at her disposal. Already the American Institute has placed some of its ablest members at the service of the Government, on the Naval Consulting Board, and is furnishing men to act on the committees to be appointed in every State for organizing the industries, to be made available to the national service in the event of any emergency.

TO BE NOBLE.

Most of our unhappiness in this life comes about because there is in us a scrap of the infinite that is not satisfied with finite things. There is a longing in the human heart to unfold into a better life. To do and to be noble is the deepest desire of every heart.—Dr. Henry van Dyke.

The Black Cap.

A small, limp piece of black cloth is, according to ancient custom, put on the top of the judge's wig in England before he passes sentence of death and is properly called the "sentence cap," or "black cap." Covering the head was a sign of mourning among the Israelites, Greeks, Romans and Anglo-Saxons and is referred to in Samuel ii. 15-30. Putting on the black cap is not a grim sign of revenge of the law, but is rather a token of sorrow, expressing the regret the judge feels at having to condemn the prisoner to death.

PLAINFIELD TROOP ERS ENROUTE TO BORDER BEING FED ON GOOD THINGS TO EAT ALONG THE WAY

Another Letter From Troop D Man Tells of Day's Trip Aboard the Texas Special—Mail Delayed Arrival of Second Day's Note to Friends Here—One Plainfielder Had a Run-in With Newark Rookies.

LETTER FROM TROOPER DELAYED.

The letter published below was mailed Wednesday afternoon from the Columbus and Norfolk Railroad Postoffice. Delay in the mail caused it to reach here a day late and as a result no news from the Plainfield troopers en route to Mexico was published yesterday.

On the way to Mexico, Wednesday afternoon, 5:15 o'clock.—Well, here goes for some more chatter about the trip. Everything is confusion, we are all excited and the hours seem but minutes. Weather is fine, all the boys are well and the horses are keeping in fine shape. We are being treated royally all along the line. You people back home can't imagine the kind of receptions we are getting even in the smallest towns. We are all spoiled and I guess Uncle Sam will have to send along some bigger hats when we land in Texas.

We were held up for about five minutes in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards en route. There were about 100 locomotives in the yards when as soon as the engineers spied us pulling in there was a man in every engine cab. They tooted their whistles and rang the bells. The noise was terrific. You must have heard it back in Plainfield. They had printed in white-wash letters on the big railroad office building these words: "God Bless You."

Our next stop was Harrisburg and right here I must attempt to describe the heart rending scenes along the tracks. Men, women and children fought for first row places at the depots and between stations on the tracks. Old women, barely able to totter along, were especially conspicuous and it almost made us cry. They waved their aprons and flags and tears streamed down their faces. The spirit is the greatest we have ever experienced. It is almost as good as that shown the day we left Plainfield.

At Harrisburg we were fed sandwiches, fruit and coffee and we were all provided with tobacco by the Women's Preparedness League of that town. More than 3,000 people were at the depot. The gallant Seventh Regiment, of New York, pulled in at the same time we did. Last night we spent a good night sleeping, for the Lord knows we certainly needed it.

Our next stop was at the Pittsburg Stockyards, where we fed our stock. We got out of the train at Pittsburgh and one of the Plainfield fellows asked a Newark boy to loan him his eating kit so that we could get something to eat. The Newarker was a rookie and refused. It made us so sore we nearly cried. We went around looking for Captain Kyle, but could not find him. When the Plainfield boy who had been insulted ran into the first sergeant in his hunt for Kyle he told him that the Newark troop wasn't fit to represent Uncle Sam (only in a few stronger words). Us Plainfielders had had nothing to eat since we were fed by Troop D at Sea Girt Monday night, outside of that given us along the tracks. The officer wanted to know where the Plainfield eating kits were and we told him that none had been issued to us. He said to borrow some, and believe me, we certainly let loose on him. We told him unless they gave us something to eat we'd cut loose and go back to Sea Girt to join Troop D, where we would be fed.

At that minute Captain Kyle came up and you should have heard him laying out that sergeant and the fresh rookies who thought they knew it all. He made them give the Plainfield bunch everything they had and declared the train would not move another inch until we had been provided for properly. And it didn't either. But we have paid up for all we lost today and that is a closed incident now.

The women of Pittsburgh also turned out with sandwiches, coffee, cigarettes and stogies. Carnegie, Pa., was next and more eats. Then came Dennison, Steubenville and Fort Newark, Ohio.

At Steubenville, Ohio, a little youngster, two years old, in his father's arms, was lifted up to me at the car window and gave me a flag. His name is Ralston Elliott and he lives at 509 Washington street. I told him I would have a copy of the Daily Press sent to him and that some of my friends back home would send him picture postals. Take care of it for me, will you?

All in the first section were inoculated yesterday. We have not felt any ill effects as yet. The Plainfield bunch sends its regards and says if you don't send the Daily Press along we will shoot you when we get back to Plainfield.

Give our regards to Troop D and tell them we are planning to join them when they get to Mexico. That's all for today.

MILITIAMEN ARE TO HAVE A VOTE

Secretary Martin Will Send Them Blanks Before the Primaries.

Trenton, June 30.—Based upon the procedure folowed during the Spanish-American War, Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin is already making preparations to carry out the provisions of the general election law authorizing soldiers in actual military service of the State or the United States to vote at the coming primary and general elections.

In carrying out his plan, the Secretary of State will prepare the blank forms and envelopes required for the purpose and will cause them to be forwarded to the several regiments from this State which may be called into service, and to hospitals, posts and naval stations where Jersey troops may be qaurtered, in sufficient quantities to furnish one complete set to each soldier, sailor or marine from this State.

Although the procedure prescribed for the voting of absent soldiers is not in harmony with later election laws, Secretary of State Martin believes that inasmuch as it is based upon a constitutional provision guaranteeing the right of suffrage to those absent in the military service of their country, there can be no serious question as to the effectiveness of the law as it now stands. During the Spanish-American War the New Jersey troops, then absent from the State, as well as the regular army regiments in which Jerseymen had enlisted, were pretty thoroughly canvassed in behalf of the gubernatorial and other candidates for office.

NEW JERSEY CENTRAL IS CO-OPERATING WITH GOV'T

The New Jersey Central management is co-operating with the Government to the fullest extent in the Mexican situation and will furnish equipment to move troops to the extent of its ability. This may cause a shortage of day coaches on some of the company's trains for a little while and the company asks the public to be patient during the time that such a condition prevails.

TOBACCO COMPANY TO PAY MEN IN MILITIA

The American Tobacco Company is among the many big firms that will pay salaries to all employes who go to the border. This information was given out in the following letter from the president to heads of all departments:

"It is our earnest desire that all of our employes who belong to military organizations affected by the orders of the President, the Secretary of War and the Governors of their respective States, with reference to the mobilization of troops on account of the Mexican situation, respond to such orders.

"We desire all such employes in making that response to have the assurance, in the first place that upon their return the positions they left will be waiting for them, and in the second place that full salaries will be paid during their absence from their employment on account of this, their performance of their patriotic duty. Please let all employes affected know of your receipt of this communication, and get from them directions as to how payment shall be made of their wages or salary during their absence in the performance of this, their country's service."

SADLER'S PLACE ALL IMPORTANT

General and His Dog Most Conspicuous, Yet Most Unassuming, at Sea Girt.

RIGHT MAN FOR THE JOB

Has Commanded Mobilization Work With An Iron Hand—Knows His Business and is Well Able to Handle Situation.

(By L. R. F., Staff Correspondent).

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, June 30.—Occasional visitors to the camp often ask friends in the National Guard who "that tall man is who seems to walk around the field with plenty of time on his hands, carrying a riding crop and followed by a lively airedale terrier?" Little do they realize that this is the man upon whom the great success of the handling of the New Jersey troops has been dependent ever since the Guard was called out, and that in spite of his easy-going methods, he really never stops work. It is none other than Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., selected from private life eight years ago, and now declared by men who originally opposed him for the office to be a success. There is not a word of criticism to be heard about the "A. G.," as he is unofficially and affectionately known to everyone who comes in contact with him.

General Sadler in this crisis seems to have placed himself in the happy position of being two jumps ahead of the government in everything. Two years ago he foresaw the possibility of calling out troops, when the trouble was on at Vera Cruz, and he had arangements made for the use of a farm to accommodate a much larger body of militia than can be placed on the regular State camp ground. He had all arrangements completed for instantly laying a water supply system, even to the purchase of the pipe, and contracting with the men to lay it on short notice.

Then when the call came he arranged things so that the troops were brought into camp with the least possible confusion and found the grounds all ready for them, even to having the grass cut and away from the reservation in forty-eight hours. This was a big task in itself and Superintendent of Grounds Cramer had about seventy-five men at work with every available piece of farm machinery he could procure. The State gave the grass away to anyone who would come for it, in order to move it quickly, and the people from the countryside came with every sort of vehicle to carry it away and dry it on their home fields. One man took several lots in a big basket tied on the front of his bicycle.

Every time the newspaper men go to General Sadler for information they find that all possible arrangements had been completed for various details. And there were cases where it would have given satisfaction to some to show that the "A. G." had fallen down.

In all the trying days of the past week, there has apparently never been a time when General Sadler was not on hand attending to business. When he slept from Wednesday until Tuesday night last no one knows, and yet outside of a slightly wrinkled brow, there has been no indication that he was not enjoying life in his usual normal manner. Only once has anyone seen him angry, and that was when a newspaper printed a story about the movement of troops which had no basis in fact, and brought hundreds of relatives of the men rushing to camp to bid them farewell when it was unnecessary.

Every time anyone wants to know anything about the camp, except regarding the quartermasters' and commissary departments, they are told to "see Sadler," and he always seems to be within a few feet of his headquarters at all hours of the day. In fact he is never out of sight, except at meal times, even long enough to change his clothes. And it is no unusual thing to have people interrupt him a dozen times while eating. Even at such times there is always a ready and courteous answer waiting for every question that is put.

Ask any officer in the camp what he thinks of the way in which General Sadler has handled his end of the gigantic task which he tackled last week Monday, and the answer is always one of praise. The only criticism that has been heard about him is that his dog bit a reporter, and that was the reporter's own fault.

MANY PLAINFIELDERS VISIT STATE CAMP

RIFLE RANGE ONE OF THE BUSIEST PLACES IN STATE CAMP SINCE MOBILIZATION WORK STARTED

Many Men Have Qualified as Marksmen—Surgeons Examining Men—War Department Correspondent Kept at Desk From Morning Until Night—Cavalry Organizations That Leave Tomorrow Have No Regular Surgeon.

(By L. R. F., Staff Correspondent).

Camp Fielder, Sea Girt, June 30.—One of the busiest places on the State grounds since the troops arrived here a week ago has been the rifle range. With all the other activities few people have realized the work that has been done by Inspector General of Rifle Practice Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, and his two assistants, Lieutenant Colonels William Libbey and David M. Flynn, of Princeton. The officers have been much pleased by the splendid work that has been done at the ranges by the rookies, for they have been given exclusive use of them since the camp opend.

Up to the present time about twenty of the new men from the First Regiment of Newark, twenty-five from the Fifth Regiment of Paterson, and twenty or more from the Fourth Regiment of Jersey City, have qualified as marksmen. In order to give them the best possible practice at the ranges, a special qualifications program has been mapped out on the 200-yard range. Each man to qualify must fire seventy shots, ten each in seven different positions at the butts. He is permitted to have an experienced man from his company as a coach, and to instruct him in the use of the rifle. The total possible score for seventy shots is 350 and a score of 225 is required to qualify as a marksman.

Colonel Austen Colgate, of the Adjutant General's department, has made it possible for these men to go away from Sea Girt with their marksmen's badges. The department had a requisition in for these to be supplied later in the summer, when it was expected the regular practice would be held, and red tape made it impossible to hasten this shipment. When General Spencer told Colonel Colgate of this he told the General to order the badges and he would pay the bill. A Newark firm was found that could supply them at once, and every man who qualified went to the border with his medal pinned to his coat. Troop D men have had no opportunity to shoot. Four hundred to five hundred men go to the ranges each day.

Colonel William Gray Schauffler, Surgeon General of the State, received word yesterday that for the present he is not to go to the border, and may not go at all if a volunteer army is called. His department has been one of the most active of all those here, and there has not been a minute when Dr. Schauffler and his assistants were not busy, even including the evening hours. In view of the fact that Colonel Schauffler will not go with his troops, the senior New Jersey medical officer in Texas will be Major J. Talmage Wyckoff of Leonia.

Upon Colonel Schauffler and his assistants has fallen the work of keeping the camp sanitary, and to their credit there has not been a single case of sickness that has developed from any cause within the camp. One or two men have eaten things that did not agree with them when on leave, at nearby resorts, and have been in the hospitals, but the health of the commands on the whole has been better than when they have come down in the past for the regular summer encampments. The actual work of inspecting for sanitation has fallen upon Major Valentine Ruch, of Englewood, who has devoted all his time since his arrival to watching the kitchens, latrines and stables. Incidentally, with all the horses that have been received only four have died since the camp opened, and this was due to trouble incurred before they were shipped into Sea Girt.

The vaccination squad has been in charge of Lieutenant Elias M. Duffield, of Glassboro, assisted by three medical officers and two surgeons from the medical reserve corps.

Four surgeons from the State Guard and one regular army surgeon do the examining of the men. With the mounted organizations this work was found necessary to speed the work so that the Fifth Regiment would be ready to go this morning, the men were taken into the stable yard, stood in rows and stripped. The four State surgeons went over each man for noticeable defects, and the regular army surgeon followed them up and finally passed or rejected in each case. In this way four full companies and a supply company were passed yesterday afternoon in two and a half hours.

Colonel Schauffler, who has to attend to all the correspondence with the War Department and answer thousands of questions each day is constantly confined to his desk from early in the morning until late hours at night. He has before him a schedule, laid out each morning, of exactly what each medical officer is to do, and at any time can answer immediately where that officer is to be found.

The cavalry organizations which leave tomorrow have no regular surgeon, the squadron lieutenant having gone on with the two troops which left here Tuesday, and to fill the vacancy, it has been arranged to have First Lieutenant Thomas E. Lewis, of Camden, go with the two troops which depart on Saturday. Dr. Lewis, who comes from Camden, will be held at the border in anticipation of his regular command, the Third Regiment, coming there later. An effort was made to have a civilian doctor go with these commands, but it was found that the government would not pay his return fare, so the staff remaining here will have to be depleted by one man.

The troops to leave tomorrow are fully equipped now, except that the horses had not arrived at noon today. These were expected to leave Englewood yesterday, but late in the afternoon it was learned at the Quartermaster's Department that the shipment would probably not get off before this morning.

General Sadler, in an interview with the newspaper men last night, said that whether the horses came or not the troops would positively move out tomorrow, and that Sea Girt would be deserted indifinitely by night, as no orders regarding the Second or Third Regiments had as yet been issued. He said:

"I have just had Governor's Island on the long distance 'phone, and they are very anxious that we move everything on time that is scheduled to go out this week. Every bit of equipment is here except the horses and saddles, and the latter were shipped from the arsenal at Rock Island, Illinois, and should arrive tomorrow morning. While the horses have not been shipped, I have learned from Englewood that inspection has been completed on all that are needed, and these will be here tomorrow if a special fast freight can get them to Sea Girt. The mules for transport service will be delivered to the various commands at St. Louis, thus saving considerable haulage expense. They can also be bought at St. Louis cheaper than they can here.

"I feel confident that the Fifth Regiment will make rapid time to the border. They are infinitely better prepared for the trip than were the organizations which went out on Monday, although those boys had everything we could think of for their comfort. All of the equipment and horses for this mommand were loaded this afternoon, and the kitchen car has been fully prepared, so that there need be no delay at any point for feeding the men. The rations for a full five days are all on board the train, and the men will march out and go direct into the passenger cars before nine in the morning."

The men and officers of the regiment expect to make a record run to El Paso. The train is routed over the quickest possible line, and may run through in three and a half days. They expect to make Pittsburgh before night, and from there will go direct to St. Louis on a special express train schedule. Here the Pennsylvania will deliver the trains to the Wabash, which will haul them to Kansas City, where the Santa Fe road will take them to their destination.

All of the heavy baggage for the Fourth Regiment was placed on the cars late yesterday, so that this morning all that remained to be done was to put the horses in the cars and get the men entrained. The work of breaking camp began immediately after the noon mess, and the big tents were soon down and rolled in neat bundles for the wagons. All the heavy equipment was also placed in the wagons, and all that remained this morning were the necessary kitchen equipments for getting breakfast which was served at 6:30. Last night the men put up their little "dog" or shelter tents, sleeping two in a tent, and it was only the work of a few minutes to get these down, taken apart, and wrapped around the kits to be placed on the men's backs.

General Edward W. Hine was given his physical examination yesterday afternoon, and passed one of the best tests of any of the officers that have been before the surgeons. It was learned yesterday that General Hine will only take his adjutant, Major Alexander P. Gray, and his two personal aides, Lieutenants Harry V. D. Moore and J. Vincent Hincheliffe. All the other members of the brigade staff will have to remain behind, as the regular army does not provide for these officers.

Helping the Illusion.

The young lady from town was spending a week end in the country, and she discoursed glowingly to the buxom landlady of the rustic inn on the delight that real country butter and real new laid eggs gave to a jaded Londoner.

Her faith in country produce was destined, however, to be rudely shaken, for, on coming down to breakfast next morning, she was greatly shocked to overhear the good landlady say to her spouse:

"The lady from Lunnon's mighty keen on fresh eggs, John. Run and get half a dozen from the grocer's while I go out in the yard and cackle."—London Answers.

SEVENTY-ONE CO. K TAKE SERVICE OATH

Colonel Wm. B. Martin Administered it in Local Armory Last Night.

Seventy-one members of Company K took the oath last night when Colonel William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, commanding officer of the Third Regiment, to which the local company belongs, visited the armory. From what could be gathered from Colonel Martin, there is every indication that the Second and Third Regiments will leave direct for the Mexican border if each company can muster at least sixty men.

From Sea Girt last evening came a report stating that New Jersey's troops are all going to the Mexican border as fast as they can be gotten together. The Second, of Trenton, and the Third, of Camden, this report stated, are to be shipped south directly from their armories. This is contrary, however, to information received last evening following the return of Colonel Horace M. Reading, commanding the Second Regiment, from Sea Girt, which was to the effect that the Second would leave for Sea Girt just as soon as the regiments now there entrain for the border.

Officers learned that the regiments will possibly leave for the Sea Girt camp on Saturday, if the Fifth Regiment, which has been ordered to tear down its camp and sleep in their half-shelters tomorrow night, can get away the following Monday or Tuesday.

The local armory will be open every night until the company leaves and probably longer for the purpose of recruiting the company to full war strength if possible.

The Second Regiment has received 380 recruits and all companies are about peace strength.

TROOP D SECURE FIVE NEW RECRUITS

Adjutant-General Sadler Orders All Cavalrymen to Report at Sea Girt.

Orders were received this morning at Troop D headquarters on Putnam avenue from Adjutant General Sadler ordering that the recruiting station be closed at once and for all members of the troop to report at Sea Girt, Sergeant Wardlaw, who has been in charge of the recruiting, left on the 8:12 for the mobilization camp with five new men who had enlisted since yesterday. They were Rober J. Murphy, Jr., Wells H. Creger, William Hall, William T. Hand and William T. James, all of this city, and Richard H. Hardy, of Scotch Plains.

The gap in the troop left by the transferring of ten men to Troop C has now been practically filled up and the troop musters close to one hundred men. Since the local boys left for Sea Girt two weeks ago the number had increased from seventy-three by enlistments at the headquarters, and with everyone in excellent health and fine spirits they are waiting for the order to start for the front, which is expected tomorrow morning. Besides the local troop, Captain Albert Borden will command Troop A, of Red Bank, when the start for the border is made.

A NEW SCIENCE.

"To tell the story of the marvelous development of the art of telephony here in America, the country of its birth, is to narrate the rise and development of an entirely new science—that of telephone engineering." In The Telephone Review (N. Y.), we read these words of Dr. Harry F. Keller, of the Franklin Institute, in regard to one of the most phenomenal achievements of the age. The Institute recently awarded to Mr. J. J. Carty, chief engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the Franklin Medal and to the company itself the Elliott Cresson medal in recognition of the great scientific achievements of the telephone men who are responsible for the unprecedented development of telephone communication.

A new science it is—sprung from nothing, to one of the greatest forces of civilization, one of the miracles of all time, in the brief space of forty years. And as such the Franklin Institute recognized it, bestowing upon Mr. Carty the medal which is given "to those workers in physical science or technology without regard to country, * * * whose efforts have done most to advance a knowledge of physical science or its applications," and upon the corporation of which he is chief engineer the "recognition of its constructive and far-seeing policy in the development of the art of telephony; in the promotion of telephone engineering; in the establishment of its telephone system in every part of the United States and for placing all of the states of the Union in speaking communication." The science, so new and so remarkable in the place it has made for itself in the life of the nation was thus honored as the highest attainment of applied science now before the world.

The Institute in making this recognition explains in a measure the facts that prompt its action. The words bring home to the American people the import of one great product of that national characteristic of democracy—individual endeavor which, crowned with stupendous success, is found to be not an individual benefit only, but a national asset.

Of Mr. Carty, the man who figures most prominently in the history of telephone engineering development, Dr. Keller gave a sketch which is striking in the example it gives of Americanism at work in character and in business. Mr. Keller said:

"The dominating figure in the story is that of him who is now Chief Engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. * * * In 1887 he was appointed to the position he occupies today. * * * He thus became responsible for all the engineering work, both of plant and traffic, of the great Bell System, and all the great developments that have since been carried to a successful conclusion were made under his direction.

"Among these is the longest underground telephone cable in the world, connecting Boston, New York and Washington. Until 1912 the steady improvement of the lines and apparatus permitted the extension of the service to Denver, Colo., a distance of 2,100 miles from New York City. Three years later * * * the dedication to the use of the public of the completed transcontinental telephone circuits from San Francisco to New York and Boston, was held. * * *

"With achievements such as these it might be supposed that even the most ambitious of mortals would be content to rest upon his laurels. Not so with our medallist. On the heels of the completion of the transcontinental telephone circuits came the announcement that this wizard had accomplished and demonstrated what only a few years ago the wildest flights of the scientific imagination would scarcely have suggested as possible. I refer to the transmission of the speaking voice by a wireless telephone to places outside and far beyond the network of the Bell System. This epoch-making achievement, supplementing as it does the wire service, is now well under way to bring the ultimate goal of telephony—the establishment of a universal system.

"Such, Mr. President, are the services for the benefit of mankind which the master mind of the telephone art has rendered as the results of a lifetime of indefatigable labor, guided by a scientific imagination of the highest order. But a few years ago his name was comparatively unknown outside of his profession, to-day it is one to conjure with in every quarter of the globe."

In conferring the other medal, Dr. Keller spoke thus of the company which, has made possible these great achievements of telephony:

"In awarding the Franklin medal to Dr. John J. Carty, the Franklin Institute is fully aware that the marvelous achievements of this pioneer and leader in the science of telephone engineering are shared in a large measure by the corporation of which he is the chief engineer, by the men who have developed and directed this vast business enterprise and made the Bell System what it is to-day, and by that wonderfully efficient technical staff which he has created and trained. * * * We can only marvel at the vastness of this system of communication which reaches every part of our country, and triumphantly proclaims man's conquest over space and time. With a feeling akin to awe we think of the man [Mr. Theo. N. Vail] whose prophetic vision, unerring judgment, and matchless executive ability have guided the forces which have wrought this wondrous evolution. * * * In spite of innumerable obstacles he succeeded in developing the new invention of Alexander Graham Bell into a commercial success, and he soon realized that it had possibilities far beyond mere local service. From his first achievement in long-distance telephony—the line connecting Boston and Providence—his dominant spirit has continued to secure improvements in telephone material and construction until to-day the lines span the distance from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast. As president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company he has effected the financial and technical organization of this vast corporation, and nothing could be more appropriate on this occasion than his receiving the Elliott Cresson medal awarded to his company."

This acknowledgment on the part of the Franklin Institute of the high significance of this new science of telephone engineering calls attention to what we take too casually, as a people—the efficacy of American brains at work under American ideals of business.

Gasoline Mileage.

"Every car has a normal mileage per gallon of gasoline," says C. H. Claudy in the Woman's Home Companion, "when properly adjusted and driven. This varies with the car, the type of carburetor and its adjustment. To find your mileage set the trip speedometer dial to zero when you fill your gasoline tank. Next time note the gallons put in and divide the trip mileage by the gallons. Doing this two or three times will give you certain information of your mileage. Then tell the repair man your story and let him cut down the gasoline feed in your carburetor, showing you how he does it."

No Wedding Rings Here.

In many parts of the world women do not wear wedding rings, but they have other signs which unmistakably show that they are married:

Hindu women paint a vertical red mark in the middle of their foreheads and wear peculiarly shaped bangles.

In Japan married women black their teeth with a dye made from popples.

In most of the native tribes of South Africa a horn ring encircles the topknot of the married woman. Among these tribes unmarried women wear no rings, wives wear one, and mothers wear two.

Moorish women arrange their veils in a particular way after marriage.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

HAND'S EXPRESS CO.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

MEN'S SHOES

We are showing our men customers some mighty attractive new low shoes this season, but the Values are even more attractive.

The same good leathers and workmanship as usual with hardly a price-change despite the scarcity and "war prices" of materials. How long we can continue to keep prices down is problematical, so we say buy now---and for next year. Our thirty years' history has given men confidence in this store.

Got a Perfectly Good Camera That You Don't Use Any More?

One of the ways in which want ads can be useful to you is in selling, for fair prices in cash, any "second hand" articles you own. They must be good, of course—and priced so that the buyers secure bargains. You can sell any article of furniture, any piece of machinery—anything that still has usefulness for the man who has use for it—through want advertising.
